Alois Frey, of Crown Point, Ind., gave an interesting account of the new colored freesias, excellent blooms of which were displayed before the club, together with a fine assortment of sweet peas from the Poehlmann Bros. Co. At the close of the proceedings luncheon was served and there were many renewals of old-time friendships, the participants dispersing at a late hour after one of the most profitable and enjoyable evenings in the history of the club, some taking a late train for the State Florists' Association meeting, which opened at Urbana the following day.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—The Indiana State Horticultural Society, through M. W. Richards, secretary-treasurer, has sent out an appeal to its members for help in defeating senate bill No. 360, introduced by Senator Fleming, of Portland, Ind. The bill seeks to make the office of state entomologist a division of the state department of geology and to reduce the annual appropriation to $1,500.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Samuel Murray, referring to trade conditions for February, reports local business on the whole as very satisfactory. Orders were not as large as during the corresponding period in 1914, but this was expected. Excellent stock has been the rule and good prices have ruled. Pot plants have enjoyed a splendid demand. Single violets, of quality unexcelled in the United States, are being received, but the demand is heavy and far exceeds the supply. Cattleyas are being cut daily, and some fine sprays of oncidium have been seen here. The total sales for the month were considerably augmented by a splendid St. Valentine's day trade, cut flowers and plants for that day showing an increase in popularity. Fine Darwin tulips, grand in color, were features with him for that day and found ready sale at good prices.

INCREASING SUPPLY CAUSES SURPLUS.

The market has been draggy the past week, there appearing very little life until the last, when it wound up with a rush, owing to some important funerals and a better general demand for all kinds of spring flowers. The supply is rapidly increasing, compelling the retailers to hustle to prevent a dangerous surplus. Some of the wholesale houses have found a way out by consigning their surplus, or whatever is demanded, to department stores, who buy at "surplus" prices and are given credit for unsold stock, which is returnable at the close of the day. To compete with department store methods and opportunities is a task that most retail men are not equal to—it is easy to say that such competition has no effect on the regular store trade, but, when large, showy ads appear, offering choice stock at prices little or none above those the retailers have to pay, the prospects for the small dealer are not very rosy. American Beauty roses are becoming more plentiful, and from now on will be a factor, as when they can be sold for a moderate price, they are generally the first choice. Some splendid Richmonds have been seen the past week; in fact, all the roses are now at their best. Carnations are more plentiful, with lower prices, and the stock is fine, although the "stapled" bunches are much in evidence. There is a full supply of both double and single violets; also, plenty of lily of the valley, cattleyas and gardenias, all of which are offered at low prices. Orchid peas are offered in quantity and the quality is fine.

CLUB MEETING.

Tuesday evening was carnation night at the florist club. There were a number of vases of the newer sorts, all fine flowers; also a new rose from John Cook, of Baltimore, and a display of Darwin tulips. E. A. Harvey, of Brandywine Summit, read a very interesting paper on "Will the Carnation Come Back?" which was well received. The attendance was very large, A. M. Herr piloting twenty members of the Lancaster Florists' Club, who, after visiting prominent carnations growers in this vicinity, called to see the exhibits at the club, but could not stay to the meeting. Henry A. Dreer offered a fine bowling prize as an encouragement to this pastime, conditional that it must be won by games played on the club alleys.

NOTES.

Henry A. Dreer is having a great run on hardy phlox. The stock is very large and varied, which, together with a special 20 per cent discount at this time has things moving. The spring shipping trade has started with a rush, many orders being received from the south.

Stuart H. Miller has opened his new wholesale house at 1618 Ranstead street. The store is ideal in every respect, being very light, convenient in its appointments, and in an ideal location, being in the center of the wholesale district.

Signs that Easter is approaching are seen in the increasing list of blooming stock that is offered, azaleas, genistas, wistarias, daisies, cinerarias, primulas, and all kinds of bulbous stock, in pots and pans, being in the market the past week.

The W. Atlee Burpee Co. is preparing for a record-breaking business; the European trouble giving them a better market for home-grown seeds, of which it is one of the largest producers in this country.

The M. Rice Co. presents its business to their customers frequently, Uncle Sam very obligingly carrying their elaborate brochures and booklets, of which their present Easter portfolio is a fine example.

American Beauty roses and Spencer peas are leaders with the Niessen Co. Snapdragons and high-grade carnations are also seen in large quantities. Emperor and Golden Spur daffodils are very plentiful.

Charles H. Grakelow is to address the Lancaster Florists' Club on "Business" March 18. The Lancaster boys have a great treat in store for them, for Charlie "makes good" wherever he goes.

The Joseph Heacock Co. is cutting some of the choicest Richmond roses that have ever come to this market. Their Killarneys, both white and pink, also grade high.

Roses, calla lilies and daffodils are leaders with the Berger Brothers. Orchid peas and extra fine lily of the valley are also handled in quantity.

Albany, N. Y.

Among the recent appointments following the inauguration of Governor Whitman, is that of Frank M. Briare as gardener at the executive mansion on Eagle street. Fenton Fennell of Cohoes, formerly a florist, has been named assistant to Mr. Briare. To Albanians, Mr. Briare is well known for his long connection with the firm of Whittle Brothers, florists, 52 North Pearl street. His duties will include the decoration of tables for luncheons and of the drawing rooms for the various functions at the mansion.

From Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, comes the report that Vincent Astor, who inherited the estate of his father, the late John Jacob Astor, is to develop one of the largest orchards in the state. He has placed a first order for 2,100 trees with a Maryland nursery. The Astor estate includes about 3,000 acres near the village of Rhinebeck, in one of the best fruit and farming sections in New York.

DULLNESS MARKS LENTEN PERIOD.

Business, which held up well at the beginning of Lent, fell off to a marked degree during the past week. We would not state that it was due to any particular increase in religious fervor, because orthodox New York keep their religion with them all the year round. The weather, during the early part of the week, was very bad; rain, fog and general discomfort, which kept many people indoors. The supply of stock was increasing all the time, and much of it was good stock. We have a good friend in this district whose advice is: "Always boost and never knock." We appreciate his advice, but facts are stubborn things. Relating to stock and its quality, much that has been arriving was very fine. There was no great surplus in special stock of roses, but there were more than enough to supply the demand. Special American Beauties went down to $30 per 100, with probable sales at lower figures. Along the general line of tea roses a similar relapse was noted. Fine Easter lilies, that a short time ago were wholesaling at 10 cents per flower, dropped to 6 cents, and were hard to move at that. Very fine stock of the Spencer type of sweet peas is on the market, but it moves slowly. The same may be said of carnations, orchids, gardenias and the various types of bulbous stock.

NEW YORK SPRING SHOW

March 1.—The market is very dull with a surplus of various stocks, but it may be added that if buying was normal there would be no great oversupply. Sweet peas, in particular, are piling up on the tables of the wholesalers and fine Spencer stock is selling very cheap. Short stock of lily of the valley is selling as low as 25 cents to 50 cents per 100 and hard to move at that. Freesias are very plentiful and hard to move. In other bulbous stocks there is more than enough to supply the demand. The supply of American Beauties is light and prices have advanced to $40 per hundred for specials.

HORTICULTURE ON ELLIS ISLAND.

No doubt when the majority of our readers see this headline they will laugh, but it is not a laughing matter. Some time ago President Wilson appointed a new immigration commissioner for this port. His name is Frederic C. Howe, and he at once set to work to make conditions more agreeable for the detained immigrants. He allowed them to go out on the lawn, saying: "It may hurt the grass some, but it will help the immigrants." Geraniums and other plants are now being grown in the living rooms.

NOTES.

The eighth annual entertainment and ball of the Greek-American Florists' Association was held at the Terrace Garden on the night of February 25. From every viewpoint, it was a great success. The decoration of the hall was exceptionally fine, being under the personal supervision of Theodore Malandre, of Malandre Brothers. Other clever and able members of the decoration committee were, Christ Pappas, James Papadem, George Hanges and S. Sakas. C. Sakelos, the clever and able Colonial florist, was chairman of the committee of arrangements and also chairman of the reception committee. The officers of this association are: George Cotsonas, president; D. J. Pappas, vice-president; C. Tsonmis, secretary; P. Theopine, treasurer; G. Stavropoulos, assistant secretary.. Unfortunately, on account of the illness of his estimable wife, D. J. Pappas was prevented from attending the ball. Previous to the dancing there was an entertainment, in which professional singers, dancers and acrobats took part. After this the floor was cleared for general dancing, which was kept up to the "wee smae hours." John Wilson, the "Subway Florist," was floor manager. In closing, the writer may state that the affair was well managed and carried through without a hitch. One of the leading attractions was "King" Peter Brown, who was a great favorite with the ladies.

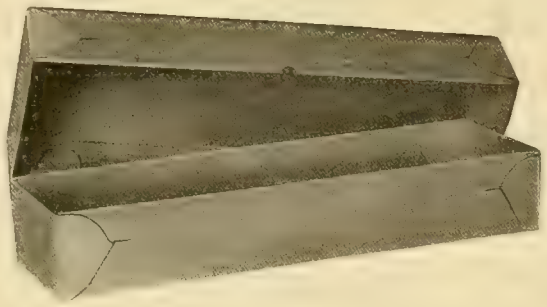
Geo. C. Siebrecht, 109 West 28th street, is receiving exceptionally fine single violets, which sell well. He has also a fine line of orchid flowering sweet peas.

Frank Lorraine has opened a retail flower store in the Hotel Seville, 28th street, between Fifth and Madison avenues.



YOU get both quality and style in SEFTON FLOWER BOXES, at no greater cost. There's no better advertisement than a smart, distinctive package; we insure this for you with the right materials, finished in handsome, non-fading shades.

You ought to have our Catalog (illustrated in colors) also price list and samples; sent on request.

THE SEFTON MFG. CO., 1333 W. 35th Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

It is believed that the Association of Retail Florists will make a fine display at the spring show.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be on the evening of March 8.

The scores of the New York Florists' Bowling Club, Thursday, February 25, were as follows:

P. Jacobson	159	167
J. Miesem	169	178
H. C. Riedel	159	179
W. P. Ford	168	166
R. J. Irwin	169	185
P. Rigo	152	161

A. F. F.

St. Louis.

The market has held up well and prices have stiffened up all along the line. Even violets have followed the trail. Cloudy weather was the cause of local scarcity. Carnations are scarce, and three to four cents are easily obtained for good stock. Sweet peas are in demand and bringing good prices.

NOTES.

Philip J. Goebel, Jr., a florist of St. Louis county, in a suit filed at Clayton, February 19, against Dr. Henry Hansen of Kirkwood, asked $10,000 damages for alleged slander. He contends Dr. Hansen accused him of stealing his fertilizer.

City Forester Julius Koenig has started to spray the city trees to destroy the terrapin scale. In April he will start on the pussock bag worm and web worm. The borer pest feeds on the maple.

Park Commissioner Davis will resign his position, much to the regret of everyone. He has done a great deal for the park department, play grounds and other civic improvements.

Mrs. Francis Wilkinson, a former resident of this city, died February 16 at Wright City, Mo. Some time ago she was in the florist business here at 2783 Arlington avenue.

H. G. Berning, notwithstanding the scarcity of good carnations, has had a splendid assortment. His growers are A No. 1 and their stock has the call.

Robert Wolfsberger is cutting some very fancy violets. His consignments find ready sale at good prices at the Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. disposed of large quantities of violets, sweet peas and miscellaneous stock during the past week.

Shaw's Garden is well advanced. Already tulips and crocuses are showing above the ground, with indications of early spring.

Grimm & Gorley, Mullanphy Florists, Alex. Siegel and Foster the florist, had special sales during the past week.

George H. Angermueller had a specially fine assortment of cattleyas during the past week.

The West End Florists report good trade in general during the past week.

Moss Floral Co. will shortly remove to more roomy quarters. W. F.

Thirty-Third annual meeting, San Francisco, Calif., June 1915.

LAST week the United States senate passed the appropriation for the distribution of free seeds for 1916.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. W. Scott, New York, and Seizo Suzuki, Yokohama, both of the Yokohama Nursery Co.

LOUIS BOEHMER'S first shipment of Japanese bulbs to the United States, consisting of eight cases Lilium auratum, was made in 1882.

NORTH CAROLINA growers report the tuberose crop well sold up. It is believed that many growers did not dig their bulbs this season, the local jobbers not having encouraged them to do so because of the falling off in export business.

SUPERIOR, WIS.—An appropriation of $150 for the purchase of pure bred seeds to be distributed among the pupils of the Douglas county rural schools was authorized at the meeting of the Douglas County Development Association February 16.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—J. R. Peay & Co., seedsmen, who opened for business in January, report excellent business from the start. J. R. Peay, actively in charge of the business, was connected with L. H. Hitchcock & Sons, seedsmen, of this city, for 10 years.

JAPANESE bulb shipments to Europe in 1914 fell off approximately 50 per cent, but according to Robert Fulton, of Henry & Lee, New York, this does not necessarily mean an increased supply or lower prices this year. The quality of the bulbs, however, may be somewhat improved, Mr. Fulton says, because of the better selection in planting stocks.

NEW YORK.—A sign on the store, 40 West Twenty-eighth street, reads as follows: "The Uptown Seed Store.—The Harry A. Bunyard Co., Inc., Seeds, Bulbs, and Plants, Grass Seed Specialties." This store will open at an early date. As Mr. Bunyard is very well known in all branches of the trade, he had many callers during the past week, while fitting up his store. We learn that Frank Duggan, formerly with Bridgeman's Seed Warehouse, will be employed by the Bunyard Co.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade March 3 were as follows: Timothy, $5.50 to $7.25 per 100 pounds.—The W. W. Barnard Co. is making a number of changes at its West Madison street store, which greatly improve the general appearance. The interior has been repainted and the display windows have been inclosed. A re-arrangement of the counters is contemplated and the cashier's office will be moved to the front of the store near the main entrances. The firm figures that after all the changes are completed it will be in a better position than ever to handle the spring trade.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—On seed and plant awards by the state board of administration H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, received the largest number, totaling over $2,500.

ATLANTA, GA.—H. G. Hastings & Co. report that orders for the first week in February fell behind last year, but for the second and third weeks they were 50 per cent ahead of last year. All orders received during the day are filled by 5 p. m. the next day. Three specially designed cases make it possible to fill 1,600 orders at each case daily. They are using a box for mail orders designed by W. W. Freeborn, of the mail order department, which saves them 50 per cent on work of setting up. This department presented a very busy appearance.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—According to the McVay Seed & Floral Co., the 1915 season, while late on account of a hard winter and continued wet weather, is now showing activity greater than the corresponding period of 1914. The improvement in demand is notable in the more staple items, such as potatoes, onions, corn, etc. Garden seed business also shows a decided improvement over last year, attributed to the planting of many small plots to offset the high cost of food stuffs. One of the best and most profitable seasons ever experienced by the trade in the south is looked for.

Seed Potatoes Scarce in the South.

A seed potato famine is imminent and local dealers are scrambling for supplies for their customers. The Maine stock of Triumphs is nearing exhaustion, and Houston dealers are sweeping the middle west with telegrams in quest of potatoes for planting. The heavy demand by farmers in all portions of the south has depleted the large stocks in the growing centers and there is still a large unfilled demand for supplies.—Houston (Tex.) Chronicle, February 19.

Fumigating Imported Seed by New Method

A satisfactory method for destroying injurious insects in imported seed without affecting the value of the seed has been used by the United States department of agriculture, and is described in a new bulletin (No. 186) entitled, "A Method of Fumigating Seed." Interested individuals who apply to the department at Washington, D. C., will be sent the bulletin.

In the new method, the infested seed is placed in a chamber in which a partial vacuum has been created. The chamber is then filled with a very deadly gas (hydro-cyanic acid) which penetrates more effectively into the seed, because of the previously created vacuum. It has been found that a considerably shorter exposure was necessary in using this method of fumigation than in the usual method. The bulletin describes the experiment completely, giving details and illustrations of the chamber used in the experiment. Hydro-cyanic acid is, of course, a most dangerous poison and should not be handled by any except those who are thoroughly familiar with it. Another gas, carbon bisulphid, is to be used by the department in a similiar experiment, the results of which will be announced later.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—The Frank S. Platt Co. thinks it safe to predict a record season. Although the year opened slowly, lacking in the usual pressure for early shipments of wholesale contracts, a steady and increasing demand, however, indicates the awakening of a strong, healthy business. The demand for goods on long time, however, exceeds greatly that of recent years.

The finest Asters for late August and September blooming.

The plants form strong, branching bushes, 2 to 2½ feet high bearing on long strong stems their handsome chrysanthemum-like flowers, which, under ordinary cultivation, averages 5 inches across. The form of the flowers, together with the length of the stems, places them at the head of Asters for cutting. We offer eight beautiful and distinct colors, viz::

This grand Aster may be briefly described as a glorified late branching shell-pink. The color is similar but more decided than the late branching. The center petals are prettily incurved, while the wide outer petals reflex, making a most artistic and finely finished flower, and stands cut longer than any other. 50c per trade pkt.; $2.50 per oz.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

Good, strong, well-established plants in 2¼-inch pots of the exceedingly

Valuable New Roses

Ophelia, Francis Scott Key, and Prince E. C. D'Arenberg.

Growers will find all of these valuable additions to the list of standard varieties. They have been tested thoroughly, and have been found to have exceptional value.

OPHELIA. No fancy rose ever introduced possesses so many excellent qualities. It is a splendid grower, a very free bloomer, and has fine stems. It sells on sight. The demand undoubtedly will exceed the supply. Anticipating the large demand, we have propagated it extensively. Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-in. pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100; $120.00 per 1000.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY. This variety, raised by Mr. John Cook, is very distinct, being entirely different from any of the indoor roses grown today. Flowers are rosy red, and are unusually large and double, resembling very much a very full, double hardy garden rose. Coupled with its large size and double form, it is an exceedingly free bloomer. It promises to be exceedingly valuable, especially for spring, summer, and fall flowering, when other less double roses are difficult to handle. Its keeping qualities are remarkable.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-in. pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100; $120.00 per 1000.

PRINCE E. C. D'ARENBERG. This variety might well have been termed Red Killarney, as it possesses so many of the good qualities of the Killarneys. In color, the flowers are similar to Richmond, but they are much more double, and it should prove a very much more profitable rose. Flowers have fine straight stems on all the grades—from the shortest to the longest. It has fine foliage, comes away quickly, and is even a freer bloomer than the Killarneys. We believe it is the best all-round red rose that we have today.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-in. pots, now ready, $12.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

We will be glad to quote on application prices on all the newer and standard varieties—strong grafted plants ready in March.

THE University of Florida agricultural experiment station, Gainesville, has issued Bulletin No. 125, December, 1914, under the title of "Tomato Insects, Etc.," which describes the history and control of the tomato fruit worm and other serious pests.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, March 2.—Mushrooms, 40 cents per pound; lettuce 22½ cents per box; radishes, 25 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches; asparagus, $2.00 per dozen bunches; celery, 12 stalks, 15 cents to 25 cents; cucumbers, $1.25 to $1.50 per dozen.

New York, March 2.—Cucumbers, $1.25 to $2.00 per dozen; mushrooms, 50 cents to $1.25 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 15 cents to 35 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50; lettuce, per strap, $1.00 to $2.00.

Transplanting Seedlings.

In the month of March one of the most important operations is the proper transplanting of seedlings; the principles involved are the same whether vegetable or flowering plants. In our long experience we have found this one of the most difficult and unsatisfactory jobs when transferred to hired help. The general complaint is that the work is "tedious." Tedious is another term for lack of interest. Transplanting small plants is no more tedious than operating a typewriter, or setting type, or a hundred other commercial operations. The trouble is that our present generation is not in tune with anything agricultural.

We find that the best headway can be made by finding a good operator, and immediately give him a smart boy as a helper. This boy can rapidly lay out the seedlings, thus reducing the good man's troubles. Wherever possible, markers should be employed, with pointed pegs to punch the holes—thus, insuring uniform spacings, uniform size and depth of holes, and great speed. After these holes are all ready we run over the bench with a fine sprinkler and dampen the ground lightly, and if the day is sunny, cover at once with newspapers or cheese cloth. As the work proceeds, the covering is put on the newly set out plants, which is a big help to them. The work should not be allowed to proceed far before watering the young plants and here is where we prefer the old despised water can to the hose as a "first aid to the injured." We hold the proper method is to fill up the little depressions around the plants with water, thus causing the ground to settle and tighten the roots. What we need is a close contact and no air spaces. Our seedlings are always in rows, hence it is easy to cut them out with a knife. We are very careful to cut under them at an even depth. We prefer a short root, straight in the hole, to a long one, doubled up. We put great stress on the proper grading of the seedlings,—if we have plenty of them, we discard everything that does not come up to a rigid standard of excellence; if we must economize, we save the smaller ones, and plant them by themselves. Uniformity is absolutely necessary in plant production. A common mistake made is the pinching of the earth around the neck of a plant; what is wanted is the firming around the root—hence the old advice: Go for the roots, boys. MARKETMAN.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Henry B. Chase, Chase, Ala., President; E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.

Fortieth annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June 23-25, 1915.

MADISON, WIS.—Ira M. J. Chryst has been appointed superintendent of horticulture for the 1915 state fair, which will be held September 13-17.

RHINEBECK, N. Y. — Vincent Astor has ordered 2,100 apple trees from a Maryland nursery as a starter in his plan to have the largest orchard in the state.

HANFORD, CALIF.—Over 40,000 trees of different varieties, the prune predominating, will be planted in Kings county this year, and several hundred acres of hitherto non-producing land will be made productive.

American Association of Nurserymen.

The fortieth annual convention of this association will be held in Detroit, Mich., June 23-25 next. In a week or two every member of the association and every legitimate nurseryman in the United States will receive the "announcement" of the event, which, in addition to containing much of the details of arrangement, programme of speakers and of entertainment, will make an urgent plea for prompt renewal of membership, as well as for responses from those who, whilst daily living in the enjoyment of the privileges and benefits secured for them by this association, have hitherto turned a deaf ear to our appeals for their co-operation.

That the Detroit meeting is going to be a success no one questions, but it will be a much greater success in point of numbers and influence if every nurseryman who ought to belong responded to this invitation. A fee of $5 per year is exceedingly small compared with the benefits afforded by a membership.

It is the expectation that a special railroad car will be chartered to convey the nurserymen of Rochester, N. Y., and the immediate vicinity. Those interested should write E. S. Osborne of Charlton Nursery Company. Final particulars regarding special rates and special car parties will be contained in the "Announcement." In the meantime John Hall, secretary, 204 Granite building, Rochester, N. Y., will gladly respond to requests for further information concerning membership, etc.

Nursery Stock Interstate Reshipments.

A number of notices of shipments of imported nursery stock returned by state inspectors bear a notation to the effect that the stock was reshipped to some other state prior to inspection and that the state inspector concerned was so notified, such notice apparently being given by the inspector who called to examine the goods. While the United States department of agriculture wishes always to be advised of such reshipments on the reports returned to us by state inspectors, it is requested that inspectors inform the persons making such reshipments that it is their duty, under the law, to notify prior to such shipments both this department and the state inspector of the state to which the goods are forwarded, and that failure on their part to give either of said notices makes them liable to prosecution under the plant quarantine act. The notification by the state inspector on his return report to this department does not meet this legal requirement. This subject is fully covered in the following paragraph quoted from regulation 8 of the "Rules and Regulations under the Plant Quarantine Act: General, Including Nursery Stock:"

Should a consignee named in such a notice (importer or broker's report to the department of agriculture and to the state inspector) ship or deliver for shipment to any other state, territory or district such nursery stock before it has been inspected by a duly authorized state, territorial or district inspector or officer, he shall prior to such shipment give like notice to the secretary of agriculture and to the duly authorized inspector or other officer of the state, territory, or district to which the nursery stock is to be reshipped.

Oklahoma City.

TRADE FAIR DESPITE BAD WEATHER.

Business continues fairly good right along, in spite of the fact of rainy weather, and wet Saturdays seem to be the rule now-adays, but almost everybody in this town has a telephone in the home, and that makes shopping more convenient. One florist here believes business is not at all seriously affected by stormy weather. Stock coming in from northern markets is showing splendid quality; especially, is there a marked improvement seen in all kinds of roses.

NOTES.

The quarterly meeting of the Oklahoma State Society of Florists was held in the Lee Huckins Hotel, March 1.

The seed business is beginning to show activity, as the planting of truck gardens is commencing. S. S. B.

SPIRIT LAKE, IA.—Judson M. Klein has completed a new greenhouse, 20x70 feet, which is being used for geraniums and other bedding plants. This makes him have about 10,000 square feet of glass. Mr. Klein says about four years ago he had one small building, 18x60 feet, and now has added this much more during the past three years. He says business is getting better each year.

Newport, R. I.

CLUB MEETING.

The speaker at the regular meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society, held February 23, was Robert Pyle, president of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., and also vice-president of the American Rose Society. He gave a very interesting lecture, his subject being, "Roses at Home and Abroad," and the talk was enhanced by views in natural colors of beautiful scenery. The lecturer opened by showing a view of rose hedges in Portland, Me., and then showed by way of comparison, the roses of California, equal to those grown in Massachusetts. His description of the gardens of France were of much interest and delighted his hearers. The garden of M. Graverеaux, a collector, has 11,000 roses catalogued, some dating from before the Christian era, and including a collection of 6,000 varieties from the British Isles. In preparation for rose shows the lecturer showed how, by putting a band of candle wicking around the rose, premature opening can be prevented. The wicking is to be removed in time to have the rose look its best when judged. Rose culture in the United States was also discussed and mention was made of the Hartford rose garden and the garden at Arlington Farms, Washington, D. C., the latter under supervision of the department of agriculture.

At the conclusion of the address, the chairman, Alexander McLellan, called upon several members to speak upon their personal experiences, and in response J. Urquhart, Richard Gardner, Hugh Williamson and James McLeish gave some valuable information regarding the best culture and treatment of the rose in this locality. After a few remarks by the chairman, a rising vote of thanks was given to Mr. Pyle.

NOTES.

The outlook for the coming season seems to be good. Many important rentals of cottages here have already been made. With no Europe to visit this year, it appears that San Francisco and Newport will both be benefited.

The American Sweet Pea Society will hold its exhibition at the Newport Casino, July 8-9.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Secretary Young's Report.

The meeting of the executive board of directors of the S. A. F. & O. H. was held at the Hotel LaSalle, Chicago, March 1-2, 1915, President Patrick Welch in the chair at all sessions. The following were in attendance throughout the two days' sessions: Patrick Welch, president, Boston, Mass.; John Young, secretary, New York; Wm. F. Kasting, treasurer, Buffalo, N. Y. Ex-president Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis, and the following named directors: Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.; August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb.; J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, O.; Wm. R. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.; R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.; also the following members under affiliation: Samuel J. Goddard, president of the American Carnation Society; Irwin Bertermann, president Florists' Telegraph Delivery; George Burton, president of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia; H. H. Bartsch, president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston. The board, besides the usual routine matters coming up at the annual meeting, had before it arrangements for the Thirty-first annual meeting of the S. A. F. & O. H. to be held in San Francisco, August 17-19, 1915, and also the fourth national flower show which is to be held in Philadelphia, Pa., March 25 to April 2, 1916. The national flower show committee held its own session, but certain important matters considered by it were referred to the general board of the S. A. F. for approval.

The reception by the Chicago florists of the S. A. F. executive board, the national flower show committee and the board of directors of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery was most hospitable and elaborate. Notwithstanding the courtesies tendered by the Chicago florists, the board transacted a great amount of detail business, its sessions were harmonious, and the results of its deliberations cannot fail to be beneficially felt throughout the coming year. Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco, Calif.; Wallace R. Pierson, president of the American Rose Society, and Harry A. Bunyard, president of the New York Florists' Club, were unavoidably absent, to the regret of all. Mr. MacRorie telegraphed and also wrote the board explaining his absence and stating that he expected to attend the flower show in New York on March 17. He advised that Superintendent John McLaren, San Francisco, is now preparing ground for a fine convention garden. Mr. MacRorie's correspondence indicates that he is vigorously at work and that the San Francisco meeting will be up to the usual standard of the S. A. F. and probably have some additional peculiarly California features that will render it most attractive.

Charles W. Johnson, secretary of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, called the attention of the board to the annual meeting and exhibition of the C. S. A. to be held at Cleveland, Ohio, November 10-14, 1915; also exhibit under auspices of the C. S. A. in conjunction with the gardeners and florists of the Pacific coast to be held next fall at the Panama-Pacific International exposition, San Francisco, on dates not yet determined and asking for co-operation from the S. A. F. He predicts that the exhibitions will be a big success.

A communication was received from the pathologist, Prof. H. H. Whetzel, which was referred to the programme committee. The report of Treasurer Kasting showed the finances in good condition and an increased reserve fund on hand. On motion of Mr. Kasting a committee of three, consisting of John Young, New York; J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb.; Robert C. Kerr, Houston, Tex., was appointed on trade exhibition to be held in conjunction with the San Francisco meeting, to report as to rates for space, etc. This committee recommended the adoption of the same rules that prevailed at the exhibition at the convention in Boston and that the same 40 cents per square foot be charged for space, which on motion of S. J. Goddard was concurred in. A motion was adopted to dispense with the reading of essays at the San Francisco meeting, but to invite a limited number of prominent people to prepare such essays, the same to be furnished in advance of the meeting in time for publication in the various trade papers. On motion of ex-President Wirth a committee of five on programme was appointed consisting of John Young, chairman, New York; Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco, Calif.; August Poehlmann, Chicago; Wm. R. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass., and George Burton, Philadelphia, Pa.

At Monday afternoon's session the correspondence of Daniel MacRorie was received and on motion of Irwin Bertermann it was referred to the proper committee, with thanks to Mr. MacRorie. Some members of the board present stated that they had good reason to know and they believed that hotel rates in San Francisco would not be excessive or above the ordinary schedule prevailing at other times than during the exposition. On motion of Mr. Nicholson the chair appointed the following committee on publicity: George Burton, president of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, chairman; Irwin Bertermann, president of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, Indianapolis, Ind.; and Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y. A resolution was presented from the national flower show committee, the details of which cannot be made public at this time, but which will have an important bearing upon the success of the national flower show which Past President George Asmus in presenting the report of the national flower show committee, predicted would be far ahead of any previous national show. The chairman of the national flower show committee, George Asmus, presented for the consideration of the board his plans in general. These received the hearty approval and unanimous endorsement of the board, and Mr. Asmus was highly complimented upon his careful attention to all details looking to the most efficient management of the national flower show. Messrs. Wirth and Hess were appointed auditing committee to pass upon the reports of the secretary and treasurer, and they reported that the accounts were correct and in first-class shape, also making some detailed recommedations, which were adopted. The usual routine appropriations came up for action and after thorough discussion were duly acted on and suitable appropriations made.

R. C. Kerr reported quite at length in regard to the energetic work he has been doing in Texas in the shape or organizing. In the course of this report he referred to the possibility of the organization of sectional associations. This brought out a spirited discussion in which a number of the members participated, and the result of the discussion was that Mr. Kerr expressed himself as thoroughly in accord with the recent broad movement toward nationalism and the dominance of the parent society, the same not to interfere with complete autonomy on the part of state or other florists' associations, all of which are invited to come into the fold under the affiliation plan, which at the close of the discussion Mr. Kerr acknowledged the paramount advantages of and expressed himself as having gained much from the discussion and as prepared to go back home and push organization harder than ever.

A lengthy talk over the various proposed routes to San Francisco was had, Guy French, secretary of the Chicago Florists' Club, appearing before the board and explaining the careful work that the Chicago local association had done with a view of arranging for Chicago to be the nucleus or meeting point where all eastern florists could converge and from there either go as they please or join in the general arrangements. After full discussion the board endorsed the route selected by the Chicago club as probably the best that can be had, although this of course will not prevent individuals from making their own arrangements. On motion, the chair appointed three representatives in the east as an addition to the Chicago clubs' committee on transportation and who will furnish eastern members all information in their power regarding the trip, viz.: H. H. Bartsch, president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston; George Burton, of Philadelphia, and Harry A. Bunyard, New York.

At the Tuesday morning session of the board several representatives of subsidiary societies announced that it was not their intention to hold special meetings of their societies at San Francisco, further than to participate in the general meeting of the S. A. F. In response to a telegram sent Daniel MacRorie by a special committee, Mr. Wirth and Mr. Young, the latter announced that a reply had been received from Mr. MacRorie that the local committee on convention garden will undertake to carry out the same on the same basis as it was carried out in Minneapolis. At the suggestion of Mr. Roland, Theodore Wirth was appointed by the chair as a representative of the board of the S. A. F. to act in conjunction with the local committee on convention garden at San Francisco. On motion of Secretary Young it was ordered that the awards to be given for the exhibits in the convention garden be in the form of medals or certificates, and that no cash prizes be awarded. Judges of the convention garden and trade exhibition, the chair announced, will be appointed later as soon as it is ascertained what members of the S. A. F. will positively attend at San Francisco.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, O., offered a suggestion as to the possibility of having an exhibition where new plants could be exhibited and judged once every month, which he thought would be a great benefit not only to the grower but also to purchasers of new plants. Mr. Peterson stated that he personally knew of plants sent out under three or four different names when they were all practically the same plant. This suggestion was quite generally discussed by the board, and a special committee consisting of Messrs. Wirth, Kasting and Roland, were appointed to take this matter under consideration. Mr. Peterson also brought up a matter regarding which he has had considerable correspondence with various members of the S. A. F. & O. H. as to the provisions in the classifications of the express companies regarding growing plants not in pots or tubs, placed in boxes and the sides and ends of which are as high or higher than the plant, and slats nailed on the top completely protecting the plant, which are rated as second class by the express companies, while growing plants in pots or in tubs, plants in receptacles crated, are rated first-class. He believed that plants in pots carefully packed should be carried as second-class matter, giving reasons for same. After considerable discussion this matter was referred to the tariff and legislative committee.

Wm. F. Gude, who was present at this session, having arrived one day late through a misunderstanding as to the date of the meeting, reported certain correspondence that he had had on the above matter with the interstate commerce commission, advising that they had it under investigation. Wm. F. Kasting thought it might be a good idea to appoint a committee to take measures to obtain a new rating from the insurance companies on greenhouses of modern construction. It was the general consensus of opinion that the former rates were now too high, the same having been established at a time when greenhouses were a much more hazardous risk than under the present improved construction of concrete, etc. No action was taken on this suggestion at this time.

Wm. F. Kasting was asked to preside during a portion of this session. Mr. Wirth moved that there be a permanent standing committee on convention garden similar in point of numbers and in tenure of office to the national flower show committee. The discussion on this motion brought out the general approval in which the whole subject of the convention garden is held and its possibilities as a general advertising feature as well as the public benefits to be derived. The motion was seconded by Thomas Roland and unanimously carried. At the final session of the board, Tuesday afternoon, ex-President Wirth brought up a subject very dear to his heart, by asking for an expression of opinion from those present in regard to the suggestion that Mr. Wirth made in his president's address at Boston, namely, his belief that the name of the S. A. F. & O. H. should be changed so as to refer to horticulture only. Great deference was paid to Mr. Wirth's feeling in this matter, but the result of an extended discussion was confirmation of the fact that the majority's sentiment was strongly opposed to any change of name, Mr. Gude bringing out very forcibly that such a change would not only be repugnant to the traditions of the society and the sentiment of the membership at large, but would require the taking out of a new charter which might even endanger the national character of the charter, the S. A. F. & O. H. being the only society of its kind which had been favored with a charter from the national government adopted by act of congress only after years of effort by the late lamented Wm. R. Smith. Mr. Wirth, although fondly cherishing his desire for stronger reference in the society's name to horticulture pure and simple, stated that he would bow to the will of the majority in the matter until he could present stronger arguments for a change.

On motion of Secretary Young an adjourned meeting of the board was authorized to be held at the time of the flower show in New York. The committee on final resolutions, Irwin Bertermann, chairman, reported resolutions of thanks to the local committee of the Chicago Florists' Club for courtesies and hospitality; also a vote of thanks to the national flower show committee for their presence and work, and to the Florists' Telegraph Delivery executive committee for their attendance; all of which was unanimously adopted by rising vote. The board adjourned feeling that the meeting had been a most satisfactory one from all standpoints and that good work had been accomplished.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

National Flower Show Committee.

MEETING AT CHICAGO.

The meeting of the national flower show committee was held at the Hotel LaSalle, Chicago, at 2 o'clock p. m., March 1, 1915. Chairman George Asmus presiding. All members of the committee were present with the exception of Charles H. Totty and W. N. Rudd. The discussion at this session was entirely devoted to a consideration of the adaptability of the building to be selected for the fourth national flower show which is to take place in Philadelphia, Pa., March 25 to April 2, inclusive, 1916. As a result of the work of this session instructions were issued to the lease and contracts committee, Farenwald, Kasting and Craig, who have been doing energetic work and who reported that preliminary arrangements with reference to the lease of the building had been considered and are being pushed with all possible dispatch.

The second session of this committee was held at 1:30 p. m. Tuesday, March 2, 1915, at the same place. A matter of special importance that was considered at this session was the rates for space at the trade exhibition to be held in connection with the national flower show.

After a full discussion it was finally determined that inasmuch as the exhibition will be held on one floor a uniform price of one dollar per square foot would be charged, first come first served. It is believed that this price will be satisfactory to all concerned, and Secretary Young reports that he has received a gratifying number of applications for space with every prospect of plenty more coming, and as no favors will be shown, it is up to exhibitors to get their applications in early. The question of admission of artificial flowers, etc., on equal terms with natural flowers was debated from all viewpoints and it was the consensus of opinion that while no discrimination would be made and artificial flowers would be admitted on equal terms, it was suggested that a better display would be promoted by segregating the artificial flowers from the natural flowers in a special department of their own. On motion of Wm. F. Kasting, the chairman and secretary were authorized and instructed to raise a guarantee fund for the national flower show in the amount of $10,000 and that in the call to be sent out the purposes for which the guarantee fund is to be raised shall be fully specified, and that all florists throughout the country be invited to participate in subscriptions to this guarantee fund. It was also agreed that all funds in connection with the national flower show shall be turned over to and handled by the treasurer of the S. A. F. & O. H.

The announcement was made by the American Carnation Society that they will bring their "jubilee meeting" to Philadelphia, in consideration of which on motion of W. P. Craig it was ordered that the former action taken by the national flower show in reference to the American Carnation Society's exhibit and awards on condition that they would hold their regular annual meeting in conjunction with the national flower show in Philadelphia, in March, 1916, be reconsidered and that the same sum be allotted to that society as was first proposed to allot to them. It was further ordered that the allotting of the premiums be left to the officials of the American Carnation Society, a certification of the awards made to be sent to the national flower show committee. All collections in this behalf are to be turned over to the treasurer of the S. A. F. & O. H. and all disbursements to be made by the same officer. It was believed that this plan would avoid some confusion which has heretofore arisen in handling these matters as between the two associations. A. Farenwald suggested that it would be a great mistake to interfere with the rules of the separate subsidiary societies. The rules of the American Carnation Society were accepted as governing the exhibits by its members at the national flower show, with the exception of rule three, which reads: "Only members of the American Carnation Society are eligible to compete for prizes, medals or certificates." Secretary Young voiced the sentiment of the committee that the endorsement and co-operation of the retailers generally throughout the country was realized as being of the greatest assistance, and the national flower show committee pledged itself to do everything possible to look after their interests.

At the request of Chairman Asmus, Secretary Young read the typewritten instructions formulated by Chairman Asmus covering in detail the work of the respective sub-committees of the national flower show committee. The full details covered in these programs of work for the committees evidenced the great foresight and thorough manner in which these instructions had been worked out by Mr. Asmus, and they were the subject of general commendation and approval. Charles H. Fox, chairman of the committee on publicity, addressed the committee, outlined what he expects to do, and expressed the greatest enthusiasm and confidence in the work that will be done by his committee proving most effective. Chairman Asmus invites suggestions from all quarters that may conduce to the furtherance of the show. Instructions to the several sub-committees were endorsed by formal motion and the chairman directed to send them out.

The chairman of the special program committee, W. P. Craig, made a report showing the progress to date, and giving a large list of firms who have already contributed special prizes. Mr. Craig reported that the business men of Philadelphia are generally enthusiastic over the show and anxious to co-operate. A resolution was unanimously adopted instructing the secretary to write W. N. Rudd and Chas. H. Totty the regrets of the committee at their inability to be present through illness and then to convey to them the best wishes of the committee and the hope that they would soon be completely recovered.

Luncheon to Executive Committee S. A. F.

The Chicago florists were most assiduous in their attention to the entertainment of the members and guests of the executive board of the S. A. F. & O. H., the executive board of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery and the national flower show committee. Besides various luncheons and a smoker, an elaborate luncheon, which might more properly have been termed a banquet, was tendered by the Chicago florists' committee at the Hotel La Salle at 1 p. m., Wednesday, March 3, 1915. The committee from the Chicago Florists' Club having this special function in charge were Ernst Weinhoeber, George Asmus and August Poehlmann. After a most appetizing spread, with liquid and other embellishments, George Asmus, as toastmaster, called upon the following gentlemen, all of whom made remarks that were out of the ordinary after-dinner speeches, inasmuch as they abounded in suggestions of a business character that were most timely and interesting; these speakers being Phillip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich.; A. Pochelon, secretary of the F. T. D., Detroit, Mich.; George E. M. Stumpp, director F. T. D., New York; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; ex-president S. A. F. & O. H.; J. C. Vaughan, Chicago; Patrick Welch, president of the S. A. F. & O. H., Boston, Mass.; August Poehlmann, director of the S. A. F. & O. H., Chicago; John Young, secretary of the S. A. F. & O. H., New York; Wm. Kroeschell, Chicago; Wm. F. Kasting, treasurer of the S. A. F. & O. H., Buffalo, N. Y.; George Sykes, Lord & Burnham Co., Chicago; Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative, S. A. THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

AN ENTERPRISING RETAILER.

In these days of over supply, when those whose business it is to keep the market cleaned up are working overtime to devise ways and means to do it, such a man as Frank M. Ross, Philadelphia, Pa., who has three large stores in residence districts of that city is a welcome visitor on the market. His purchases are always large, that is, if the prices are favorable, and to please him they must be low—yes, very low, as he has the name of being the closest buyer in the business. He gets all the advantage that there is to be had by paying cash; nothing is ever charged, the cash being always forthcoming. A thousand lot of any one flower is the rule, while two or three thousand, or the whole shipment when it comes to roses, is a common occurrence. He knows the market as well as any man and much better than many of the trade. He inspects each lot of flowers personally, doing all the buying himself, then loads it into his car and has it on sale in a very short time.

Mr. Ross started in business about 21 years ago in the uptown district near Second street and Girard avenue, where he had varying success, but did not commence to branch out until he adopted the cash system about seven years ago, and at that time closed out all book accounts. When on a strictly cash basis there was noted a visible increase in the volume of trade, caused mostly by the low prices which were made possible by the "cash only" feature.

After doing business on this basis for two years he purchased the property located at No. 13 S. Sixtieth street, in the business center of the fast growing new residence district of West Philadelphia, miles away from his first store. Here he had a store and residence, and quickly established a large and lucrative business. Two years later he purchased property adjoining his first store and erected a splendid single story building, especially fitted for his rapidly growing trade. With its two large bulk windows it is one of the finest stores of the neighborhood in any line.

His policy of low prices "for cash only," met with the approval of the public, and his business rapidly increasing, he looked around for another opening and finally purchased the Century Flower Shop No. 2, at 136 S. Fifty-second street, from H. H. Battles, who had been conducting at that location a low priced cut flower store, something on the Ross idea. The real estate was included in the purchase. After spending several thousand dollars altering the property to suit his purpose, the "cash only" feature is found to be a drawing card, the business being very satisfactory.

Aside from the cash feature and the low prices, Mr. Ross's strong card is stock. There are no flowers in the market, with the possible exception of orchids, that he does not carry in quantity. In each store are large show refrigerators which are at all times filled with the flowers of the season. Roses are seen in these boxes, a thousand at a time, carnations the same. A thousand chrysanthemums at a time are purchased for the three stores. Each pot or vase holding flowers has a price per dozen tag, showing prominently the prices they are sold at for that day. Plants are largely handled, each one with a conspicuous price tag, and all at prices calculated to move them quickly. Special sales are features of week ends, at which prices of plants rule at times very low, sometimes being marked at or below cost, the profit being sacrificed to have its effect as an advertisement. A large volume of business with a small profit appears to be the Ross idea.

Mr. Ross is a large advertiser, mostly by distributed circulars or illustrated sheets enclosed in envelopes. These are attractively gotten up with showy headlines and cuts of plants and flowers, all bearing the very low prices at which they may be had at his various stores.

His windows are always very attractive, reflecting the stock in the store; plants or jars of flowers with prices, standing not too crowded, so that each separate article has an opportunity to show its worth. Brilliant illumination is a feature of the Ross store, he believing that plenty of light pays. He makes much of holidays, Christmas and Easter being very busy times. Wreaths for this demand are prepared by the thousand, magnolia leaves, box, statice, ruscus, immortelles, Japanese chenille, etc., are used largely, a force of girls being engaged weeks ahead in working up the stock.

Mr. Ross is a great economist and knows to a penny what everything costs when finished. The foundation of his success is the buying, not only in cut flowers, but in plants, supplies and requisites. He is never satisfied with anything but the lowest figures on a spot cash basis. In addition to his low prices he gives a check with every purchase, showing the amount, ten per cent of which is exchangeable at any time for plants or cut flowers, or in fact, stock of any kind. Light Ford delivery cars are a factor in increasing the scope of his business.

Taking his business, as now established, it certainly is an object lesson in what can be done by push and energy, and a concentration of the essentials of buying and selling. K.

St. Patrick's Day.

Just a bit of sentiment is "Paddy's day." Everybody likes Pat; he is always welcome with his bright Irish wit, so when his Patron Saint's day comes around, we get together and help him celebrate.

This is one of the anniversary days of the year that gives the florist a chance to show his skill in bringing out something new in commemorating the event. From an advertising standpoint, it is entitled to much more attention than it generally receives. As a matter of business, it will pay in the attention it attracts, and in the actual amount of sales entirely due to the display, and the attractive way in which the trade is worked up. There is quite a little detail to be thought out if all that is recognized as belonging to the day is to be included in the stock. There are clay pipes, large and small, shamrock and Irish flags, a good sized harp, which should be fitted with electric lights, a lot of small harps that can be sold, small Paddy's 'barrows, small hods, high hats, shillalahs, snakes, and a lot of nice potatoes, and last, but not least, a good supply of growing shamrock in various sized pots from one inch upwards, and shamrock shaped pans. There should also be included some sheet music of popular Irish songs, including Tipperary.

One of the most attractive, and withall salable articles, was introduced by Pennock Bros., Philadelphia, Pa., several years ago. It is a small wooden harp, gilded, with a birch bark border at the base that holds a pot of shamrocks. A window full of these made a great hit. Another special is a miniature wheelbarrow in which a small shamrock may be planted. The high hats are large enough to hold a small shamrock, and are quite effective. The clay pipes, a bit smudgy and with the stem broken off about as Pat would use it, and the bowl filled with a miniature shamrock, and the stem tied with a small green ribbon bow, is worthy of a place.

One of the least expensive, and at the same time most effective creations, is made of a fair-sized potato and a miniature pot of shamrock. Gouge out a hole sufficiently large to admit snugly a one-inch shamrock, pot and all; push it down flush with the surface of the potato, tie with a bow of green ribbon, and you have an article that readily sells for from 50 cents to $1.00, particularly if put into a nice box, tied with green ribbon, a pipe and Irish flag or other decoration, fastened in with the ribbon to make it more effective.

Wrap the shamrock pots that are sold separately with green crepe paper and narrow ribbon; they are much more attractive when so decorated. The shamrock shaped pots from six to eight inches across, are used by many as a table decoration in place of the fernery for small dinners, and several are used for a more pretentious affair. Many private "Paddy's day" dinners, some of them quite important, are given all over the land in every community. Very pretty and effective decorations may be made of the materials at hand as described above. Green chiffon bands about six inches wide, used single or double to get color effect, can be pinned to the cloth inside the plate line and tufted at intervals. The effect is good and does not interfere with the placing of any of the dishes or other furnishings. Brief, but attractively worded cards, should call the attention of customers to the day, and your efforts to supply them with all the necessary things for its celebration in a floral way. These should go out well in advance, as it may suggest an observance that will include something from your stock. There is no question that if thought and attention are given to this work, quite a trade can be worked up, which will increase with each repetition of the event, and be felt in all the other departments of the business. Greening Cut Flowers.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Please advise me of the best way to dye carnations and other flowers green. J. C. I.

Success with this artificial coloring is best secured by dissolving the green dye powder in boiling hot water, about one quart of water to each package of dye. This makes a stock solution, which should be kept bottled up and is enough to color several quarts of water. White carnations should be fresh and take the color best immediately after removal from the plants, before they have been put in water. Flowers picked during bright sunny weather, when all conditions are most favorable to rapid growth, will absorb color faster and better than others. Those picked in the morning are practically dormant, while those picked in the afternoon have been forced into activity by the sun, and are in a better condition to absorb the coloring. In a warm, dry temperature, more moisture naturally evaporates from the flowers, and therefore the solution is drawn up faster and the flowers color more rapidly.

Cut the stems on an angle, and place the stems in the dye solution, the flowers absorbing the coloring through the stems. Two to three hours in the dye solution is generally sufficient to give them the desired color. The stems should then be washed thoroughly and the flowers placed in jars of clean water. They are then ready for sale. All other white flowers, such as roses and lilies, can be greened as easily as the carnation; in fact yellow tulips, daffodils and other like flowers present very odd features when treated in this way. Care should be taken not to leave the flowers in the solution too long, as too much color appears to shorten the life of the bloom. Dipping the blooms into green dye or holding them in the fumes of ammonia has been tried by some florists, but the results have not been very satisfactory. K.

PLANT NOTES.

Geraniums.

At the approach of spring the geraniums and other bedding stock will make rapid growth and from those which are large enough a top cutting may be taken now. While these cuttings will not make good-sized plants for bedding out, yet they can be grown on for stock plants for another year. It is time now to take account of the stock on hand and look over the amount that has been required in the past, and if it is found that there will be a probable shortage of any varieties procure them at once. They can be obtained at this time, either small plants or rooted cuttings, at low prices. Many growers lose every year by putting off their buying too late when the prices have advanced to such a figure that there is no profit in handling them. It is seldom that one who has much bedding to do, has geraniums enough, especially of S. A. Nutt or Alphonse Ricard, and this is the time to procure the stock, and if a grower has any room to spare it is good business to stock up with these varieties, for there is a guaranteed sale for all well grown plants in May. The plants that are now in 3-inch pots will require going over often and spacing out, that well-grown stocky plants may be had. If crowded now, tall, weak, spindly plants are too often the result, and when grown in this way are not fit to make a good showing in the bed when planted.

Sweet Peas.

A sowing of sweet peas made in pots late in March which can be transplanted outside as soon as all danger from late frosts is passed, will give a crop of these flowers two or three weeks earlier than the seed sown in the ground. There is generally a time in late June and early July that the sweet peas in the greenhouse come very poor, owing to the excessive heat under glass and the infection of red spider, and the early sowings outside are not yet in flower. Five or six seeds sown in a 3-inch pot and these placed on the sill or window ledge or on a hanging shelf will make nice stock for planting out after the middle of April and the advantage of those started in the greenhouse over the ones sown in the cold ground will be quickly seen upon trial. Thev can be grown so that they will take but little valuable room under glass and the extra expense of this and the labor in transplanting them will be more than recompensed by having fine flowers at a time when most of the stock is in poor condition.

The plants that are growing inside will require considerable attention as the sun increases in power; the growth is very rapid and the vines must be kept erect or crooked flower stems will be the result. They should be gone over every day, and where the growing shoots are getting away from the supports they should be fastened to them.

Bedding Plants.

The plants for bedding out in the spring will take not only much of the plantsman's time, but will keep demanding more room, for the growth from now on will be rapid and unless constantly watched and cared for the plants will quickly get crowded and much of the stock injured. The final shift of the geraniums in the northern section of the country may be delayed until the first of April, but the plants should not be allowed to get badly potbound, and they should be given plenty of growing room. The propagating bed should be full of cuttings of the more rapid growing plants and the seedlings will have to be potted as soon as of proper size. The cannas and other bulbs that have been started should be potted and given good location for growing on. Now is the time to take account of stock and see of what kinds there is going to be a shortage and of what there will probably be an over supply and obtain the first and dispose of the second. This is the time to buy, for the stocks are large and shipments can be guaranteed, and the prices are low compared to what they will be a month hence. The amount of stock that annually goes to waste is large and a little foresight will prevent much of it. Every summer some growers throw away thousands of plants that have cost much in labor and should have made returns. Auction sales in some sections are the means of disposing of much of this stock, but this is generally at low prices. This stock can most all of it be disposed of by a little judicious advertising and letting the other fellows know where it can be obtained. An attendant at any plant sale in early spring will find many growers looking for all kinds of stock. It is often quite difficult to know just how much of each kind of bedding stock is wanted, but as soon as an over supply is noted let the other growers know where they can obtain it, and place a price on it that will guarantee a sale. It is much better to move it at some price than to throw it away. The wide-awake, up-to-date growers clean up their stock every year.

Cyclamens

The plants of cyclamen grown from seed sown last fall will now be nice, stocky little plants if properly grown and should be large enough to transplant to 2½ or 3-inch pots. The soil should be live fibrous loam with about one-third leaf mold, and in mixing a liberal sprinkling of sand should be included. In potting, the small bulb should be so placed that the soil just covers it; many leave the bulb out of the soil, but best results are obtained with the young stock to leave the bulb in the soil. Later after the bulb has grown large and mature, this is not so necessary. The plants should be placed in a cool house and if possible near the glass and where they can have all the ventilation possible. Just as soon as safe they should be removed to frames outside and plunged in the soil even with the rim of the pot. The cyclamen will not tolerate poor drainage and if anything happens to block the drainage the plant quickly sickens. This sometimes happens where the pots are sunk in the soil and is often caused by angle worms. Where these are seen or the appearance of lumps on the top of the soil denotes their presence, they should be removed at once. In the final potting, be sure and place plenty of crocks in the bottom of the pot.

Salvias.

There are few more popular plants for bedding purposes than the salvia and when properly grown they are a great ornament to a garden either as beds by themselves or as an edging for cannas or other tall plants, the dwarf varieties being especially adapted for this purpose. To make a showing in mid-summer the plants should be started early either by cuttings or seeds so that the plants at this time should be large enough for a 3-inch pot and should have been pinched back at least once and beginning to branch. These can be potted into 4-inch pots in April and will be showing bud by the time for planting them outside in June. Such plants of course cannot be sold as cheaply as the late-sown seedlings that are grown closely together, and allowed to run up to a single stem, but it will not take so many of the former plants to fill the same space and the bed will be in flower through the summer and fall while with the latter too often there is no bloom until just before frost, and when the first frosts are early the plants are not in bloom but a few weeks. The early plants are much more satisfactory to the customer and will cost but little more owing to the larger space which they will cover during the season.

Pittsburgh.

COLD WEATHER HOLDS MARKET FIRM.

Pittsburgh has been in the grip of a cold wave for almost a week, but there is still a good supply of flowers to satisfy all. Prices are still good and probably will hold for some time, as it looks as though the cold spell will continue with us, for a while at least. Roses and carnations continue to hold out well, but bulbous stock, with the exception of lilies and daffodils, continues to suffer. Sweet peas and violets are moving very well and realizing fair prices. Our market has been handling some record-breaking quality sweet peas recently, but they are not quite so prominent at the present writing. The retailers are busy stocking up with Easter plants. Thus far there have been some exceptionally good azaleas shown by local dealers. The seed trade is very brisk and Beckert's Seed Store reports a rushing business. The windows of their handsome building contain "something different" nearly every day.

CLUB MEETING.

The meeting of the Pittsburgh Florists' Club was held in the Fort Pitt hotel, Tuesday, March 2. The feature of the evening was a very instructive and interesting trip through Germany, via lantern slides, illustrated by Dr. Emil Krapf. He also showed us some colored photographs on the screen, showing grapes, peaches, etc., which could not have been improved upon, they were so perfect. We also had quite a collection of plants and flowers, the chief exhibitor being Carl Becherer, who showed some very fine novelties in cyclamens, hyacinths and double tulips. His new carnation, H. P. Joslin, and some select sprays of Oblongata perfecti were also fine. John Jones, of Schenley Park, showed a nice collection of hyacinths, and special mention might be given La Victorie, which he prized most of all. His tulips, especially Prince of Austria, were also very good. It was impressed upon the minds of all present that they were not grown with the aid of tobacco stems, and condemned the "blamed things," as he called them, whereafter a heated discussion as to the merits of its use ensued. John Tyler was there with some novel blooms of cypripediums, along with some strains of dendrobium. President McCallum announced that at the April meeting (to be held April 6), there will be an exhibition of the newer varieties of roses; also short lectures by three doctors of science from our university. A very interesting and largely attended meeting was adjourned at 10:30 p. m.

NOTES.

Gidas & Pyros opened their new Oakland store, Saturday, March 6. They have doubled the space they formerly had, and are much better able to display their flowers advantageously. They report trade as increasing week by week.

Jake Gerwig, our crack tenpin bowler, expects to leave us for a few days soon to attend the American bowling congress at Joliet, Ill. Pretty soft for Jake!

A visit to the Jurgens greenhouses to learn if the report that they were going to build was true, gained the information that they would not build this year, but expected to next. The writer was shown through this establishment by Foreman Sergerson, which disclosed the fact that about an acre of glass is devoted to growing narsissi, principally of the varieties Watkins and Victoria. Some poeticus, Paper Whites, tulips and hyacinths were to be seen here and there. The lily of the valley section was a revelation; it showed a batch of fine stock about ready to cut, measuring 16 to 18 inches in length. It is easily seen that the output from this place must be something enormous, as range after range of glass is filled with bulbous stock. Then comes the rose department of several houses, in which are grown American Beauty roses, which are now just being started. The stock is two years old. This place seems to be confined to four things, American Beauty roses, lily of the valley and two varieties of narcissi, Watkins and Victoria. J. J. B.

SUPPLY EXCEEDS DEMAND.

Style show week began Monday, March 8, and quantities of southern smilax and various colored beech and oak sprays were used for decorations. The supply of stock has been more than equal to the demand in nearly all lines, with the possible exception of American Beauty roses, local crops being off at present. Carnations, sweet peas, violets, lily of the valley and bulbous stock are in good supply. Easter lilies and callas are also quite plentiful. There is nothing the retailer cannot get now, both in variety and quality. Snapdragons, forget-me-nots, mignonette, freesias, calendulas, daisies, etc., are daily offerings. There are numerous requests for donations for benefits for war sufferers in Europe by the various philanthropic societies. Greens of all kinds are abundant.

land Florist Club and the Ohio Horticultural Society, held last week to consider plans for the big flower show for November, the following as show executive committee were selected: S. Prentiss Baldwin, chairman; Frank A. Friedley, secretary; John Boddy, treasurer; Herman P. Knoble, show manager; Mrs. L. Doan Holden, Mrs. John E. Newell, Mrs. A. S. Ingall. The work in connection with the coming show is to be divided among the many members of the florists' club as the following appointments will indicate: Geo. Bate, chairman publicity committee; F. C. W. Brown, chairman decoration committee; Herbert Bate, chairman premium list committee; Geo. W. Smith, chairman entertainment committee; Timothy Smith, chairman admission committee; C. E. Russell, chairman retail display committee; H. P. Merrick, chairman trade display committee; Frank A. Friedley, chairman exhibition committee. Each chairman will have from three to seven members to form his own committee. There will be an early meeting of each committee to lay out the work that must be accomplished to make this the largest flower show ever held in this locality. Under these notes will appear from time to time such information as will be useful and interesting to both exhibitors and florists in general.

SUPPLY EXCEEDS THE DEMAND.

Business, which was good the early part of the month, has taken a slump, with the result that stock of all kinds is more than plentiful. Roses of all kinds can be had at prices ranging from $3 to $15 per hundred, with carnations in fancy grades quoted at from $2 to $4. Sweet peas glut the market and are offered from $3 up to $10 per thousands, Spencers bringing the top prices. Other prices quoted are: Violets, $3.50 per 1,000; gardenias, $1.50 to $2 per dozen; Easter lilies, $6 to $12 per 100; jonquils and tulips, $1.50 to $3 per 100.

NOTES.

At the meeting of the florists' club, March 2, all of the officers of the past year were re-elected without opposition. A. Gude, A. Baur, Fred Kramer, H. Lewis and W. Marche were appointed a committee to arrange for the next banquet. After the meeting adjourned the members present were the guests of President Cooke.

S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. are showing a splendid light pink carnation which is being grown for them by Wm. Sugwart.

PRICES FALL WITH HEAVY SUPPLY.

The warm weather we have been having lately has been bringing out all kinds of stock, and making the prices go way down. Daffodils are still very plentiful. Violets are still coming very good, as are sweet peas just now. Carnations are still fine, with a good many seconds in between. Roses of all kinds are fine. Yellow Marguerites are of good stem, and calla and Easter lilies are of A-1 quality. Business is still very quiet, with a slight increase in the cut-flower trade. Things move slowly and it takes quite a little extra energy to make things move at the top speed.

The Quality Flower Store, of Pawtucket, R. I., has purchased a new delivery car that makes a fine show.

Johnson Brothers are opening an annex in the Barnaby building on Westminster street for the Easter trade.

Minneapolis Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Minneapolis Florists' Club was held at Rice Bros.' store, Tuesday, March 2, with a very good attendance, and those present seemed to show more interest in the club than usual. It seems that some of the older members, who formerly did not answer to roll call more than four or five times a year, are on hand at every meeting lately. We are now making preparations for a fall flower show, and at present have a committee at work on arrangements. The local florists are all in favor of a show at that time, and there is no lack of co-operation, and it is hoped to make the event one of the best of its kind that this city ever had. The committee on dues has been active of late in reminding some of the delinquents of their shortcomings, and as a little reminder, C. Rice, one of the committee, sent a little note that brought several of the old members to the meeting that had been missing for six months. The St. Valentine's day advertising in the daily press brought good results and the florists generally were well satisfied with the day, which is becoming a second Christmas with the florists in this city.

Minneapolis, Minn.

The supply of bulbous stock on the market at the present time is most plentiful. Everybody seems to be more than well supplied and the stock is fine. Other stock is also plentiful. Prices on daffodils, jonquils and tulips range from one to two cents each. Carnations of the better grade are quoted at three cents and roses are offered from four cents to eight cents.

Donaldson's offered two cut flower specials for a Saturday sale, March 6, advertising violets, fresh home grown stock at 12½ cents per bunch of 25 and jonquils and tulips at 12 cents per dozen. Sixty thousand violets were sold during the day and over 15,000 of the last named flowers were disposed of.

The Late William M. Mills.

William M. Mills, of Philadelphia, Pa., died March 5. He was in his sixty-ninth year. Deceased was a brother of Mark Mills, of the W. K. Harris firm and had been a most faithful employe at this place for 35 years. He was of a most cheerful disposition and well known to the trade. His funeral was held from the residence of his brother, Monday, March 8. There were many beautiful sprays of flowers from his friends in the trade.

THE supply of sphagnum moss of florists' grade is well reduced in the west.

THE Spring Number will be issued next week with seasonable articles and illustrations of unusual interest.

ROBERT FULTON, well known representative of Henry & Lee, New York, who passed through the city recently, says John Morley, superintendent, has made a fine thing of the San Diego exposition, horticulturally.

Convention Garden Wirth.

Theodore Wirth, superintendent of Minneapolis parks and originator of the convention garden, whose name was inadvertently omitted from the list of those in attendance, took a prominent part in the executive committee meeting of the Society of American Florists, and other functions, at Chicago last week, as past president of the national society and ex-officio member of the board of directors.

American Rose Society.

The American Rose Society's annual meeting will be held in Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass., March 18-21. The exhibition of roses will be fine from present advices, and it is hoped that all members of the society will take particular interest in this exhibition. It is expected that the governor of Massachusetts and the mayor of the city of Boston will visit the exhibition. There are several matters of much interest to rose growers which will be brought up at the annual business meeting, which will be called March 18, at 3 p. m. The election of officers, the selection of the next meeting place, rose test gardens, grading roses for market, affiliation of local society, etc., will be in order.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

American Gladiolus Society.

The preliminary schedule of the fifth annual exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society, to be held at the Casino, Newport, R. I., August 18-19, 1915, under the auspices of the Newport Garden Association and the Newport Horticultural Society, has been issued, and copies may be had by addressing H. Youell, secretary, 538 Cedar street, Syracuse, N. Y. The list of prizes is attractive and includes gold, silver and bronze medals, silver cups, and liberal cash awards. In the open class the schedule includes 33 divisions, and in the amateur and private gardeners' classes there are 45 divisions in which awards will be made. The exhibition committee of the American Gladiolus Society are desirous of making this the largest and best show in the history of the society, and all growers, amateur and professional alike, are earnestly requested to take part.

Quassiin a Cheap Insecticide.

EFFECTIVE SPRAY AT LOW PRICE.

Attention is called in a recent bulletin (No. 165) of the United States department of agriculture to the possibilities of quassiin as a contact insecticide. There is reason to believe, says this bulletin, that quassiin can be cheaply prepared and possibly sold at a lower price than some of the materials now used in commercial insecticides. The only experiments, however, that have been made up to the present were conducted at Sacramento, Calif., and it is possible that in a more humid climate quassiin would not be so satisfactory. Quassiin is the active principle in quassia wood, which is found in considerable quantities in Jamaica. Quassia chips have been employed for many years in the preparation of spray solutions for the control of the hop aphis. The percentage of quassiin in these chips varies somewhat, but it has been stated to be 75 per cent by one author. If this is correct, the bulletins says, it would take only one and one-half pounds of the chips to 100 gallons of spray to make an effective insecticide; three pounds or double this quantity, would certainly be sufficient; and with three pounds of whale-oil soap at four cents a pound would make the total cost of materials for 100 gallons of spray only 24 cents.

In investigating the efficiency of the quassiin spray, the author of the bulletin compared it with a standard insecticide known as nicotine sulphate, a tobacco product. The quassiin he believes to be equally effective.

Miami Valley Landscape Exposition.

According to the Dayton Daily News, there is not another city in the world where so many men, women and children have the knowledge of landscape gardening that the people of that city have. The first annual floral and landscape gardening exposition of the Miami Valley, March 1-6, was arranged to further the interest in the planting of flowers, trees and a general "city beautiful" movement, the city welfare department and the playgrounds and garden associations lending their cooperation.

Panama-Pacific Exposition Notes.

Special features, with bright weather, form a magnet that cannot be resisted, and the attendance has already reached the million mark.

The floricultural display, which will be a feature of the exposition at all times, is being enhanced in beauty daily with the arrival of additional displays.

STOCK IN GOOD SUPPLY AND QUALITY.

Florists' stores and windows at present are very attractive places. In snow or wind storms a visit to the florist is as good as being transplanted to the land of tulips, daffodils, hyacinths, lilies and all spring flowers, which help to make blustering March more pleasant to Buffalonians. Roses of all kinds are plentiful, carnations are equal to all demands, all bulbous stock is in profusion, and by the way it is coming in, unless the supply is unlimited or it is held back, there may be a scarcity at Easter. Violets are plentiful and Saturday sees the usual sign at prices from 25 cents to 40 cents the bunch, with no delivery, which certainly helps to force trade. Lily of the valley, freesias and myosotis are good. Orchid sweet peas grown by Jerry Brookins & Son of Orchard Park, N. Y., are of the best. Lent, as usual, limits business, and the up-to-date man seeks new avenues of business. Very commendable signs have been seen on store windows, one reading, "A discount of 10 per cent on all cut flowers after 5 p. m., if taken with you." Another one reads, "Four O'Clock Box of Flowers, 50 cents, which is a big lot of good flowers for the price." Again we say a bargain, if a good one, is the best advertisement. A visit last week to some of the greenhouses shows activity on the part of all preparing for Easter. Lilies, in some cases, will have to be coaxed to get all in under the most favorable conditions. Azaleas, lilacs, rhododendrons, spireas and all other plants will be good—and plentiful. Ramblers in nearly every place look most promising.

CLUB MEETING.

The annual election of the Buffalo Florists' Club took place Tuesday evening, March 2, with a big attendance. The officers elected are: Robert A. Scott, president; David A. Seymour, vice-president; E. C. Brucker, treasurer; William Legg, secretary; Oliver Klinkenmeyer, financial secretary; Joseph Streit, L. H. Neubeck and W. H. Eiss, trustees. After the election and installation the new president turned the club over to retiring President Eiss, who had arranged a very interesting program. Singers, sleight-of-hand performers, Dutch and Irish comedians, a ventriloquist, and last but not least was a German band, led by Drum Major Bates, of Rochester, and playing "Tipperary" between the initiation of each candidate, who had to go through a special degree for the occasion. Mr. Eiss was ably assisted by "Big Mogul" Neubeck and Jos. Streit, the "German warbler." After the entertainment all were escorted to the banquet room by the drum major and band, which played "Der Wacht Am Rhine," ending a very pleasant evening for all and inspiring the new officers to try and outdo their predecessors.

Friday, March 5, was the day set down by the Rochester Florists for Buffalo florists to go to that hustling city with their bowling club, and again roll for the Lord & Burnham trophy, which the locals had won twice and lost to Rochester once. A delegation of about 25 journeyed to the "Flower City" and were royally entertained, first by an automobile trip to several of the greenhouses, including Highland Park, then to George Hart's wholesale house, the finest and most up-to-date west of New York, where everything is on sale, from the finest rose or any flower to lemons, grape fruit baskets and last but not least, was a 10-foot snake made by his wire worker, and true to life; at least it looked so, and to some who looked at it and walked away, it must have been some reminder to them. We were then escorted to the Hotel Eggleston, where a dinner was served. At 8 p. m. the bowling started at the Elks' club alleys and Rochester repeated the Buffalo dose, and now the score is 50-50; two games each, the fifth to be rolled in the near future. In the meantime our Buffalo boys will have to get a Glenn Brothers or an Allie Satter stride on them, or they will be relegated to the Vick Keller-Kasting-Anderson "has been" class, and look to them for further matches. Mike Keller is some leader, and age does not impair his voice. Too pleasant a time and too much dinner may have affected the Buffalo bowlers, but it looked very much as if it could not be done again, or our boys were overtrained. However, all had a very pleasant time and are looking forward to the final match, which will be played possibly in Batavia, which is midway between Rochester and Buffalo.

BISON.

Milwaukee.

Roses and carnations were somewhat more plentiful during the past week, which enabled the wholesaler to do justice to a great many more orders than in the previous week. Sweet peas, violets and bulbous stock were almost a glut on the market, as they have been coming in in such large quantities. Violets, especially, suffered, owing to the poor weather which has been prevailing, and were sold at exceptionally low figures. Plenty of green to supply the demand.

NOTES.

R. Leitz seems to have been a rather unfortunate man the past week, his wife being ill, and one of his little boys had the misfortune to fall and break his arm.

Gust. Rusch & Co. are receiving fine roses from the Cudahy Floral Co., which find ready sale. This firm reports business good.

A. Klokner has rented a store in the new building at Fifth and Grand avenue, and will be located next door to the Stand theatre.

Holton & Hunkel Co. reports business good, and expects to have a fine lot of plants for Easter trade.

Maggie Edlefsen & Co. have purchased a new auto, which they intend using for delivery purposes.

Mrs. L. Nelson has moved into larger and better quarters across the street from her old stand.

John Arnold intends opening a branch store in Schuster's, Garfield avenue and Third street.

Milwaukee Florists' Club.

The club meeting held March 4 was well attended, even though most of the regulars were absent. It was indeed gratifying to hear the report of A. Leidiger, chairman of the press committee, considering that the time was very short, and that only a good round dozen of retailers made contributions for the St. Valentine's display ad., the results were fully up to expectations. Owing to the fact that the total amount subscribed was only fair, the committee only utilized one morning and one evening English paper, and taking all things into consideration the experiment was so satisfactory that no doubt the idea of getting up a substantial fund to be used for display advertising on special occasions during the year will mature in due time.

As soon as the officers of the Wisconsin state board of agriculture are elected and installed, the local club will do all in its power to have a good practical florist assist them in seeing that the floral display at the annual state fair will not only be a credit to the local craft, but also an inducement to make exhibits; politics rather than practicability have played too important a part.

The entertainment committee was instructed to make all arrangements for the annual picnic to be held during the early summer months. Last year, as an experiment, the picnic was held on a week day, denying most of the employes a chance to be present, so we may again go back to Sunday for this affair.

man C. Kroseberg and the Wisconsin Telephone Company. The Edlefsen-Leidiger company alleges in its complaint that all the interests of William S. A. Edlefsen, the father of Maggie Edlefsen Kroseberg, which he had in the Edlefsen-Leidiger company were purchased by them, and maintain that Maggie Edlefsen Kroseberg has no right to engage in the floral business under the name of Maggie Edlefsen.

LENTEN BUSINESS UP TO STANDARD.

Mid-Lenten season has brought but little diminution in the call for flowers of all kinds, especially of the bulbous pot plants, an array of which is seen in every florist store. Social functions are not conspicuous for their frequency, but the loss in this respect is more than made up in the increased call due to inspiration that spring time gives to all for flowers. Roses have been quite scarce the past few weeks, but are now becoming more plentiful and correspondingly cheaper. Sweet peas are coming into the market in great quantities and the quality is most excellent, but the surplus drags down the price to a figure far less than the quality should command, and yet the growers acquiesce with admirable complacency. Carnations are much improved in quality, and great numbers of them are coming in, but the intrusion of high grade, long stem, sweet peas and fine snapdragon so early in the season, has made it hard for the divine flower to compete.

NOTES.

Harry A. Bunyard, of New York, gave a lecture on "Summer Flowering Bulbs" at the Hotel Ponchartrain, Friday afternoon, March 5, under the auspices of the Michigan Garden Club. The lecture was illustrated by the stereopticon and was well received. "Harry" called upon his many friends in the trade while here.

E. A. Fetters moved into his new store, corner of Woodward avenue and Clifford street, Saturday, March 6, and although the weather was most disagreeable, he was greeted in his new location by a great number of friends and patrons, and the business of the day was most encouraging.

The Detroit Florist Club will give an "old-fashioned corn cob pipe smoker" in Harmonie hall, Monday evening, March 15. A splendid program is being prepared for the pleasure of all.

Breitmeyers' Park Flower Shop, in the new David Whitney building, near the Hotel Statler, is nearing completion and will soon be occupied and under the personal charge of Harry Breitmeyer.

Robt. Rahaley will attend the spring flower show in New York, and while East will visit Boston and Philadelphia.

COLD WEATHER SHORTENS SUPPLY.

The spring-like weather of the last week of February produced a great quantity of high class blooms, but a week of cold, dark days has cut off the supply of stock to a great extent, although the demand is as great as ever and prices have increased. There are lots of fine bulbous and pot stock on the market, with a good demand. Preparations are being made for Easter, and the florists are all expecting an early spring. The weather has not hurt the quality of the cut stock as much as it has decreased the quantity produced. Roses are in good shape and are eagerly bought up. Carnations are of good size and color, but not over-plentiful. Orchids and lilies are in fine condition, and the great variety of small flowers are coming in good. Lily of the valley is rather scarce. Pansy plants are in and lilacs have appeared within the last few weeks. Freesias are used for corsage work.

NOTES.

At the recent funeral of Henry W. Wellman, a prominent and pioneer citizen of this city, many of the local firms were well represented with floral offerings. Among them were The Flick Floral Co., The Auger Flower Shop, The Bradley Flower Shop, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, and The New Haven Floral Co.

The Flick Floral Co. have the decorations for the spring opening of the large department stores of Wolf and Dessauer, and the Rurode Dry Goods Co. They have also been busy with funeral work, and are showing some fine stock. Their pot lilacs are mammoth.

W. J. Vesey, Jr., has returned from the meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana, which was held at Portland, March 2. He reports business as very good, and says his stock cannot meet the heavy demand for flowers during the last few weeks.

Some fine Azalea mollis and pansy plants are being shown at the Bradley Flower Shop. This firm is preparing to move to its new quarters.

TRADE VERY QUIET.

Trade was very quiet last week, due principally to the unfavorable weather conditions that were experienced and consequently stock of all kinds was plentiful and sold at low prices. The shipping trade was good, but the local demand was quieter than it has been for a long time. American Beauty roses in the fancy grades were none too plentiful, but there was quite a number of inferior flowers seen. Roses are in good supply, but clean up fairly well at low prices each day. Carnations are arriving in good numbers, but continue to clean up well at fair prices considering the large supply of other stock that is being offered. Violets probably never sold at such cheap prices this season as they did this week, and to give the reader a little idea of what the violet market really was, all that is necessary is to mention that one of the local department stores had a special sale on them, Saturday, March 6, when several hundred thousand were sold at five cents per bunch. Of course this stock should not be compared with the general run of stock that the trade buys, but it merely shows how the stock accumulated, and how it was jobbed off in quantity lots. Sweet peas are seen in large quantities at nearly all the wholesale stores and are also selling at greatly reduced prices compared with the week previous. Freesia in various colors is being offered in quantity and is seen displayed in many of the downtown stores. Snapdragons and stocks are arriving in large supply again, but are cleaning up well. Tulips, jonquils, hyacinths, Paper White narcissi, lilies, lily of the valley, gladioli and other bulbous stock is seen everywhere in large supply. A few pansies, daisies, gardenias, forget-me-nots and calendulas are seen, but not in any great quantities. Orchids are arriving in fair supply and are moving nicely. Easter blooming plants are making their appearance in large numbers at the retail stores and remind one that the big flower day is rapidly approaching. It is a little early to talk about the supply of cut flowers for Easter, but it would not be at all surprising if home grown American Beauty roses would be scarce for this occasion, for several of the larger growers are already throwing out their plants and others are doubtful whether they will be in crop or not, for the weather the past week has been anything but favorable for setting buds.

NOTES.

Buchbinder Bros., 518 Milwaukee avenue, are shipping an entire outfit of store fixtures, including a Buchbinder florist refrigerator, to U. L. Crawford, Des Moines, Ia., for his new store in the Shops building. Henry Buchbinder, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, has recovered sufficiently to attend to his duties at the store again.

N. P. Miller has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his father, Nicholas Miller, whose death occurred last week, at the ripe old age of 80. The funeral was held from the family residence at Wilmette, Friday, March 5, at 9 a. m., and the remains were laid to rest in the family lot in the local cemetery.

Joseph Ziska & Sons are having a big call for miniature ducks and storks which were added to the supply department this week. They wholesale at 25 and 30 cents each and are just the thing for window decorations or they are suspended from the ceiling on a wire spring and when an electric fan is turned on the wings are set in motion and give one an idea at first glance that it is a real bird fluttering about.

C. L. Washburn is well pleased with the condition of the lily plants at the Bassett & Washburn greenhouses that his firm will have to offer in pots for Easter and expects to dispose of all the stock on hand without trouble. This firm is offering cut lilies in quantity, in addition to its regular offerings. Mrs. Horton of the office force is now taking in the sights of the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco, Calif.

Bernard J. Schmirer is having trouble with one of the movie theaters in his neighborhood in regard to some curtain advertising that he contracted for. It seems that the theater changed hands before the contract expired and his slide did not appear on the screen since and that the agency is attempting to collect for something that he did not get. The question will probably be settled in court this week.

Paul Klingsporn has had all the old trophies of the Chicago Florists' Club polished and they looked pretty classy when they were on exhibition at the Chicago Flower Growers' Association store this week. He thinks that they should be on exhibition at every club meeting, so do not be surprised if you see them in the meeting room next month.

George Wienhoeber had several large designs for the Mohr funeral last week, among which was a very pretty spray of violets, orchids and lily of the valley. Miss Johnson, who has been in the employ of the Fleischman Floral Co. as bookkeeper for the past six years, has accepted a similar position at this establishment.

The Otto Wittbold Nursery at Edgebrook has secured several large planting orders recently in this vicinity which will keep quite a force of men busy for some time. Mr. Wittbold says that considerable shipping was done during the warm spell that prevailed before the recent cold weather set in.

Peter Reinberg is cutting heavily in roses and carnations now and will be well fixed in white for St. Patrick's day. The entire store force will visit the greenhouses next Sunday, March 14, to get a line on the stock for Easter. The shipping trade is very good at this store and the local demand is improving.

A. T. Pyfer says that trade has been very good at A. T. Pyfer & Co.'s store and that everything is running along smoothly as before. It will be remembered by the trade that this is the firm that has taken over the entire cut flower business of the Chicago Carnation Co.

E. F. Kurowski, Jr., says that the John C. Moninger Co. is enlarging its New York office, which is proving to be a fine investment. Several nice orders have been booked through this branch recently and the outlook is that many more will follow.

Frank Ayres and his able force of assistants are attending strictly to business at the Chas. W. McKellar store, while the proprietor and his wife are taking in the sights at the Panama-Pacific exposition.

Erne & Klingel are showing some very fancy tulips in addition to a full line of other seasonable stock. This firm is enjoying a nice business and could use a little more floor space to good advantage.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is offering 40,000 lily plants in pots for Easter this year and the stock is certainly in splendid condition. The plants average from four to twelve blooms per pot and there is no question but what every one will be sold before the Easter rush is over. August Poehlmann can be seen about the greenhouses each day where everything is running along very nicely and planting in some of the houses is well under way. Over 90,000 Mrs. Chas. Russell roses will be grown next season and it is understood that Ophelia will also be given considerably more bench space then previously.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a good supply of fancy roses and carnations and will have a large quantity of white in the last named for St. Patrick's day. N. J. Wietor says that everything at the greenhouse is in fine condition now and the indications are they will have plenty of stock for their customers as usual the approaching Easter.

Percy Jones will have his usual large supply of white carnations for St. Patrick's day and is already booking orders for same. A nice supply of bulbous stock is to be seen at this store, not to say anything of the fancy ferns handled in quantity.

Miss J. M. Zalud, who conducts the Elston Flower Shop at 3959 Elston avenue, is gradually recovering from the injuries she sustained in a recent street car accident. Miss Zalud is sister of Mrs. Smely, the well known florist of Aurora.

Zech & Mann are pleasing their trade with fancy sweet peas and freesias which are in good supply as usual with them. The shipping trade at this store is brisk and inquiries regarding Easter stock are numerous.

Weiland & Risch are cutting quite heavily in Mrs. Chas. Russell roses at present and the quality of the stock that they are offering is fine. This firm will grow this variety on a larger scale than ever next season.

W. D. Desmond of the L. S. Donaldson Co., Minneapolis, Minn., was a visitor this week. He reports that business has been good since January 1 and that his firm has no complaint whatever to make.

John Kruchten has booked several large orders for pot lilies for Easter the past week, but still has a large quantity to offer. He handles both cut lilies and pot lilies each Easter in large quantities.

The Garland Manufacturing Co. of Des Plaines reports a brisk demand for the "Little Wonder" rose nozzle, which is making a big hit with every grower who is using it.

The E. C. Amling Co. expects to occupy its new store in the LeMoyne building at the southwest corner of Lake street and North Wabash avenue on or before March 21.

J. F. Kidwell & Co. report that business continues to be good at their Michigan avenue store, and are busy making preparations to handle a big Easter trade.

Frank Schramm of Crystal Lake has placed an order with the Foley Manufacturing Co. for two new houses, 40x225 feet, and a service building, 30x100 feet.

Kyle & Foerster's store is beginning to take on an Easter appearance with the large supply of fancy cut lilies that are being consigned to them.

The A. L. Randall Co. is busy getting its new store ready in the Le Moyne building and expect to occupy it shortly before Easter.

Hoerber Bros. are thinking seriously of adding Mrs. Chas. Russell to the list of roses now grown at their Des Plaines greenhouses.

O. A. Tonner is again showing a regular supply of fancy snapdragons at her 30 East Randolph street wholesale store.

PRICES DROP WITH CROWDED MARKET.

The market the past week was somewhat crowded and prices fell considerably in all varieties with the exception of violets, which stiffened in price, cloudy and dark weather causing a scarcity. American Beauty roses are scarce. Southern jonquils now influence prices on greenhouse stock. Store openings will help to move surplus stock.

NOTES.

LENTEN BUSINESS BETTER THAN USUAL.

Business is keeping up steadily, and in the aggregate appears to be better than before Lent. The early spring openings are using their full quota of stock and keep the market cleaned up pretty well. Stock of all kinds is much more plentiful than it was, and this makes it a comparatively easy matter to take care of immediate wants in the flower line. The demand from out of town is pretty strong. Both roses and carnations are more plentiful than they were, and are now able to take care of present requirements. The lily cut, too, is large and proves good property. The cut of bulbous stock is also heavy, and the better part of it has a fair market. Many of the jonquils offered are very fine. The sweet pea cut continues very large. Other offerings include calla and rubrum lilies, violets, orchids, lily of the valley, snapdragons, primroses, mignonette, Forget-me-nots and wallflowers.

NOTES.

Local florists are in receipt of cards from Jacksonville, Fla., from Ellis Woodworth, the Sefton Mfg. Co.'s representative.

MARKET OVERLOADED; PRICES SLUMP.

The market is "full and wobbly," not at all able to keep a straight course. Every line appears to be largely overstocked, with roses and sweet peas leading. Prices in these items and some of the other staples have broken badly, special offers in large lots showing great price concessions. Anyone who can find a market for flowers in a retail way should be able to gather in the "shekels" at a great rate, as really good stock was never so cheap as at the present time. To single out and comment on any one or more things would not describe the situation; just a great big overstock in all lines, which is likely to get worse before there is any relief.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE MEETING.

The farmers' institute meeting, under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, was held in Horticultural hall, Friday, March 5, afternoon and evening, and on Saturday afternoon. The procedings were very interesting. David Rust welcomed the farmers and gardeners who attended, and presided as chairman. The meeting was addressed by specialists on various subjects relating to farming and horticultural subjects. E. B. Dorsett, Mansfield, Pa., told of commercial fertilizers and how to use them. Roses was the topic chosen by Antoine Winsor of West Grove, Pa. How to spray fruit trees and the formula was told by Sheldon W. Funk, Boyertown, Pa. He laid particular stress on the riddance of the coddling moth. He illustrated his lecture with lantern slides. F. W. Card, of Sylvania, Pa., spoke of soil management, and handled the subject in a masterly way. James Boyd, of Harrisburg, Pa., spoke of hardy plants suited for lawns in the vicinity of this city. Dr. Robert Huey spoke very enthusiastically of the rose and illustrated his talk with beautifully colored lantern slides. F. W. Card, also with slides, gave a comprehensive talk on garden and lawn decoration. On Saturday, Geo. W. Kerr, one of W. Atlee Burpee & Co.'s experts, told of the great improvement in the sweet pea. E. B. Dorsett spoke of co-operation for the farmers. An alliterative talk by F. W. Card on "The Pig in Poke, Pasture, Pen and Parlor," followed and Mr. Funk wound up the meeting with "Home and Market Gardening." The proceedings were very interesting at all the meetings, but did not get the public recognition they deserved, the attendance being light. It has been eight years since the meeting was held in this city.

NOTES.

The discussion of E. A. Harvey's very interesting paper at the meeting of the florists' club last week was enlightening. Edward Reid, who explained that this was the anniversary of the founding of his business 22 years ago, gave some interesting details about the divine flower. He stated that as a rule growers in their desire to produce large flowers, left their stock on the plants too long—a flower had just so many days after coming to maturity to live, and most of this time should be spent with the customer who bought them, rather than in the hands of the grower. The moment they were far enough advanced to be cut, the preparation for shipping to the market should follow with the least delay. Some varieties, notably Alma Ward, would not mature if cut too young, while others could be cut young and would mature in water. Gathering the crop should be done scientifically; one of his growers used to pick his flowers, lay them in bunches of 25 on the tables exposed to the hot sun until the entire house had been gone over. They were then placed in water but were so wilted that while they partially recovered, they were never satisfactory. At Mr. Reid's suggestion each bunch as gathered was put in water at once, and there was a remarkable difference in their keeping qualities. With the competition of the dahlia in the early fall and the daffodil in the late winter and early spring, the season for the carnation appears to be ever shortening, and it should bring a better average price. He had always contended it was bad business to import bulbs to compete with flowers like carnations that were grown here. It was best to keep the money here and invest it in American products, and improve them and get a better market for them. Chas. E. Meehan said the problem was to find a market for the stock. If the retail florist could not handle the output, then it must be sold by the street men, department stores or through some other channel. David Rust spoke of the stock being packed at the grower's as ordered for the retailer, and going to him direct. J. C. Gracey thought this an excellent idea and that it would warrant an advance of 35 per cent in the price. Joseph Heacock facetiously thought it a good plan to buy direct from the growers, while Charles Meehan contended that if there were no commission men there would be no growers. Edward Reid and Samuel Pennock both said that much of the fault of the keeping qualities of the carnation lay with the grower, who held the flowers too long in order to get size. They contended that they would return more to the grower if shipped one day sooner. Mr. Reid contended that the grower who aimed to produce quality instead of quantity would win out every time over the quantity grower. He had learned quite early in his experience that "labor is cheap, but brains come high," and this applied through his business had been of great advantage to him. Mr. Harvey's plea that the carnation should be exploited through a publicity plan, and made a popular flower with the masses, is in fair chance of fullfilment, as the agencies for selling have increased wonderfully the past year or so. The 5 and 10c stores and the large department palaces are all now providing a prominent place in their stores for the sale of flowers, and there they are offered at low prices. Plants are also handled in quantity, and the desire of some commission houses to avail themselves of these outlets is so great that they now send the stock desired on sale, only the sold stock to be accounted for, the balance being returnable like yesterday's papers on the news stand. Could a grower wish a larger market than this plan opens up? If it works out with even a small profit, it looks like the millennium from the growers' standpoint, and an opportunity for new houses galore.

tains a dishpan full of ice to keep down the temperature. No cut flowers are delivered, they having to be carried away by the purchasers. Even with these primitive arrangements it is said a large business is done, due to the low, or seemingly low prices, at which the stock is offered.

The Gimbel Brothers' department store are to open a plant and cut flower department under the management of Walter Yates, who has made a specialty of growing plants for special sales to the various large department stores for some time. It is said that the appointments are to be first class, with every facility for up-to-date management of the business.

The M. Rice Co.'s new line of Easter plant baskets is worthy of this enterprising house, who are always originating and producing something up to the minute. The result of their salesmen's "cabinet meeting," after their tours through the retail stores of the country, is reflected in this work.

Robert B. Bragg, an A. B. commission man, succeeds Stuart Miller with Edward Reid. Robert is a hustler, and will find a great field for his energetic work with Mr. Reid.

The Leo Niessen Co. is strong on American Beauty and other standard roses. Spencer sweet peas are also a feature.

Berger's Central Market is making a strong bid for business with sweet peas. Their stock of Spencers is superb. K.

New York.

MARKET CONDITIONS UNCHANGED.

There has been little change in the condition of the wholesale cut-flower market since our last notes were written. In roses, the supply was not particularly heavy during the past week, but there were plenty, and the same can be said of carnations. There was no great surplus of American Beauty roses, but enough to supply the demand. The arrivals of other roses increased. Something may here be said relating to the new red rose, Hadley. There is a little very special stock of Hadley arriving that wholesales as high as at the rate of $35.00 and $40.00, but these are exceptions and not the rule. What is here mentioned have fine large buds and stiff stems. The next grade are fairly good buds, but weak stems, and the shorter Hadleys are no better, if as good as Richmonds of the same grade. It is not our purpose to reflect on this rose, which at its best is a fine production, but the question with some growers is: "Will it pay to grow it?" Jonquils have not been so plentiful during the past week, but another crop will soon be in. In tulips, lily of the valley and sweet peas there is more than enough to supply the demand. The Paper White narcissi seem to be pretty well cut out and prices remain firm. There is good white lilac on the market, but it moves slowly. In snapdragons, stocks and wallflowers, good stock is arriving, but it moves slowly.

NEW YORK SPRING SHOW
MARCH 17-23.

NOTES.

Herman Warendorff, the florist of the Ansonia hotel, and proprietor of several other stores throughout the city, has recently returned from a month's stay at Palm Beach, Fla. He is looking well and in fine spirits. He speaks highly of the horticultural features at that resort.

Horace E. Froment is receiving daily 50 to 60 boxes of roses from the L. B. Coddington range, Murray Hill, N. J., and he does not consider that a very heavy cut. Mr. Coddington, it may here be stated, has quite recovered from his recent illness.

A. F. Dwyer, the clever salesman for H. C. Steinhoff of West Hoboken, N. J., with salesrooms with the New York Cut Flower Co., is now handling fine pot roses of Tauschendon and Baby rambler.

The next attraction will be the spring flower show. Secretary Young, President Pierson and Manager Arthur Herrington are all very busy men, and it is hoped that their untiring efforts will bring success.

Frank Dinda of Farmingdale, L. I., N. Y., is shipping to Guttman & Raynor, Inc., very fine stock of his new white carnation, which he has appropriately named. Peace.

From the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., Joseph Millang is receiving exceptionally fine stock of Carnations Cottage Maid, Mrs. C. W. Ward and Matchless.

Harry A. Bunyard, president of the New York Florists' Club, left for Detroit, Mich., March 5, to deliver a lecture before the Garden Club of Michigan.

P. F. Kessler, of the Coogan building, is handling a fine stock of the Victoria jonquils; also fine tulips in variety.

Badgley, Riedel & Myer are handling fine snapdragons, as well as a good variety of bulbous stock.

Paul Meconi continues to receive large shipments of fine orchids and gardenias.

New York Florists' Club.

The monthly meeting of the club was held in the Grand Opera House Building on the night of March 8, President Bunyard in the chair. There was a very large attendance and great interest was manifested. The leading feature of the evening was the lecture by Prof. James Ross Lynch. Subject: Panama Canal. Description of the trip across the continent, via all routes, including the new Panama Canal route; seeing several points of interest, Yellowstone Park, the Grand Canon of Arizona, cities, etc., California, San Francisco and the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. Illustrated with stereopticon slides from actual photographs of the entire trip. The many remarkable and beautiful views shown were graphically described by the lecturer. The lecture must be heard, and the views seen to be fully appreciated. Prof. Lynch, at the close, was given a standing vote of thanks.

The outing committee of the club reported that the annual outing will take place on Wednesday, July 14, at Witzel's Point View grove. The steamer Isabel will convey the party to the grove. The prices of tickets will be: Gentleman and lady, $5; lady, $2.50; children under 12 years, $1.

The committee on a new home for the club reported progress. Thos. De Forest for the transportation committee to the San Francisco convention, reported progress. The flower show booth committee requested an appropriation of $200 for the purpose of properly taking care of visitors and decorating the booth, which was granted. F. R. Pierson for the spring flower show committee reported good progress and fine prospects for a successful show. He urged all exhibitors to have their plants in on Tuesday, March 16, as the show opens Wednesday, March 17. Mr. Colwell, of the publicity committee, spoke interestingly and asked for photographs of plants and flowers for the benefit of the publicity in their use. Trade tickets for the show will cost 20 cents each in lots of 100. For a less number the price will be 25 cents. Each member of the club in good standing will receive a season ticket for the show. Arthur Herrington, who will superintend the show, was elected to membership in the club. He made a stirring speech, urging all to pull together to make the show a great success.

Philip F. Kessler, chairman of the house committee, in behalf of his commitee, presented to members 125 handsome souvenirs in the shape of imported steins. The following were elected members: Wm. Bluethgen, Jr., Hudson Heights, N. J.; F. R. Newbold, 109 E. 72d street, New York; Arthur Herrington, Madison, N. J.; Chas. Webber, 174th street and Ft. Washington avenue, New York; Robert R. McAnney, Blue Point, N. Y.; Frank Dinda, Farmingdale, N. Y.

A challenge was received from the Tuxedo Bowling Club for a match with the New York club team. Though in the anouncement it was said to be "rose night," no roses appeared. Frank Dinda, Farmingdale, N. Y., exhibited his white seedling carnation, Peace, which scored 85 points and a fraction. It is, therefore, we believe, entitled to the final exhibit. Chas. A. Zvolanek, Bound Brook, N. J., exhibited orchid flowering sweet peas and was given a vote of thanks. Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, exhibited Cocos Weddelliana; award of merit. H. Lougeler, for M. van Waveren & Sons, Ltd., Hillegom, Holland, exhibited Narcissus poeticus, mignonette and single tulip, De Wet.

The dinner committee has announced that the annual dinner and dance will be held at Hotel Astor, Saturday evening, March 20, 1915.

BUSINESS ON PAR WITH YEAR AGO.

There seems to be quite a diversity of opinion as to business conditions among the flower growers and dealers at the present time, and about the best way to sum it up would be to say that the total volume of business for the months of January and February just passed, has been ahead of the same months of 1914, but collections are much more difficult to make this year than last and consequently cash will buy more now than a year ago. Flowers are more plentiful than ever before at the same time of the year, with quality improved with the exception of good cut roses, and not many of these grace our market just at present; however, another season will no doubt see improvements in the cut rose supply. Carnations are abundant in about four varieties, viz., Enchantress, White Enchantress, Beacon and the deeper pink Enchantress. With the exception of one firm, we have every one counting the old sorts good enough, and no new or up-to-date ones being grown. Lilies and bulbous stock is quite plentiful—very good in quality, too. There was no shortage of bulb supply, and in fact a rather increased supply, with present good flowers a proof of good quality. The present outlook favors abundance of lilies for Easter, with promise of A No. 1 quality, other kinds of bulbous stock in plenty, and early Easter will find the flowers at their best, with probably an oversupply of carnations. Home grown smilax and asparagus are scarce, but shipments come regularly from California that are good. Roses and violets arrive regularly and violets especially have been of high quality. Few of them are grown locally. The violet supply has been practically turned over to the California growers. The trip up from 'Frisco is quite a long one, but of late, practical methods of packing insures them in good condition when they arrive. The chrysanthemum season has been with us almost up to the present, until even the storekeepers could not bear the sight of them in the store, much less in the show windows. It is a well known fact that "all things hath a season," but too long a season sure is a monotony when you have to stand for big yellow 'mums.

NOTES.

The Van Slyke & Seamons Co. has a range of the best carnations in the northwest in good crop and about 25,000 first class rooted cuttings are already in. They have several of the late varieties, and Herald is simply ideal. Benora is very fine, although the flower not quite so large as some of the others. Enchantress Supreme is a real improvement. They are bringin a large supply of lilies, and will have them first class according to present promise. Their bulb supply is ample and of best quality. The Hayden-Watson Co., of which they own controlling interest, furnishes an outlet for a large percentage of the stock produced, and shipping orders call for the balance.

Northwestern Floral Co. has the entire place filled with good stock and has a very good call for shrubs—roses and nursery stock. Cut flower business is about same as last year, as are pot plant sales.

The Wheelarea range of greenhouses at American Lake, have lately been purchased by a firm of Japanese, and E. R. Roberts, who formerly conducted them, has surrendered his interest and management.

H. W. Manike says, "I can hardly tell how business is—sometimes good and sometimes bad, with plenty of good flowers always ready for the call."

A. A. Hinze has a lot of good stock of all kinds ready and coming on, and business the same as last year—more decorating to do than usual, however.

Smith Floral Co. are enjoying a good call at the store, and sales of pot plants are many—generally small and cheaper plants.

Business with California Florists may be classed alternately a "feast and then a famine." S. L. H.

Kentucky Society of Florists.

The Kentucky Society of Florists held their March meeting at the store of Jacob Schulz, Wednesday evening, March 3. The committee having in charge the matter of looking into the advisability of giving a fall flower show reported favorably, with the recommendation that the show be free to the public, and that no prizes be given. This report was received with much enthusiasm and enough space was spoken for by those present to warrant the society authorizing the committee to proceed with the preliminary steps of preparing for the show. The society also voted to give such assistance as lies within its power toward furnishing plants for the proposed school garden which has been promoted by some of the public-spirited women of this city. The board of education has granted the use of a large plot of ground connected with one of the schools, but furnished no means by which the grounds could be put in proper condition for use, or for the purchase of the necessary tools, plants and seeds to make the garden what it should and can be. These ladies have undertaken the task of supplying these needs, and the florists are going to assist with the donation of plants as far as possible.

TRENTON, MO.—Harry Witten has opened a seed store in the Masonic building.

T. LEE ADAMS, president and founder of the T. Lee Adams Seed Co., Kansas City, Mo., died March 3, age 65 years.

TUTTLE, OKLA.—The Tuttle Grain & Seed Co. has been incorporated by C. C. Davis, R. L. Park and M. E. Davis; capital $5,000.

TUBEROSE bulbs of the larger grades are in rather short supply. Contract growers who face low prices for cotton are easier in price.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. — Young David Burpee is said to be the youngest member of the Union League Club. He is taking on active duties in his father's business, where effciency is the slogan.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The A. J. Brown Seed Co.'s thirtieth anniversary catalogue has the largest sized page we have seen, being 10x13 inches. On the first inside page is a fine portrait of the founder.

MAIL order houses say their big Mondays come later each year. Some expect their record day for spring, 1915 orders, will be near April 1, about two weeks later than was formerly considered record date.

LONG ISLAND cabbage seed growers say the heads last fall were stunted and not fully matured on account of the long draught, and the past winter has been so mild and rainy it is feared at least one-half have rotted.

VISITED CHICAGO: E. M. Parmalee, of the John H. Allan Seed Co., Sheboygan, Wis.; Big Bill Galloway, of Galloway Bros., Waterloo, Ia.; A. E. McKenzie, Brandon, Man., traveling northwest with a 10-car bunch of onion sets.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade March 10 were as follows: Timothy, $5.50 to $7.25 per 100 pounds.—Leonard H. Vaughan, of Vaughan's Seed Store, celebrated his thirty-fifth birthday anniversary March 8.

ONIONS are down again. They took a jump from 20 cents per bushel to 60 cents on export sales of about 200 carloads. Since then prices have sagged back in a discouraging manner to about former level. Some truckers are curtailing their 1915 acreage.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—The St. Louis Seed Co. says: "Business in all lines has been very brisk for the last two weeks, local and also shipping, and prospects are for a very good spring in garden, field and flower seeds. We expect to do an especially good business in lawn seeds on account of the drought which killed most of the lawns in our territory the past season. We find the trade somewhat hampered on account of short deliveries of certain varieties. The trade on field seed, oats, clover and field corn is good."

Bar German Goods on Ships.

All goods of German manufacture or origin have been refused shipment by the Holland-American steamship line, sailing from Rotterdam, and by the Scandinavian-American line, of which Copenhagen is the sailing port, according to a cablegram received March 8 by August Bontoux, president of the International Forwarding Co., Chicago, with offices at 431 South Dearborn street. The word comes from the company's agent in Hamburg. Insurance on German products was refused when the British blockade went into effect, but goods were allowed by the forwarding companies to come to points of export, where they were held. Goods will now be refused at the factories, according to Mr. Bontoux.

Benary Protests.

Frederic Benary, the well known seed grower of Erfurt, Germany, requests us to give space to this protest against the statement of another seed grower.

In the English Horticultural Advertiser of January 20, and reproduced in the Nurseryman and Seedsman of the same date, the following may be read:

Dear Sirs: Have you heard about the treachery of the Germans belonging to the family Benary? Frederic Benary, as Colonel of Uhlans, came as far as Meaux, near Paris. At Coulommiers they stole a motor car belonging to a doctor, and with papers forged with stamped forms from the mayor's office, his nephew, son of John Benary, left in the blue motor car for Rouen, to blow up the bridges, especially the Pont de l'Arche. This is how I heard the news. Frederic Benary, fearing his nephew had been taken prisoner at Rouen, wrote to one of my clients, Mr. Gauthier, of Rouen, sending the letter via Italy and asking for news. When Mr. Gauthier made enquiries at the military office he found this was the German dressed as a French officer who had tried to blow up the bridges. I am surprised he has not been shot but hope he will be. Anyway, the notorious Fritz has had one son killed. We have struck off the names of the Germans and Austrians from our Society Nationale, and I hope your Royal Society will do likewise and scratch out the names of the Bosch enemies.

(Signed) A. Gravereau.

I was not a little astonished when I read this marvelous story in which a Mr. Gravereau has me advance to the high office of Colonel of Uhlans. The grain of truth in all the nonsense which Mr. G. writes is the following: The family of a nephew of mine, Captain T., in an engineer regiment, not having heard of him for five or six weeks, naturally in great anxiety about his fate, had asked me to beg of some of my business friends residing near Captain T's last quarters to try and find out what had become of him. Of the four firms to whom I applied three answered kindly that they would do their best to help me in the matter (and I may add that I have had several opportunities to do the same for French and Belgian customers who were anxious about the fate of their relatives). The fourth, Mr. Gauthier of Rouen, seems to have thought otherwise. It has since been found out that Captain T. had been, first, severely wounded and made a prisoner; second, called before a French court-martial and acquitted of any action not consistent with a soldier's duty who has to carry out the commands of his superiors); third, and finally imprisoned at F., where he will no doubt remain till the end of the war.

Mr. Gravereau is a seed grower near Paris who for many years supplied me with certain seeds and with whom I was on the best of terms. This man's son spent six months in 1908 at Haage & Schmidt's Nursery at Erfurt, and frequently received hospitality at my house. I leave it to your readers to judge of Mr. G's pious wishes for the fate of my sons. FR. BENARY.

Denaiffe Survives.

Sergeant John Colle Denaiffe, 120th regiment, French army, member of Denaiffe & Son, seed growers, Carignan France, who, in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of December 5, 1914, was reported killed, has now turned up alive and well, a prisoner of war, at Magdeburg, Prussia. He, with his regiment, had been in several engagements in Belgium, and when the onrush of the Germans began and the allies were pushed back, he fell wounded by a bullet through his thigh, at the battle of Belle Fontaine, only 15 miles from Carignan, on August 22. In the retreat he was left for dead on the field, but was taken by the Germans to their field hospital, and with careful treatment finally recovered from his severe wound, subsequently being transferred to a prisoners' camp in Germany. His young wife with two children, one two years of age, the other an infant of eight months, is now residing in Paris. She was successful in escaping from Carignan just as the German army captured that place, and finally reached Paris after many hardships.

The foregoing was received from Chas. Johnson, American agent of Denaiffe & Son, and similar information came from Conrad Appel, the well known grass seed specialist, of Darmstadt, Germany, about the same time.

SOW NOW---SPANISH PIMENTO SEED

or SWEET PEPPER, like we import from Spain—the best money-maker on the market as a plant or producer. I have grown plants that produced 94 ripe peppers to the plant. They are the most beautiful peppers grown, sweet as an apple and thick meat; weigh 38 lbs. to the bu. Sold on the open market in Columbus for $3.00 per bu. Will yield 500 bu. per acre. The Pimento Cheese is made from them in a fresh state, as you see from reference. I have a limited supply at $1.00 per trade packet or $2.00 per oz. Every greenhouse or gardener should have it. Sow early in March in temperature of 65 and treat as mangoes.

Mr. L. C. Adsit, Jamestown, Ohio. February 16, 1915.

My Dear Mr. Adsit: Your letter of February 8 at hand, and in reply will say that the pimento seed which we bought of you last spring germinated in the greenhouse and the plants bore an abundant supply of pimentoes.

We used the pimentoes for making our pimento cheese, and the quality was just as good as those that were imported from Spain.

Yours very truly, R. B. STOLTZ,

DREER'S

Twelve Valuable Cut-Flower Dahlias

Cactus Dahlia Lawine

Candeur (Cactus). A wonderful pure white, which in the fully developed flower more closely resembles an incurved Chrysanthemum than any other sort.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz ; $12.00 per 100.

Delice (Decorative). The most popular pink variety. Its beautiful soft, yet lively color, a glowing rose-pink, together with its perfect shape, stout, stiff stems, and the fact that when cut it retains its freshness for a long time, makes this one of the most valuable for cutting.
Field roots, 10c each; $1.00 per doz.; $8.00 per 100.

Flamingo (Decorative). As a cut flower this ranks in the same class with Delice, and it is the first of its type to flower, not only flowering early but continuously, and holding up in good shape to the end of the season. While it frequently shows an open center this rather adds to its attractiveness; in color it is a glowing rose-pink.
Field roots, 20c each; $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

Galathea (Cactus). A medium-sized flower appreciated for its delicate color, which is an even, tender soft pink.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Lawine (Cactus). White, with just a suggestion of blush as the flower matures; one of the best.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Mont Blanc (Decorative). The best all around white for cutting, flowers of good size, of good form, on good stems and very free flowering.
Field roots, 10c each; $1.00 per doz.; $8.00 per 100.

Miss Minnie McCullough (Decorative). One of the most popular autumn tints, rich bronze with yellow suffusion.
Field roots, 10c each; $1.00 per doz.; $8.00 per 100.

Mme. A. Lumiere (Decorative). Ground color white, suffused with red, the tips pointed with bright violet-red.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Nerthus (Cactus). Rich, glowing, bronzy, orange-yellow, passing to a carmine-rose at the tips, the whole suffused with a glowing, golden color.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Pink Pearl (Cactus). Mallow-pink at base of petal gradually shading to white at tips; a good flower.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Rheinkonig (Cactus). Pure snow white flowers of splendid form, 5 inches and over in diameter. These are of great substance, lasting splendidly when cut.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Wodan (Cactus). Bold, large, but not coarse flower, frequently 7 inches in diameter, of a pleasing, delicate salmon-rose color, shading to old-gold in the center.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Green Pea Aphis Control.

A preliminary report by Loren B. Smith, detailed by the state crop pest commission of Virginia, covering the results of experiments made during 1914 for the control of the green pea aphis at the Virginia truck experiment station, Norfolk, is covered in Bulletin No. 13, issued by that station under date of October 1, 1914. The pea aphis, a green plant louse, is one of the most troublesome and destructive pests that the growers of tidewater Virginia have to contend with. It first attracted attention in the United States by its ravages to the pea crop in 1899, and its destructiveness has since that time steadily increased.

In making the experiments at the station in the spring of 1914 a three and a half acre field of peas was employed. The varieties grown were Gradus, Thomas Laxton, Nonpareil and Pilot, the size of each plat being one-half acre. The number of aphids used in the determination of the percentage killed by the spray was found by counting the live aphids present on six feet long divisions of rows in the various plats. The first spray was applied April 20; the second, April 29; the third, May 12, and the results were as follows:

Using a spray consisting of four pounds of whale-oil soap in 50 gallons of water, it was estimated that approximately 60 per cent of the aphids were killed. The spray in this proportion was not of sufficient strength, and many of the aphids, especially the adults, recovered from its effects. Sprayed with whale-oil soap, five pounds to 50 gallons of water, another plat showed 68.7 per cent of the adults killed, 83.5 per cent of the half grown, while of the very young forms 96.2 per cent were killed, making an average of 82.6 of all the aphids killed by the spray on this plat.

On another plat, a spray of black-leaf "40," ten ounces to 50 gallons of water, showed to be effective only to the extent that 20 per cent of the aphids were killed. The physical properties of this spray were not as good as soap sprays, in that the soap acts as a spreader for the spray, and will work down in between the leaves, whereas the black-leaf "40" simply gathers in drops on the outside. A combination of black-leaf "40," ten ounces, and whale-oil soap, six pounds to 50 gallons of water, was also used, with the result that about 90 per cent of the aphids were killed, but the spray caused a slight injury to the tender parts of the plants.

A spray that proved effective to the extent of approximately 75 per cent was made with whale-oil soap, six pounds to 50 gallons of water. The soap solution, however, caused a slight injury to vines and pods, not sufficient, however, to appreciably decrease the yield.

The spray that gave the best and most satisfactory results was a combination of whale-oil soap, four pounds, and black-leaf "40," ten ounces to 50 gallons of water. In no case did it injure the vines, and it killed approximately 98 per cent of the aphids, the pest being apparently more susceptible to this combination spray than when the insecticides were used separately, even if in the latter case larger quantities were used. The plat used in this experiment yielded very heavily. The cost for spraying one acre for the season, using three applications, including cost of material, man and team, using 100 gallons of spray per acre, was $10.86.

In summing up, the recommendation is made to use one of the following formulae as a spray for the green pea aphis:

Black-leaf "40" (nicotine sulphate) 10 ounces; whale-oil soap, four pounds; water, 50 gallons.

Whale-oil soap, five pounds; water, 50 gallons.

Spray on a bright, clear day rather than on a cloudy one, as the liquid dries more readily, and is less likely to injure the vines, commencing operations within one or two days after the aphids are first found on the pea vines. Two or three sprayings may be necessary, especially if the lice are very numerous, the second spraying to come about one week after the first. Save time, labor and money by having spraying apparatus suitable for the work, and be sure to see that it is in good repair and working order before the spraying season commences.

Planting Plans.

The grower will have to decide in a few days in regard to his future plantings. If tomatoes are to occupy the houses this summer, little time can be lost, as a great deal depends upon an early start. Tomatoes do not mind a cool house, hence can very well be planted between the lettuce. While apparently such tomato plants make little growth in a lettuce house, they are at work below the surface making roots. Later on when the lettuce is removed, and the temperature is raised, such tomato plants respond wonderfully.

With cucumbers such treatment is not the best. We prefer to wait until the lettuce is all removed, then rush in strong 4-inch pot plants, and turn the heat on. A cucumber plant is easily checked and hard to recover. As a compensation for this a cucumber plant can be produced in less than one-half of the time required to put up a good tomato plant. Given a warm plant house we can turn out fine cucumber plants in 30 to 40 days.

Further, cucumbers can be planted much later in the spring than tomatoes, hence where one is a little at sea about a choice, and the season is advanced, the cucumbers should be preferred.

There is much uncertainty about the last lettuce crop. Sometimes growers make a rich haul by a late crop coming in late in April or early in May, as such a crop costs little to produce; it depends much on weather conditions in regard to the outdoor crop and to some extent upon competition. Too often we do the same thing as every one else and at the same time and a glut results, and next time, remembering this lesson, we all drop out at the same time, thus opening an opportunity for some lucky fellow.

As a spring tomato, Bonny Best is gaining friends rapidly. It has good color, is an early and easy setter, and vigorous enough to produce a good crop, while in size it is medium and beautifully uniform. MARKETMAN.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Henry B. Chase, Chase, Ala., President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.

Fortieth annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June 23-25, 1915.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. B. Knickman, representing McHutchison & Co., New York.

MONTANA HOUSE BILL 303, just filed, provides a complete code of laws regulating the inspection of nursery stock, etc.

PERRY, O.—Solon W. Call, aged 70, prominent nurseryman, was instantly killed when a train hit his automobile, February 22.

CARL CROPP, of Vaughan's Nurseries, Western Springs, Ill., is convinced that the Lombardy poplar must be transplanted when nearest to 1½-inch caliper to do best, its root development being meagre.

MARYSVILLE, CALIF. — Co-operating with County Horticultural Commissioner G. W. Harney, George P. Weldon, deputy state horticultural commissioner, will wage a fight against the white fly pest, which of late has again made its appearance in a light form on citrus trees.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—In its biennial report to the governor, filed February 25, the state horticultural commission recommends that Arbor day be changed from April 15 to April 1, arguing that the present date is entirely too late for the planting of trees and obtaining the best results. Observance of Arbor day is important, it comments, since it promotes, as nothing else would, an increase in trees and foliage.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—The consolidation of the Rockford Orchard Company with the Sinnissippi Orchard Company has been proposed by stockholders of the latter company. The interests of both companies are in the Bitter Root valley. The majority of stockholders of the Rockford company are local men and those of the other company are Rockford and Freeport men. It is said sentiment among members of both companies favor the consolidation.

Connecticut Nurserymen's Association.

The Connecticut Nurserymen's Association held its ninth annual meeting at the Hotel Garde, Hartford, Thursday, February 25. No new business came up. Reports showed the association to be in a flourishing condition, and one new member was added to the list. The election of officers resulted in the selection of the following for the ensuing year: W. E. Campbell, New Haven, president; C. H. Sierman, Hartford, vice-president; F. L. Thomas, Manchester, secretary; W. W. Hunt, Hartford, treasurer. The present members of the legislative and executive committees were retained, and the following were named as an entertainment committee: C. R. Burr, chairman; Charles Turner and E. A. Brazzil. A well-balanced programme, replete with subjects of more than usual interest by recognized authorities, was given, bearing on pertinent topics. The dinner at the Hotel Garde was a pleasant social feature.

F. L. THOMAS, Sec'y.

Am. Plums Originated from Wild Varieties

The wild North American plum has given rise to more cultivated varieties than any other of the native fruits except the grape. These varieties have mainly originated in the Mississippi Valley, Iowa alone having furnished 175, Minnesota 74, and South Dakota 44. In Texas 97 varieties have originated. In these western and southern regions where several of the species appear to have reached their greatest perfection in the wild condition, the greatest development in the future, under cultivation, may probably also be expected to take place, according to a new bulletin of the United States department of agriculture (No. 172) entitled "The Varieties of Plums Derived From Native American Species."

The new publication is a professional paper which should be of especial interest to the growers of fruit, particularly those engaged in plum breeding. It gives a list of native varieties and hybrids showing the origin of each variety and the species to which it belongs, which should be of considerable value to the nurseryman and orchardist, who may receive the bulletin if they will apply to the editor and chief, division of publications, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

SACRAMENTO, CALIF. — Sacramento county has over 10,000 acres on which almonds could be profitably grown, says F. B. Brosius, deputy county horticultural commissioner, although reports at the present time do not indicate as heavy planting as last season. The Drake seedling is perhaps the most popular almond in the county, due to the fact that it is a more uniform producer and a heavy one. It is also later blooming, from two to three weeks after the other varieties. This is an advantage where the blossoms are liable to injury from frost.

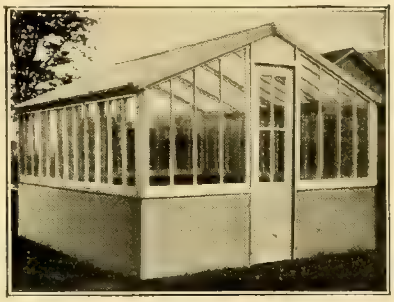
Two layers of glass instead of one



One small inexpensive greenhouse made of Sunlight Double Glass Sash.

Early plants make the profitable garden

You cannot possibly have vegetables ready for the early prices or flower beds to bloom right unless you use hot-beds and cold frames for starting and expediting them.

Now is the time

Sunlight Double Glass Sash make the earliest and strongest plants at the least cost of labor and money. They are complete without mats or shutters. As they are never covered the plants get all the light and warmth that the sun affords and are secure against the cold night and day.

Expert gardeners and florists, men who know from experience, look upon the Sunlight Double Glass Sash as the standard of efficiency in gardening.

Immediate shipment is made and freights are equalized to the customer according to the distance. Ask about this when you write—and write today.

Get our catalog

This book points the way to bigger profits in gardening. It gives the actual experience of growers all over the country—tells how they, with the aid of Sunlight Double Glass Sash grew bigger, stronger, earlier plants which yielded the big, early market prices.

This catalog is free. If Prof. Massey's booklet on the care and use of a hot-bed, cold frame or a small greenhouse is wanted, send 4c in stamps.

TWEMLOW'S

OLD ENGLISH GLAZING PUTTY

LIQUID AND ELASTIC,

For Bedding Glass in Sash or for Filling Cracks or Seams in Roof Joints or Frames of Greenhouses or Hot Beds.

☞It is used in Machine or Bulb. If too thick for bulb thin with a little Pure Linseed Oil, boiled. So thinned, it can be brushed into any crack or leak, making a solid filling. It makes a solid bed, impervious to moisture, and holds glass in its place, and will stop any crevice or fault. When once set on dry wood it does not heave. As regards the goods, the article is no new invention, but simply an article of the very best class, to do thoroughly good work, like old-time gentlemen expected when sashes were made with lead, and small panes of glass used that caught the water and leaked unless set with an elastic putty, which once set by a mechanic was expected to remain, and did remain in good shape. This Twemlow's Old English Glazing Putty does; nothing more, nothing less.

Twemlow's Old English Putty used the country over. Made by HAMMOND'S PAINT AND SLUG SHOT WORKS, BEACON, N. Y.

Haste, Spring, or Linger.

Arm, arm, anemone!—
  Up, lazy daffodil!—
You sleepy, sleepy willowbud,
  Art dreaming, dreaming still?
For shame, you tardy violet!
  For shame, you recreant rose!—
Hark, how the herald jonquil now
  His golden trumpet blows!
A good month's march to vanward
  Of the spring's embattled train
He sounds his ringing challenge 'gainst
  The lances of the rain—
Ho, blooms!—charge down the wooded slopes
  Upon your wintry foes!
Up, up! The gallant jonquil now
  His golden bugle blows!

—New York Sun.

SUGGESTIONS FOR EASTER.

Easter Preparations.

Easter, the great flower day of the year, is now almost at hand and the growers and retailers must both be prepared to meet the demand that will probably tax all the ability and capacity possessed. The grower has, of course, been a long time making preparations to have the stock in the pink of condition and the retailer should also provide himself with all the necessary stock and accessories at as early a date as possible. The supplies should be procured at least two weeks before the great day, so that the energies of all the force can be expended upon finishing the product, waiting upon the trade and seeing that the deliveries are properly made and the decorations arranged in an artistic manner. The stock of baskets for plants, ribbons and decorating them and tying the flowers, paper, boxes and numberless other supplies should all be looked over and where necessary replenished. It is poor business to wait until the last minute and worry over these details which can be attended to early and take time that can be more advantageously spent with the other necessary work. There will probably be something called for, the sale of which cannot be foreseen, so it is best to get everything that it is known will be required as early as possible.

Whatever plants are to be procured should be ordered early, and wherever it is possible a visit made to the growers' houses and a personal selection made. The winter has been unusually trying, with prolonged dark weather, and it has been difficult in many cases to keep up the right temperature, and even where the heat has been maintained the plants have been retarded, so that much will depend on the three weeks before Easter to have them in the best of condition, and it will pay the buyer to look over the stock. This should be done early, for the large buyers sometimes place their orders two months before Easter in order that they may be assured of the stock and of a good selection. No two plants grow alike and although as far as descriptions go they are the same, in pot, size and bloom, yet placed side by side one may be much more valuable than the other, so there is much in selection, and it is a great advantage to anyone to go and inspect the plants in the greenhouses and to pick out the ones desired and have them held until the proper time of delivery. If baskets of plants are to be made up, and this is one of the growing features of the Easter trade, a supply of small ferns, asparagus and other greens will be necessary to properly finish them and these can be obtained at any time and be on hand when wanted. To successfully conduct a business when such a large increase for a few days is expected, it is necessary to do everything that can be done previous to the demands of the customers and at as early a date as possible.

Rambler Roses for Easter.

The rambler roses now occupy a very important place with the principal stores. The great improvement in varieties which has been made during the past few years has enabled the grower to present these beautiful plants in a great variety of colors ranging from the brightest crimson through the shades of pink to white, and the Baby rambler produces a fine small plant well covered with bloom. The ramblers are grown not only in bush form, but in many grotesque shapes, being trained as ships, umbrellas and in basket form. Hydrangeas, if well bloomed, are among the most popular Easter plants and they are very decorative, either in church or residence. While these can never be grown and offered at low prices, for a plant with four to six large heads will require much valuable space for a long period, yet they last a long time in bloom and the purchasers get their full value if they will but take proper care of the plant. Spireas are one of the best low-cost plants of the time. The older varieties make a splendid show for a little money and can be used very largely in church decorations. In selling the plant or in placing it in a decoration be sure that it is well watered before it leaves the store or greenhouse. Genistas are grown in quantity for Easter and many growers have them in fancy forms, such as baskets, pillars, pyramids and balls. Another yellow flowering plant that is highly regarded in some sections is the acacia, beautifully grown specimens of these plants being displayed by the large dealers. Cyclamens in splendid shape are invariably offered for Easter and primulas, especially P. obconica, are grown extensively for sale at this time and many of the heaths are produced for the Easter trade. Another beautiful plant that is largely grown is the bougainvillea, and splendid specimens are produced of this showy plant and they always attract attention.

Plant Baskets for Easter.

The sale of plant baskets at Easter is made as important a feature as it is at Christmas and they occupy a prominent place in the trade of the principal stores. They can be made up in beautiful combinations at this time, for there is a wealth of material for this work. The baskets can be procured at very low prices with metal pans in which the plants are placed, and by careful planning and buying, taking combinations can be put up at reasonable prices. A point that seems to be lost sight of by many growers is that in these plant baskets or boxes can be used much stock that cannot be disposed of in any other way. The most successful and careful grower of plants is sure to have some that are not perfect specimens, either growing more or less one-sided, or having one part not well covered with bloom; and these can be used advantageously in their plant combinations, making the basket less expensive and at the same time getting good returns for what would otherwise be a loss. This is a line of the business which ordinarily requires a fair degree of salesmanship to properly show the advantages of these beautiful offerings, but when they are properly put up and well shown they are a valuable feature of the Easter trade.

Easter Plants.

Easter has become a great plant day, not only for church decorations, but it has also been a growing practice with the public to make presents of blooming plants to friends at this time. First among these are the lilies which are grown by the thousands for the day. With all the disadvantages of weather and temperature which the grower has experienced this year, it looks as if the supply would be good. The general reports are that most of the stock is of excellent quality. The prices quoted, notwithstanding the increased cost of growing, are about the same as in previous years. Next to the lilies are the azaleas, and these are in very fine condition. The varieties grown are those which have attained the greatest popularity with the trade. Mme. Van der Cruyssen, Prof. Wolters, Empereur de Brazil, Niobe, Dr. Moore, Apollo, Bernard Andrea Alba, De Schryveriana and others not so well known. Bulbs are always grown in great quantities for Easter and thousands of pans of tulips, narcissi and hyacinths are annually bloomed for this great flower day. They make a gorgeous show and are emblematic of the awakening of spring which Easter symbolizes, and as they can be produced and marketed at a low price they are great favorites at this time. Lily of the valley in pans are one of the most popular Easter plants and these when well grown find a very ready sale.

Advertising Flowers.

The way to advertise flowers is a problem many florists have tried to solve with varying success. The following, quoted from a recent issue of the New York American, tells how August Lange, the well known Chicago retailer, made small display advertisements pay. This newspaper devoted a quarter page of its space in appreciation of the idea, advising its patrons to do likewise:

"In the city of Chicago there is a florist who grew tired of standing around waiting for business to come to him. While his roses wilted and lost their bloom, he pondered over the problem. Many plans were presented to him. He devised many schemes of his own. But when he sifted them to the bottom he found them defective. No matter which way his mind turned, it encountered advertising, but knowing nothing about advertising, he considered it impossible on account of his preconceived idea regarding the expense. He finally sought the advice of a small merchant who constantly used the newspapers in a modest way. 'How can I advertise flowers successfully?' he asked. The small merchant thought a moment and then suggested: 'Why don't you sell—every Saturday—a box of flowers for a dollar? Offer something different each week. Give more flowers for a dollar than any one in Chicago ever heard of, and see that they are fresh and attractive.' 'I'll do it,' declared the florist, as he hurried away to prepare for his first sale. That was several years ago. Today that once discouraged florist sells more flowers than any other florist in Chicago. Thousands of those dollar boxes find their way into the homes of the 'Windy City' each week. Hundreds are shipped to customers in the surrounding territory. Today that florist is big, but he is growing bigger. He is rich, but he is growing richer. He confines himself to small space and is a firm believer in newspaper advertising. He not only sells flowers for a dollar a box, but he is recognized as one of the leading florists of the middle west. He has captured the better proportion of the so-called high-class trade in every branch of his business. He advertised flowers at a bargain price, but—he realized that nature does not impose upon God's creatures in the manufacture of flowers. The violet is as fragrant and beautiful in the dooryard of the peasant as it is in the garden of the king. By advertising he created a wonderful reputation for selling the best at the lowest prices. He accomplished all this by advertising—starting in a small way."

In the Store at Easter.

MAKING THE MOST OF THE OPPORTUNITY.

Some men have said "There is nothing in a holiday rush." While there is a large business, yet the waste, the stock left over, the extra help and other incidental expenses, very nearly, if not quite equal the profits. Others there are, and they constitute a great ma-majority, who are alive to the importance of the holiday times, such as Christmas and Easter, and bring all their business acumen to bear to make the most of the opportunity. At such busy seasons one is sure to see the great majority of his customers as well as a great many strangers, occasional flower buyers, who, if they are pleased, may be brought into and become regular patrons of the store. To please the old and encourage new customers, the enterprising florist puts his whole heart in the work and gets together a stock, staple and varied, with all the new things of merit that he thinks will suit his trade.

SELECTING AND ARRANGING THE STOCK.

It is the exception that really good things are left after the holidays; mediocre and damaged things hang fire; also stock not just right for the market. This latter is the cause of much of the waste. Buying stock because it is cheap or offered at a low price, is the poorest kind of policy; better have 50 choice plants, each as good as the other, than 100, half or more of which are seconds, as a few bad or indifferent looking plants will spoil an otherwise good stock and cheapen the whole lot. Better pay a little more and get the choice, buying 75 rather than 100 for the same money. Each plant will be salable, and the waste, if any, will be reduced to the minimum. In the average city store, plants that sell for less than 50 cents, or more than from $5.00 to $8.00, are to be avoided. The cost of delivery is too great for the low-priced plant, and while a few higher priced or choice specimens stand out and help the appearance of the store and may find customers, the popular price for a gift plant is from $2.50 to $5, and as a rule but few of this class will be found on hand when the inventory is taken.

It is not best to get the stock all in early in the week; the rush days are the last three, and by Saturday, Monday's stock is in rather bad shape. Many city stores could not begin to get all they handle in the store at one time. In some the space is so limited that they sell from sample and fill orders from stock in an annex rented for the week as near the store as possible.

The successful handling of the large volume of business depends largely upon the systematic way in which the work is carried out. If the right quantity of the different grades of stock is well bought, and is ordered for different periods of the week, all this detail being settled before the business opens, there is then time for other pressing matters, of which the proper arrangement of the various plants is of much importance. As far as possible keep each kind of plant together; a block of hydrangeas, another of azaleas, the whites together, the pinks alongside, the same with roses and lilies and the specimen plants elevated on pedestals. A number of plants together are more attractive with their solid red or pink than a promiscuous harlequin of color. The baskets and pans of bulbous stock should have a place for themselves, as their decorations should have space to be seen.

Seeing that stock is properly watered is very important; plants that are delivered dry, particularly in the afternoon, are a sorry sight the next morning in the average dwelling, and much trade has been lost through vexations of this kind. Hydrangeas particularly, are great drinkers, and should be given water freely. Should complaints come in of this character, don't argue, but send a new plant. It will pay—better lose $1 at first than $10 later on.

EFFICIENT DELIVERY IMPORTANT.

As far as possible deliver all cut flower orders on Sunday morning. A good system is to have one or two men who know the trade select the flowers. When Saturday's business is finished, the cut flowers, kept in their original boxes, are brought out, the stock for each order selected is then given with the addressed tag and card to the other employees, who carefully box them up, pinning the address tag on the box, which goes to the wrapper, and is soon ready for routing. When all orders are up, then begins the routing, which, if carefully done, greatly expedites delivery.

RECIPROCATING FAVORS.

Easter is a good time to pay debts. One feels they are under obligations to this or that person, who are in a position to do the house a favor, and who have on occasion remembered them, or thrown work in their way. A nice lily, azalea or rose, or perhaps a box of flowers, a corsage of violets or other flower, will be much appreciated by the recipients, and is hardly missed from the stock necessary to be carried. Many an unsold plant has gone to waste that might have been turned to account in this way.

SOME POPULAR ARRANGEMENTS.

A few of the good sellers that are not seen in every stock are worth nothing. The lily is the great Easter plant, and combination plants of these, although high priced, generally find buyers. Get a sugar pail or bucket about 12 inches in width and 10 inches in depth, take off the handle, give two or three coats of white paint, and then gild the iron bands. When planted with lilies these tubs have a rich appearance and readily bring $5 to $6 from those who can afford them. Pans of bulbous stock, if planted in larger pans and edged with maidenhair fern, sell readily at almost twice the original price. A new box this season, and a very practical one, has a lattice at the back, giving a trellis effect: another advantage is that all the plants are arranged to show to the front, so that the display is much greater, as all are seen at once, nothing being lost to view on the other side. This is an enlargement of the small imported trellised box placed on the market last season. It will have a great run at Easter this year.

On Time.

"Punctuality is the life of trade" is a maxim that should be posted in every flower shop; there is no business in which promptness of delivery counts for as much as that of the florist. To attain any degree of success the house must get a name for promptness. It is at times difficult to live up to such a reputation, but it is worth overcoming all obstacles to get and keep the name clear in this respect. System is a great help and this together with keeping an hour or two ahead of the schedule relieves the pressure and prevents congestion. There are times, of course, when everything appears to be late—this may be caused by a rush that might perhaps have been avoided if the next day's work had been looked over before the store was closed. Work to go out early in the morning should as far as possible be prepared the night before. The first thing in the morning is the funeral work, and very often this comes in bunches, a good deal to do at one time, and then a lull. It is these rushes that one must be as far as possible prepared for. First, see that there is sufficient stock; if not, it should have been secured the night before and save the time wasted in good help and delay in making up the next day. Very often late orders come pouring in and demanding instant attention. If the work on hand is well under way these commissions can be given proper attention and are much more satisfactory to all concerned. The vital matter of profit is also very often overlooked in the excitement of the various rushes that at times strike the average flower shop. Much stock is used that is more expensive than need be, because it is pensive than need be, because it is handy and there is not time to get more.

When everybody is working under pressure and the clock is making overtime in its hurry, it is very annoying to have to spend five minutes at the telephone in explaining why the flowers are not there to a nervous and oftimes indignant customer.

Always be prepared with boxes for delivery, as when it is discovered at the last minute that there is nothing on hand large enough the piece has to be packed in a misfit, or hastily constructed, box made out of two smaller ones and the result is anything but business-like. Orders should be marked an hour in advance of the time wanted, and while this is known in the store, it has its effect in keeping things moving. Often when a number of orders are to go in one direction, yet are several hours apart, it is best to get them all up in time to go out with the earliest to be delivered and save after delay, as at times it seems as if orders come from all points of the compass; the routes are long, all the boys are soon out, and it requires careful studying to keep up to the schedule. The light-running autos like the Ford and other similar cars are fast coming into general use with those who have constant work for them and they have constant very satisfactory. Suburban deliveries are greatly facilitated by the use of these speedy machines.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery.

WRONG IMPRESSIONS.

You will hear with your ears wide open.
You will see with your eyes taking keen observation.
Doing both, you will commence "to think" and reason.

Not long ago I had the pleasure of watching a good, high-class retailer, one of the kind that do not associate with the ordinary florist, but who have placed themselves on a perch almost near enough to reach St. Peter himself. A little Florists' Telegraph Delivery argument was begun, and to my surprise this man made the assertion that he would not handle any telegraph order for less than four dollars. My first shot at him was, that the man send-out small orders, many times follows along with larger ones. This argument did not seem strong enough with him, so standing alongside of his daily delivery, I sized up the parcels with the addresses on them. Among them were some pot tulips and hyacinths, which sell for $1.50 to $2.00.

Now tell me, please, Mr. Businessman Retailer, what is the difference between a person coming in from the street and purchasing a $1.50 or $2.00 plant, and maybe take a half hour of your time to select this, or whether a messenger boy brings in a telegram from some out-of-town florist for an order amounting to $2.00 for a flowering plant? Think this over very carefully and let me hear from you. Please do not think that I am an advocate of relaying small orders, but let me assure you that I am true to the standard of the retail florist business. There are as many small and queer criticisms passed by retailers, who at a second thought, or rather taking enough time to think before they speak, feel really sorry for putting up some ridiculous arguments.

I hope some one will challenge the above arguments and write an article on such problems; it may help a great many of our florist brothers, and I am surely willing to learn and hear what the other fellow thinks Hotbeds.

A row or two of well fitted-up hotbeds are a great help to every grower of bedding plants. They can be started up soon after the middle of March, a time when the bedding plants are crowding the benches in the greenhouse to their utmost. The plants that need bottom heat can then be transferred to the hotbeds, making room on the benches for other lines of stock which do not require the strong bottom heat.

The cemetery greenhouse departments growing a large number of alternantheras and other plants that must have bottom heat to push them along for spring planting, consider the hotbed a very important part of their equipment, and have large sections of them in use. These are usually steam-heated beds and are a big improvement over the manure-heated hotbed. The frames are mostly made of 2-inch planks, the outside measurements 18 inches high on the north side and 12 inches on the south and wide enough to carry the standard six-foot sash. The inside of the frames are filled with a light soil up to about 12 inches of the sash on the north side, sloping it down to eight inches on the south. The method of heating the beds we have in use is to sink three lines of 1½-inch steam pipes about 12 inches deep, one line in the center and one each at equal distances towards the back and front of the frame. A valve is fitted at the end for turning the steam on or off as required, and on the other end there is an air tap, which is kept partly open at all times to give circulation. These lines of pipe do not have returns to the boilers. The steam pipes are covered entirely with soil, making an even solid bed. Before putting any plants in the frames, the steam is turned in two or three days ahead to thoroughly warm up the beds. It takes but a little while for the temperature of the beds to run above 85 or 90 degrees and this is where the valve comes in useful for regulating the heat. It is seldom necessary to have the steam running through the beds continuously, but it is very important that the sides of the frames are in good repair; a cold draft blowing in will quickly chill the tender plants growing in this high temperature. Small blocks of wood should be provided for airing the frames when it is necessary. The principal object for using hotbeds, as before stated, is to give bottom heat to such plants as require it, so as to hurry their growth to make plants ready for bedding out when needed. The alternanthera is the most important of these plants and should be put into the beds as soon after March 15 as the weather will permit. They can be potted into 2, 2¼ or 2½-inch pots, according to their size or what is desired of them. Most of our stock is potted into 2-inch because we can sequeeze so many more plants in a frame.

After the soil is loosened up and levelled off, the pots are plunged in to their rims, each pot touching the other. With a little care in doing this work a neat job can be done and a hundred feet of hot bed made to hold a large number of plants. The alternanthera will need the bottom heat longer and stronger than any other plants, consequently it is best when it can be done to give them frames to themselves. Begonias, lobelias, dusty millers, ageratums, etc., that are put into the hotbeds to get a quick start, and after they are well started must be given less heat and hardened off, can be handled in a frame together, then if necessary the steam can be shut off and more ventilation given or the sash removed entirely during the daytime.

There are many uses that the hotbeds can be put to, especially by the small grower who has not greenhouse room with sufficient heat to properly care for all the plants he grows. If the frame is built higher, freshly potted palms can be given a good start by plunging them in the hotbed. The same is also true of cannas, dracænas, crotons and many other plants.

Vegetable plants are a good side line that the florist in the country towns can handle to good advantage if he has the hotbed room. Tomato, eggplant, peppers, cabbage and cauliflower plants are always in good demand in their season. These plants are best handled in flats. The seed should be sown in flats and held in the greenhouse until large enough to transplant. They can then be transplanted into shallow flats and set into the hotbeds, airing and removing them to cooler quarters to harden them off before offering for sale, but any hardening off must be done gradually or the plants will receive a check which will take them a long time to recover from. Sweet potato plants are another item that there is a good call for. The tubers of these should be cut in two and placed in the soil of the hotbed with cut side down and slightly covered with soil. Do not water until the sprouts are well started, and then only sparingly, because the tubers rot quickly if watered too much.

To furnish heat for manure-heated hotbeds, decomposing horse manure is the material used. The material should be turned over two or three times, and if it shows signs of drying out, dampen it down a little, but it must not be soaked or the heat will leave it, rendering it useless for hotbed purpose. The amount of manure required for a hotbed depends greatly on the location and the size of the bed; a deep bed of manure will last a great deal longer than a shallow one, as well as giving a higher temperature. The frames for this class of hotbed should be made so that they can be carried around, and after their work is done they can be stacked up to dry out a bit before storing them for the winter. The frames can be made the same height as those for the steam heat, and after the manure is thoroughly warmed through, it should be placed in the frame, packing it down well until a solid bed of manure about 12 inches deep is made. The outside of the frames should also be banked up to the top with manure, care being taken to make it solid enough to stay there. The beds should then be left a few days for the manure to settle. Then the fine soil can be put on and they are ready for the plants.

THE ROSE.

Richmond and Killarney.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

At what stage of growth should Richmond and Killarney roses be pinched to secure longer stems? Should the blind wood be cut out of Killarney roses? F. S.

South Dakota.

Replying to the above we will state that it doesn't really make much difference in what stage of growth the Richmonds are pinched in order to produce longer stems, unless one desires to time a certain crop sometimes. To retard a crop somewhat, when cropping for Christmas, for instance, the buds can be left on until they are well colored, and then pinched two eyes below the buds. At other times, the buds are taken about the time they attain the size of a garden pea. They should then be snapped out at the second leaf below the buds. The growth at this stage is soft and brittle, and one can usually discern the proper eye to pinch back to, as the eyes will be well formed at this stage and should be plump. Younger growth can be pinched, but one is apt to go too low or too high if the bud hasn't formed. It is seldom necessary to thin out any blind wood that is carrying good foliage.

On Killarney often a blind growth will break into clusters at the end of the growth; by cutting this back to a good eye they usually produce fair blooms. The only time it is practicable to take out the blind wood is when pruning the plants in summer after resting them preparatory to carrying them over. E.

Care of the Stock.

The rose cuttings should not be allowed to become over-rooted in the sand, as stated previously. The roots, when about ½-inch or so in length, are right, as very few are broken when potting off. With the exception of American Beauty, the other varieties can be potted into 2¼-inch pots, but American Beauties will take 2½-inch, except perhaps where the wood taken was rather small.

The soil should be a stiff loam, containing considerable root fibre, to which mix about one part well rotted cow manure, to four parts loam. Screen both through ½-inch mesh screen, and have the soil slightly moist when potting, and when potting settle the soil principally by thumping or jarring the soil down firmly instead of pressing with the fingers too much, as this will break many tender roots. Roses should never be potted with a rush, but handled skillfully and carefully. Do not take out too many at a time and those that are being potted should be kept in a flat, covering the bottom of same with a layer of wet moss. After potting, select the very best place you can find on the range to receive them; a bench that gets lots of sunshine, and one that is far enough away from the ventilators to avoid draughts. The sides of the bench should not be higher than the pots after a good layer of screened coal ashes has been firmly packed on same. Never plunge the pots—water thoroughly and shade carefully through the middle of the day, if bright, until new root action is noticed. Then the shading can be discontinued. The shading as prescribed for the propagating bench can be employed for this purpose; that is, light cloth tacked to light wood frames. Do not shade with newspapers by laying them directly over the plants. This will exclude the air too much. If papers are used, elevate them. Spray during bright weather daily, and water carefully with a can, first spouting the dry plants that may be found here and there, and never let the soil get dry. Try to strike the happy medium, which is just wet enough to pack firmly, but not soggy. Shift all rose stock after each growth is well opened, or, in other words, do not let two growths be made in one size pot. Suggestions for shifting will follow in season.

EASTER BASKET BY W. W. ADAMS, CHICAGO.

Rhododendrons, Faster Lilies and Pussy Willows.

Do not let the grafted stock become crowded on the bench, as they grow so rapidly as a rule that they will become drawn and make a spindly growth. When removing the grafts from the case, examine the ties carefully and replaee where found broken or unwound. Set the plants in rows, touching each other crosswise the bench, and give them room by spacing between the rows. This will enable one to syringe forcibly, without upsetting the plants, and also spray from a different side of the bench daily. If the red spider is kept from the young stock, one seldom has much trouble later, as very often the spider accumulates on the mother, or pot plants, close to the pots, and later, when planted out, infects the new wood. Grape dust, dusted over the young growth twice a week, will keep the mildew in check, care being taken not to be too heavy handed, and also to clean the plants thoroughly between dusting, by spraying. All grafting or propagating should be finished up by the middle of March, if possible, otherwise, unless one has especial facilities for carrying on this work (as found on some of the larger places) the strikes will be very poor and those that do come will be weaklings.

Of course the old plants will need some real looking after just now while the going is good. If the plants are vigorous, they will now want strong feeding, but, if weak or watery looking from over forcing, etc., feeding won't help them; if they are healthy, the foliage is of good color, the growths are quite short and very red in color; in the young stage they are perhaps somewhat starved from the lack of both food and water. These plants will (like the vigorous growing ones) now take a good, substantial mulch of rather fresh cow manure. Do not have them dry at the root when watering in a heavy mulch. American Beauties will require a little stronger feeding than most varieties with the exception, perhaps, of Richmond. Radiance is also a good strong feeder; also Sunburst when breaking freely on own root stock. Care should be taken after mulching, though, to avoid streaking the foliage by breaking up the mulch frequently by hand, to allow a certain amount of air to reach the soil, greatly assisting the evaporation. It is a good idea to rush the mulching along and follow with the watering while the manure is in a state to be readily broken up with the water under pressure, otherwise if the manure becomes crusted, half of the strength of the manure will be wasted. Do not attempt mulching until all of the plants have been gone over and carefully tied, and gotten out of the way as much as possible, and the beds gone over, removing all of the loose trash, etc., from previous mulches, and if the soil is almost even with the siding, it would be best to nail an inch strip to the top of the siding so that none of the mulch will be wasted. Later on when quantities of water will be used, the usefulness of this additional height to the sides of the beds will be fully appreciated.

FLORISTS' PALMS.

Spring Preparations.

The approach of Easter, with its hurry and hard work, does not affect the palm grower to the same degree it does the grower of flowers and flowering plants, from the fact that it marks in some measure the close of the season in foliage plants, the majority of the retail dealers buying but little of the latter stock after the great floral festival is over.

But in the case of those who grow for their own retail and decorating trade, the passing of Easter means that to some extent at least the plants that have been in use for decorating will now be off duty, and the plants that have had frequent exposure to gas, possibly in some cases a nip of frost, and various other injuries, will be showing the effects of a more or less strenuous season, and will be much in need of repair. Some of the palms will doubtless be too far gone for repairs, and may better be thrown away, but there are others that may be shaken out and repotted, have the leaves trimmed up in the same artistic way in which our continental friends used to trim some of the kentias that were set aside for less discriminating customers, and after a summer of careful cultivation be once more of considerable value for decorative purposes. Some of these plants may have but three or four leaves left on them, and in that case it may be better to shake out, or wash out, the old soil from the roots, and then to put two or three of such plants together in a small tub, being sure to pot firmly, and to see that the plants are thoroughly watered afterward, so that the soil will be moistened through. Such plants should be placed in a shaded greenhouse, syringed frequently in bright weather, and given a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees, and the addition of a little bottom heat will help to start them into growth.

If, as so frequently happens, the plants have accumulated a stock of insects during the season, the best time to remove them is before the plants are repotted, as the process of cleaning, unless done very carefully, is liable to loosen the plants in the soil, and thus give them a check. For the removal of scale insects, there are numerous good soap solutions, such as fish oil soap, sulpho-tobacco soap, and others, all of which have their friends among the growers, but generally speaking these soaps will do their work with less chance of injury to the plants if the latter are protected from the sun for some hours after the soap treatment has been given. The sun gains strength very rapidly at this season, and the palm houses need shade in most instances by February 15, unless a specially cloudy period of weather be experienced about that date. This does not mean that a heavy shading is required, but simply sufficient to keep a comfortable atmosphere in the houses, and at the same time to avoid the possibility of having some of the foliage spoiled by burning from the combination of the sun's rays and defective glass. Syringing should still be done before noon, thus giving the foliage a chance to dry off before night, and as a matter of regular practice, this operation should only be done in the afternoon during hot and dry weather in the summer, such, for example, as we frequently experience in the latter part of June and during July, and during such a period the plants may need spraying twice during the day.

It is safe practice to begin airing the palm houses at 75 degrees on a bright morning, although they may run higher than this after some ventilation has been given. A rise of 15 degrees from the night temperature is a reasonable rule for the day temperature of most plants under glass, and in many instances a few degrees higher will do no harm.

The general repotting of all the palms that are in condition for handling will soon be in order, and this means a general clean up, some repairs, fresh material upon which to set the plants, whether it be ashes, gravel or sand, and a good deal of work—and this work will move along much more smoothly if proper preparation be made beforehand, such as an abundant supply of soil under cover, in order to be independent of the weather, plenty of pots in the various sizes, lumber for repairing benches, and in short the display of a little foresight so that the work may proceed in proper order.

ORCHID NOTES.

Odontoglossums.

During the past 20 years the blooms of cattleyas have enjoyed a great run of popularity for cut flower purposes among commercial florists, but judging from the over production, and a gradual decline in the demand, the end seems inevitable. However, there now appears to be a drift in the direction of those species of orchids with flowers borne on long sprays, Odontoglossum crispum, and the numerous artificially raised hybrids from this variety should become competitors for this claim. Unfortunately the ways and means of growing them in this country up to the standard set by Europe, have not been discovered, despite the very fact that during the past decade a steady stream of experienced orchid growers have emigrated from there, to these shores, many of them supposed to be past masters in the cultivation of odontoglossums, yet on attempting to do likewise here they have met with little success, even though they duplicated in every respect the selfsame methods they used in growing them before leaving their native lands, and perhaps only too quickly got the prevailing notion that it is impossible to grow odontoglossums in this country. Some one among the newcomers ought to show fighting spirit enough to try and change these notions; whoever is bold enough to break away from those old-time means of cultivating this variety and succeeds in finding some other medium of achieving success with these plants, would surely earn a niche in the "hall of fame for florists" in the United States.

As is well known, odontoglossums grow quite freely for eight months of the year in many parts of North America, but the four remaining, or the warmest months, seem to take more vitality out of these plants than they are ever able to replace during the ensuing growing season, consequently they soon degenerate. So the question is, to find some possible means of overcoming this trouble that is so detrimental to odontoglossums in very warm weather. The supposition is, and perhaps with good foundation, that there is a superabundance of water given both to the roots of the plants and thrown about the surroundings at this stated season. The general idea in doing this is, of course, to try to keep them as cool as possible, and nothing can be more erroneous, for the simple reason that the water used, if taken from an open reservoir, is likely to be nearer 70 degrees than otherwise. Often a stream of this water may be seen running over the roof on the outside of the house with another sprayer at work under the benches inside, an operation which will naturally create a humidity that is very excessive and far too high in proportion to the normal temperature, and considering that most houses that accommodate odontoglossums are situated in some enclosed, out of the way corner, this error seems to be well grounded.

Orchid collectors say odontoglossums in their native haunts are found at a very high elevation in the Andes—just below the frost line—which must mean a changing circulation of air at all times. Now this is hard to obtain under the existing conditions of our summer, when the weather is hot and sultry, and the thermometer hugging 90 degrees. Here is the great obstacle to be overcome, and in these days when electrical appliances are in use for almost everything, it is strange that some enterprising orchid grower has not tried in some way to change the air in the houses just in the same way that indirect heat is forced through a dwelling house by electricity, only reverse it—send cold air instead of hot, anything to make a circulation, not too brisk, but enough to change it, by driving out the dead air and replacing it with sweet, fresh and cold air all the time, for it always seems that under the present arrangements the air is too dead, not life enough, so to speak, in houses where odontoglossums have been tried to be grown. Just for the want of something to create a circulation; (possibly the above suggestion may have been tried for there is said to be nothing new under the sun).

The hybrids seem to succeed far better in this country than the species under the present method. Yellow thrips seems to be their worst enemy. A mixture of peat and sphagnum suits as a potting material, and they seem to root more freely into it when partly decayed, or the second year after potting. The chief thing is the watering, but after many trials, such as picking individual dry plants out and looking them over daily, it seems to water them over head with water from the hose, about every third or fourth day in summer, produces the best results. The usual syringing twice or three times a day, as is often advocated has been proved detrimental to them, so cannot be recommended. Judgment must be used in the amount of dampening down, because this matter all depends on the interior arrangement of the houses; some take more dampening than others, but care should be exercised so that this is not overdone. The amount of humidity ought to be kept below the temperature of the house; ventilate freely at all times, but not enough to dry everything up too quickly, shading quite heavily with either canvas, blinds or laths, raised some inches from the glass, and avoid a stuffy feeling in the house by all means possible. Perhaps the best results are obtained from a span roofed house out in the open, properly shaded, than from any other kind. Southern houses always have a dead clammy feeling, and north built houses are good in summer but too variable in winter. In fact, to grow odontoglossums is a hard proposition at the best.

THE PERENNIALS.

Herbaceous Perennials.

An instructive address on what kind of hardy herbaceous plants to use and how to arrange them for various kinds of gardens was given by W. A. Manda of South Orange, N. J., March 13, 1915, before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. He said in part:

Under the title of hardy herbaceous or perennial plants we can group such plants as are strictly herbaceous—that is, after they have made their growth, flowered and seeded, they die down to the ground, where they rest perfectly dormant, until awakened again in the early spring, when they put forth new growth, with double vigor, after having had such a long and complete rest. Good examples of the herbaceous group are the peony, phlox and plants of that description. There are, however, a great many plants which are not strictly herbaceous, but which the term perennial will cover well, although both of these designations ramify in different directions.

As examples of perennial plants which are not herbaceous, we can cite such plants as the old-fashioned Scotch pinks, Dianthus plumarius, the sea pink or Armeria maritima, and a vast number of other plants which keep their green foliage and growth summer and winter, and when the early spring time comes, they simply continue their growth, and put forth their flowering stems. However, in my short address, I do not want to stick strictly to the plants which would answer either or both of these technical definitions, but to include all such plants as can be grown for similar purposes, and such plants as are generally termed the old-fashioned hardy garden plants which were cultivated in our grandmothers' gardens, and which include even bulbs and some semi-shrubby plants which can be used for the adornment of the garden. With plants of this kind, we can ornament every nook and corner of every place, whether small or extensive, and it is only a matter of selecting the proper kinds for the purposes for which they are wanted. These plants come from various parts of the temperate zone of our globe, and even this country has been blessed with a wealth of such vegetation, so that we need not go outside of our native plants in order to ornament our homes, whether on large or modest scale.

SOME HYBRIDIZED PLANTS.

Of course of late years the hybridizer has added numerous new forms and varieties, by carefully hybridizing and patiently raising and selecting the best off-springs, so that there are individual plants now which have been developed into hundreds and even thousands of varieties. These are generally termed as florists' garden plants. Under this heading could be classed such plants as the hybrid pyrethrums, hollyhocks, larkspurs, phloxes, gaillardias, German iris, Japanese iris, primroses, and other plants which are being developed and improved by cultivation.

GOOD WORD FOR THE COLUMBINE.

There is one plant which, to my mind, has not been improved by the hybridizer, and that is the columbine, or aquilegia. It is my opinion and that of the majority of hardy plant growers that there is nothing as pretty as the pure species. The garden-grown seed, where several varieties are grown in a limited area, is hard to get pure, as they are so easily hybridized and cross-fertilized by the agency of insects, so where in the collection a species wants to be perpetuated it is always safer to have them covered with fine muslin, to keep insects away.

Now as to the purposes for which these plants are being used, we can divide them as follows: Plants used for borders, rock or Alpine plants, water and bog plants, and plants used for massing amongst or in front of shrubbery or for wild garden purposes.

THE OLD-FASHIONED FLOWER GARDEN.

This class of garden has been in use for thirty years and upward. It generally consists of regular, though sometimes irregular beds, in some sort of form or design, yet not too formal, where plants have been planted according to the real home taste fashion, and is cherished not only for its beauty, but for its association, sentiment, etc. These gardens, while generally well kept, were so planted that they never presented a large display nor continuation of flower through the season.

Roses were associated with daffodils, the hollyhocks planted near the fence, with bunches of sweet williams and Scotch pinks in long lines or double and triple lines planted together, with the hardy heliotrope, a bush or two of the old man, several clumps of peonies, and with a large plantation of lilies of the valley in a shady place, foxgloves, luxuriantly growing in clumps alongside, with larkspurs and patches of hardy pompon chrysanthemums to enliven the fall flowering. These were generally interspersed with bunches of geraniums, heliotropes, and other annual plants, all bespeaking the tender care and affection bestowed by the owner of the ground.

THE MODERN GARDEN.

From these old-fashioned gardens, by gradual changes and evolution, came the present flower garden and formal garden, and from them the so-called Italian garden which, however, is only a misnomer. The present-day flower or formal garden is laid out more or less on a regular plan, and the plants arranged so that there would be a succession of flowers from early spring to late fall, or sometimes, according to the taste of the proprietor, arranged either according to seasonal flowering, or made into a color scheme. The plants suitable for these purposes are the following:

ROCK OR ALPINE GARDEN.

This class of gardening is not much practised in America as yet, but will come in time, as much as it is in the European countries. The ground to be selected for this should not be in the full glaring sun, but generally near a border of woods, so that a part of this garden would be exposed to the sun, while a part would be partially or quite shaded. Also a part of it could be kept moist, so as to be able to use and accommodate such plants as delight in excessive moisture.

With this class of gardening, plants and flowers of small growth would be lost if planted in large solid beds where they would have to fight for existence along with the tall, hardy and free growing plants, which would run over and smother them. In selecting plants, any of the last mentioned class of plants should be carefully guarded, and not placed in such rock or Alpine garden, and only such plants should be used as are of moderate or slow growth and size, and none that spread and take possession of the ground at the expense of the others.

In preparing such ground, it is not always necessary that it be entirely built of rocks, but old stumps, logs of wood and any other rustic material can be used to produce a natural rocky or woody effect, and any such material should be so laid and arranged in the ground that it would not give an artificial appearance, but be as nearly as possible an imitation of what we find in nature.

The following are some of the leading plants suitable for our climate for this purpose:

Achillea tomentosa,
Ajuga reptans,
Anemone Japonica,
Anemone Japonica alba,
Anemone Japonica rosea,
Anemone Japonica Whirlwind,

Perennials in Favor.

Paper by Julius Luck, read before the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club, February 1, 1915.

All writers on perennials generally commence by saying that our good old fashioned perennials are coming into favor again. Well, as long as I can remember, they always have been in favor. More than 25 years ago we had our perennial border with our pæonies, irises, delphiniums, bleeding hearts, phloxes, etc. In the last 10 years the varieties have been greatly improved, especially in phloxes and pæonies, of which there are almost endless variety. In the older days, great pride was taken in growing plants, and one often met with huge sized plants, but very little was attempted, as at present, to combine color combinations and natural effect. These last two constitute the principal feature of the perennial border of today, with an endeavor to add a continuous bloom from May to November.

Any garden soil will grow perennials, but it should be well enriched with thoroughly rotted manure. Planting can be done either in the spring or fall, but the best time is after flowering. This applies more to growers or nurserymen than to those who plant borders, for if this system was adopted, it would take a whole season to complete it. If the border is wide, say more than 10 feet, a background of shrubbery is desirable, or if against a wall, climbing plants may be used to cover it. If a fence, especially an open or wire one, climbing or rambler roses are very appropriate.

To plant a border properly, one requires an accurate knowledge of the growth, time of flowering, color and habits of all the varieties it is desired to plant. Plant in clumps, for instance, three peonies of one shade, will make a good sized clump, while it takes about twelve digitalis or six hollyhocks to form a clump. Do not plant the whole width of the border for a certain distance of one variety. This is an extreme impression of the idea of planting in clumps, and certainly spells failure, but I have often seen it advised and partly carried out, with the result that the job looks extremely patchy, and at times really bare, which would not be the case if the "smaller clump system" were adopted. The plants should be arranged according to their height, but always bear in mind the proper blending of the colors. This is rather a delicate thing to write about; most writers will just pass it by, giving warning to watch out for it. I will say this much, that I have not been able to give satisfaction to all I have had to deal with, for the tastes in color seem to differ very much. The main thing to avoid is never to plant two red, or red and pink together, or blue next to red, but always work in yellow or white, as these two will go with any color. If you find it impossible to avoid this, arrange the plants so that no two of the clashing colors will flower at the same time. Plant the lower, or dwarf growing varieties, near the front, which also can be planted in a straight row or curved to suit the shape of the border. This can be done with safety without getting a stiff appearance, but must be avoided on any other part of the border.

I do not need to write on the care and keeping of the border, for every gardener knows the more cultivation, proper feed and water a plant receives the better the result will be. There appears to be a great diversity of opinion about covering for the winter. I can say this much, that the best of all covering is the snow, and from this reason alone is it that we, here in Montreal, can winter more tender plants than those regions with a much milder climate. If there is danger of hard frost and no snow on the border, some covering should be done, either with hay, straw or better still, long manure, loosely shaken over it, but always wait till there are several inches of frost in the ground—never cover on wet ground. This covering will also prevent a midwinter thaw reaching the plant.

Sowing Annuals.

Paper by John Eddy, Montreal, Can., read at the meeting of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 1, 1915.

Mr. President and Gentlemen: At your request I have written a short paper on the sowing of annuals. I do not propose to say anything new but will just tell you of our methods of raising annuals.

About the end of March we prepare our hotbeds and have them ready to sow such annuals as asters, phlox, stock, dianthus, salpiglossis and several others of the smaller kinds of annuals. We aim to have these sown by April 10, but for the stronger kinds, such as marigolds, zinnias, balsams, nasturtiums and others I think April 15 is time enough. I do not think it is well to have annuals too large to plant out in the garden, as they get too much of a check if the weather should prove dry at planting time.

When sowing, we sow in drills about three inches wide, ½-inch deep, and six inches apart. We make the bottom of the drill level, so as to be able to distribute the seed evenly all over the drill, and so that all the seed will be covered about the same depth. Do not sow too thickly; if the young plants are too close together they will be weak and spindly. After sowing we draw a piece of board or the back of the rake over the bed and level the soil, and firm down with the back of a shovel. Then give a good watering. We shade the frames until the seeds have germinated, then remove gradually as the young plants take hold of the soil. Ventilate in the day time, keeping the temperature between 60 and 70 degrees and never let them get dry. After the seeds are up, look after the weeds; never let them get ahead of you, or the plants will suffer.

After the plants are large enough, some people prick them out in frames; no doubt they are better for it, as they do not get such a check when planted out in the garden. We plant direct from seed drills, as our frames are limited. When planting asters out of doors, we plant in rows 18 inches apart and from 8 to 12 inches in the row, according to the variety, phlox and stocks about eight inches in the rows; marigolds, zinnias and other large varieties about 15 inches in the rows.

We used to make a sowing the last of May out of doors for asters for late flowering, but now with the late branching varieties I do not think it necessary as they will continue to flower until frost.

We have had some trouble with stem rot with the early varieties of asters, but very little with the late kind. We have had the foliage of the late varieties turn yellow; in fact, the whole plant, flower and all, have turned yellow. We have thought that green manure was the cause. I do not think it advisable to plant asters twice in the same ground if it can be avoided. I do not know a remedy for either of these troubles, but if some of you present care to give a remedy, I shall be more than paid for the short time I have taken in writing this paper.

Bird Houses Attractive Novelty.

Bird houses, an attractive novelty, are becoming popular with the trade, offering excellent opportunity for making unique and attractive window displays. The L. Bemb Floral Company, Detroit, Mich., made a line of these houses during the dull winter months, and a window display in their establishment, with the little houses attractively arranged and a number of canary birds, with fountains of water for drinking and bathing, with plenty of space for them to fly about, and brush and material for making nests attracted much attention.

Missouri Botanical Garden Alumni Ass'n.

A number of the graduates from the regular garden course of the Missouri Botanical Garden, having expressed their desire to form an organization for the cultivation of the spirit of fraternity, and to strengthen the relationship between them and the Garden, a committee consisting of Arthur T. Erwin, of Ames, Iowa.; Arno H. Nehrling, of Amherst, Mass.; Peter Pfaender, of St. Louis, Mo., and Arthur R. Gross, of Morgan Park, Chicago, was appointed by Dr. George T. Moore, director of the Garden, to consider the question of calling a meeting of all former Garden pupils. After due deliberation, the committee decided to call a meeting for November 27, 1914. Based upon this action, notices were sent out to all former Garden pupils to assemble at the Hotel Jefferson, St. Louis, Mo., November 27, at 10:30 a. m., for an automobile ride through the city. About thirty, including pupils and instructors assembled, and an enjoyable ride through the city, touching all points of interest, was taken. The ride terminated at the Garden, where a luncheon, kindly furnished by the garden authorities, was enjoyed. After luncheon all assembled in the graduate lecture room. Chairman Erwin briefly stated the object of assembling. After some discussion a temporary organization was effected by electing Arthur T. Erwin temporary chairman, and Arthur R. Gross temporary secretary.

The meeting was called to order at 2 p. m. by the temporary chairman, and all enjoyed listening to an address by Dr. George T. Moore, Director of the Garden, welcoming the students. All the facilities the Garden had to offer were kindly proffered for use by the assembly in this meeting, and all meetings to be held from time to time. He also issued an invitation to the students to contribute to the monthly bulletin, all items of interest concerning the present and past students, and very kindly offered to publish in the bulletin the proceedings of the meetings, and to enter the names and addresses of all the members, so that copies of the bulletin would be regularly sent to them. The response for the students was rendered by Arno H. Nehrling, in which he thanked Doctor Moore for the hospitality he offered. He also enumerated the many advantages which the garden course offers. The roll of the former students was then called by the temporary secretary, and many interesting experiences were cited by those present, and a large number of communications received from those unable to attend were read. After some preliminary discussion a permanent organization was then formed by a regularly made and carried motion, the following officers being elected: Arno H. Nehrling, president; Arthur T. Erwin, vice-president; Arthur R. Gross, secretary-treasurer; Eda A. Sutermeister, historian.

The president was instructed to appoint a committee of three members to draft a constitution and by-laws for the organization. A committee was then appointed, consisting of Charles W. Deusner, Arthur H. Smith and Charles H. Thompson. At 5 p. m. the meeting adjourned until the next day at the same place at 10 a m., at which time the meeting was called to order by President Nehrling. The assembly then had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Irish's able paper on "School Gardens." He covered in detail the work being done in St. Louis and various other large cities, pointing out particular advantages in having school gardens, and also the interest taken by the very young pupils as well as the older ones. A very interesting discussion then followed.

C. H. Thompson next gave a very interesting talk on the garden courses, reviewing the various courses which had been adopted since the original organization of the board of trustees in 1890 up to the one adopted by the board of trustees in March, 1914. He pointed out particularly the raised standard for entrance, and also the reduction in the time devoted to manual labor by the students, the length of the course having been cut from four years to three years, dispensing entirely with the first year course, which was devoted entirely to manual work, and the cutting of the hours of manual work from five to three hours in the other two years. The proportion of time given to practical gardening he pointed out had been raised considerably, and the time given to scientific research had been considerably reduced. A very interesting discussion followed.

At the request of the president, the report of the committee on constitution and by-laws was then read by Charles W. Deusner, chairman. The constitution and by-laws adopted, briefly covered the following points:

That the name of the organization is to be the Missouri Botanical Garden Alumni Association, whose object is to cultivate the spirit of fraternity among its members and to foster and strengthen the relationship between them and their Alma Mater.

The membership is to consist of three classes: The active—those who have received certificates of graduation from the regular garden course of the Missouri Botanical Garden. Associate members—those who were enrolled as members of classes in the regular garden course of the Missouri Botanical Garden, but have not completed the course. Honorary members—those who were elected by the association at any regular meeting.

The officers are to consist of president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer and historian, the officers constituting the executive board. These officers are to be elected at a regular meeting and continue in office until such time as their successors are duly elected. Regular meetings shall be held at the Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis, at the call of the executive board.

The report of the committee on resolutions was then read by the chairman, Charles W. Deusner, as follows: Resolved, that we express to Director Moore and the Garden staff our appreciation and hearty thanks for the many courtesies shown us on this occasion. We note with pleasure the added equipment in the way of new greenhouses, laboratories, and other facilities for instructional work and also the added courses which we feel sure will greatly strengthen and enhance the value of Henry Shaw Garden scholarships. We wish to express our appreciation of the opportunity of using the columns of the Garden Bulletin as a medium of exchange between the alumni.

A discussion regarding the time of the next meeting followed. It seemed to be the consensus of opinion that a meeting should be called each year and a regular meeting every three years. No definite action was taken, but the opinion as expressed will act as a guide when the matter is taken up by the executive board.

Illinois Pathologist's Report.

Report of Geo. L. Peltier, floricultural pathologist, University of Illinois agricultural experiment station, Urbana, presented at the annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Urbana, March 2, 1915.

STEM ROT OF CARNATIONS.

We now have in the process of publication, as a bulletin, the results of the last three years' work on the fungus causing the stem rot of carnations. This bulletin will be of a more or less technical nature, but will be of value to the florist.

The fungus, rhizoctonia, has been reported in the United States as causing more or less trouble to 164 species of plants. About one-half of this number include floricultural and ornamental plants commonly grown by florists. The fungus is extremely serious in the cutting bench, not only to carnations, but to practically all cuttings made from herbaceous plants. In the seed beds it will attack seedlings of a large number of plants, causing the well-known symptoms of "damping off." It is from the seed bed and cutting bench that the fungus is carried, to a large extent, into the field and benches, causing more or less loss throughout the year.

Cross inoculation experiments show that one species of rhizoctonia is the cause of all the trouble. As I have stated before, this fungus has been found to attack a large number of plants including field and vegetable crops, floricultural and ornamental plants and many weeds. The fungus has also been found growing in the soil on dead plant material, so that it is probably present, to a certain extent, in most fields. It is quite clear then, that rhizoctonia is present in almost every carnation field, as well as the soil that is put in the benches.

You may inquire then—why are not all carnation plants destroyed in the field? Rhizoctonia is what we call the facultative parasite; that is, under ordinary conditions it is a saprophyte, living on dead plant parts, but under certain conditions it becomes an active parasite and can attack and kill plants of all ages readily. As I have mentioned in previous reports, the conditions necessary for its parasitic development, depend on a high temperature and, to some extent, on moisture. It is hoped that by next fall another bulletin taking up more specifically the work on the carnation stem rot will be ready for distribution.

BRANCH ROT OF CARNATIONS.

This disease has been under observation again this season. The fungus is able to attack the cuttings very easily, and it is by the use of infected cuttings that the disease is spread in the field and house. The completion of the work on stem rot will allow us to take up the study of the fungus and methods of control more fully in the greenhouse.

CARNATION "YELLOWS."

As I have suggested in past reports, the only way this disease may be controlled is by the selection of cuttings from plants showing no signs of this trouble. During the current year, a large number of selections were made from a number of varieties, and the results have come out surprisingly well. Cuttings taken from plants showing "yellows" badly, produced plants of the same type. Cuttings taken from slightly diseased plants produced only a few healthy, a number with "yellows," while the majority of plants showed only slight attacks of "yellows." When cuttings were taken from apparently healthy plants they developed, in the majority of cases, into more vigorous plants showing no "yellows." Occasionally cuttings taken from an apparently healthy plant would all produce plants with "yellows," which tends to show that great care must be exercised in the selection of cuttings from healthy plants. Another selection from the first year's work has recently been made, together with a further selection from the stock now in the greenhouse.

ANTIRRHINUM RUST.

Due to the serious nature of the snapdragon rust, Mr. Rees has devoted his entire time, during the past year, to this problem. It has been reported in nearly all the middle western states, in Massachusetts, and again in Oregon and California. The rust appears on the plants in the field about the last of July. The uredo (summer) stage persists until fall, when the teleuto (winter) pustules are found on the stems and branches. The uredo, and to some extent the teleuto stage, is also found in the greenhouse throughout the winter, on cuttings, seedlings, and later on the mature plants. During spring the rust seems to die out in the house, reappearing in the field during the late summer. Mr. Rees published an account of this trouble last fall in all the trade papers, which no doubt most of you have read.

STEM ROT AND "YELLOWS" OF ASTERS.

During the current year a large number of inquiries relating to various plant diseases were answered. The troubles most commonly reported last summer were the "stem rot" and "yellows" of asters. We are planning to carry on some experimental work for several seasons, on the aster troubles, particularly the two mentioned above.

DRY ROT OF GLOXINIAS.

We are also planning some work on a dry rot of gloxinia bulbs, a disease which has recently been brought to our attention, and which appears to be quite serious.

Fertilizer Experiments in Illinois.

Paper by F. W. Muncie, University of Illinois, presented at the annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association, at Urbana, Ill., March 2, 1915.

Bulletin 176 of the University of Illinois on "The Use of Commercial Fertilizers in Growing Carnations," has just been issued and may be obtained by application to the agricultural experiment station, University of Illinois, Urbana. It contains the results of experiments upon the use of dried blood, acid phosphate, and potassium sulfate in carnation growing, which have appeared from time to time in previous reports in the trade papers. The most important points are briefly, that dried blood or ammonium sulfate can be used with benefit on soils naturally moderately well supplied with organic matter; that no benefit has so far been found from the use of potassium sulfate on a brown silt loam soil; and that an increase in production was noted when acid phosphate was supplied in addition to dried blood, particularly with the variety Enchantress, less so with White Perfection. Comparative experiments, also, have shown that these commercial fertilizers may be used in moderation with the assurance of producing a crop as large and of as good a quality as with manure exclusively.

The carnation experiments during the present, as well as last year, have been ones on a more extensive scale in regard to the value of acid phosphate in this experiment as a supplement to sulfate of ammonia. The varieties, White Perfection and Rosette, have been used and with these varieties, no increase has been found. This contradiction of the experiment of 1912-13 (Bul. 176) may be due to the use of sulfate of ammonia in place of dried blood used that year or to the fact that the varieties used are not responsive to its use as Enchantress is. It looks as if it were necessary in this connection to study closely the difference in response to fertilizers of the variety type represented by Enchantress and Beacon, which stool rather profusely, and of the type represented by Rosette and White Perfection.

Continued experiments in the overfeeding of carnations have shown that the danger from overfeeding with commercial fertilizers can be roughly predicted from a knowledge of their solubility in water. For instance, sulfate of ammonia (of which about six pounds dissolve in a gallon of water) is markedly injurious while acid phosphate (of which one-sixth pound dissolves in a gallon of water) shows no, or almost no, injury in very heavy application. The injury from equal applications of potassium sulfate, of which two-thirds pound dissolves in a gallon, is less than that from ammonium sulfate, but is still severe enough, if large amounts are used, to cause complete ruin of the crop.

A careful comparison of weather conditions daily, with daily production records, has given data that clearly establishes the relation between periods of cloudy weather and splitting in carnations. The long period of continued cloudy weather of the fall of 1914 (about three weeks) was followed, for instance, by an increase in the percentage of splits up to as much as 25 percent. The increased splitting is not coincident with the period of cloudy weather, however, but follows it by a week or two. The records, showing how these conclusions were obtained, will be published in detail.

Excessively high applications of acid phosphate to first year roses have caused slight injury, more marked with Richmonds than Killarneys. But amounts up to 40 pounds per 100 square feet of bench space, (which is equivalent to one pound per cubic foot of soil if a compost is made, or about nine tons per acre) have given a larger number of flowers than the soil to which none was applied. The need for acid phosphate is most marked in the later part of the season, and the increase due to its use is greatest at that time. No benefit from the use of dried blood has been found on the soil at the experiment station (a brown silt loam) until the spring of the year after the plants were set in the previous summer. The results seem to show a decrease from its use in fall or winter on fresh soil. In the spring, however, the plants show the nitrogen starvation by the yellowing of the foliage and increased production follows the use of a nitrogenous fertilizer.

A study is being made in the chemical laboratory of the value of liquid manure made (1) from fresh droppings, (2) from barnyard manure, and (3) from shredded manure. The relative value of steaming and of fermentation in preparing it also is being worked out. This is a practical problem, the results of which can be of immediate use to the florist. In connection with this and other work, a study is being made of the variation of temperature and humidity in greenhouses and their relation to growth as measured by the growth records of roses. The results obtained on these subjects up to the present are interesting, but hardly complete enough for publication. In the latter study, the experiment station has been assisted by several florists and opportunity is taken at this time to acknowledge their kind co-operation in this difficult problem.

Culture of Hardy Shrubs.

A timely address on the culture of hardy shrubs was delivered before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society February 27 by Arthur E. Thatcher of Bar Harbor, Me., superintendent of the Mount Desert Nurseries. He showed how the garden may be made much more attractive by the use of hardy shrubs, which require little care from year to year, if planted right, and suggested that good ideas on what shrubs to select and how to arrange them may be obtained by visiting the Arnold Arboretum. He said in substance:

When one considers what a large number of people there are who spend the most pleasant part of the year in their country homes, it is somewhat surprising that so little attention has been given to the hardy garden and the many beautiful subjects which are suitable for adorning lawns and pleasure grounds. But the rapidly increasing interest which is being taken in all branches of horticulture makes it safe to assume that a much greater use will be made of those shrubs and plants which are capable of withstanding the rigors of our variable climate and which, instead of having to be renewed every year like the majority used for garden decoration at the present time, are enabled to continue giving pleasure year after year with a minimum of expense and yet giving far more beautiful and adequate returns than annual plants are capable of doing. Along the Eastern seaboard of North America from Washington to Bar Harbor and inland for some hundreds of miles, we have a climate remarkable for its variableness and severity, and also remarkable for the fact that in no part of the world do flowering shrubs succeed better. English enthusiasts, when visiting this country, are always impressed with the beauty of our deciduous shrubs produced by the well-ripened wood, the result of our warm summers, and congenial fall temperature, and though we cannot succeed so well with many of the ornamental leaved evergreens so conspicuous in English gardens, yet we have our corresponding advantages. Having been privileged to work for many years in one of the foremost gardens in England, where hardy trees and shrubs receive the careful attention of the owner and were a great specialty, and also for several years in that great institution, the Arnold Arboretum, I may claim to have had exceptional opportunities for studying their requirements. Knowing the Boston Arboretum as well as I do I would like to draw special attention to the remarkable collection grown there and the great facilities it offers for people to learn what are the most beautiful shrubs to plant, and which will succeed in this climate.

HOW TO START A GARDEN.

In laying out and planting a garden it is a very much better plan to go to such a wonderful arboretum as this and make one's own notes of the shrubs which will succeed in different situations, than to leave the selection to others. One of the principal reasons why so many shrubberies are uninteresting today is because of the constant repetition of a few well-known sorts, and yet there is a great variety of inexpensive material which can be seen at any good nursery, which by a judicious selection will add much interest and distinction to a garden. In making a choice it should be remembered that there are other shrubs than those remarkable for the beauty of their flowers deserving of inclusion. In some, such as the rhus family, the foliage is very ornamental; others whose flowers may be inconspicuous attract much attention when carrying beautiful fruit; some are most noteworthy when their green mantle has changed to various shades of crimson or gold in the autumn, and others are again desirable on account of their richly colored stems in winter. Many persons in making a selection are apt to attach too much importance to coniferous and other evergreen shrubs, and although I am fully aware of their value when used with discrimination, there can be little doubt that they have been overdone in the past.

SHRUBS THAT BLEND WELL.

To produce the most pleasing effects both evergreen and deciduous shrubs must be happily blended, but it should be borne in mind that deciduous shrubs are much more beautiful, less expensive, and give the most satisfactory results. In selecting material for the planting of an ornamental shrubbery, whether one has a limited area or unrestricted space, it should be borne in mind that one need not be confined to shrubs only of a bushy nature, for while they form the basis of a shrubbery, others grown as standards or half-standards may be employed with excellent results. A very pleasing method of growing many of the hardy climbers, such as ornamental grapes and roses, is to firmly insert a stout pole into the ground, leaving ten to twelve feet above the surface, and lightly nailing or tying the long shoots of the climbers to it. The pole soon becomes completely covered. If varieties of sufficient hardiness are employed so that no taking down or covering is required they will need little attention beyond tying up the new growth.

The pole should be sunk into the ground three or four feet so that frost will not loosen it, and the buried part should be well treated with creosote or tar, which will preserve it for many years in good condition. A good straight larch or cedar pole answers well for the purpose. Many varieties of shrubs are now obtainable in standard form, such as the following: Crabs, thorns, maples, particularly the handsome Japanese varieties, and many others which by proper method of pruning are amenable to this form of cultivation.

In one lecture it is obviously impossible to deal exhaustively with all that appertains to the culture of hardy shrubs, but I will endeavor to bring to your notice some of the most important matters in connection with their successful cultivation.

PICK THE SUNNY SPOTS.

All hardy shrubs, except those which are naturally more at home beneath the shade of trees, succeed best in an open sunny position where they receive the full benefit of light and air, and this is particularly true of those grown for their floral beauty. It is important, therefore, to select if possible a position which, while being sheltered from rough and cold winds, is fully exposed to the beneficial influence of the sun. This enables the wood of the current season's growth to become thoroughly ripened, and consequently much better able to pass through the winter without harm. Having selected the position, it is of paramount importance that the ground be properly and thoroughly prepared, first by seeing that it is well drained, as very few shrubs will succeed in a water-logged soil, and then by having it well broken up to a depth of at least two feet. If the soil is naturally very heavy, it is a good plan to freely incorporate decayed leaf mold and sand, but if very light and dry in character nothing is better than a good heavy loam. Well decayed manure will prove of much benefit to the shrubs, if it can be worked deeply into the ground, otherwise I do not advocate its use. All hardy shrubs will succeed in a loamy or peaty soil, providing it is well drained and deeply worked, but it may seem to some that it is quite unnecessary to prepare it so deeply as I have advised. It is, however, highly important, even if the expense is somewhat larger, for the difference between shrubs planted in ground which has been properly prepared and those in poorly worked soil is quite remarkable, and no one will question the advisability after seeing the results.

WHEN AND HOW TO PLANT.

There has always been, and probably always will be, a difference of opinion as to whether the fall or spring is the better time for planting. If the work has to be done in the fall on account of the rush of work in the spring, it is advisable to plant as early as possible when the ground is in a moist condition, directly the leaves commence to fall. For my own part I am strongly in favor of preparing the ground in the fall, letting it lie rough through the winter and planting in the spring. If the work is well done and the requisite amount of attention is given the shrubs afterwards there is small chance of failure. It is very true that we often have a short, dry planting season in the spring, but much disappointment is frequently caused by shrubs, which if planted in the fall, fail to become sufficiently established to withstand the severity of our eastern winters.

With the ground in readiness and the material at hand, the next operation, that of planting shrubs, is perhaps the most important part of their culture. So much depends upon how this is accomplished as to after success or otherwise, that too much care cannot be taken to have it well done. From whatever source the shrubs are obtained they should be carefully unpacked on arrival and the roots thoroughly moistened, and if they cannot be planted for some time, they should be laid in a sheltered place away from the wind. It is a good plan to place a stake with the name where each shrub is to go; this will expedite matters when the planting is being carried out. The best time for planting is when the ground is in a moderately moist condition, as the soil can then be made firm without becoming pasty, and if possible choose a calm day, as wind has a most detrimental effect upon the roots. A hole should be taken out of sufficient size to accommodate all the roots after they have been spread out evenly, so that it will not be necessary to bend any round or cramp them, and having seen that the hole is of sufficient depth, the planting can then proceed. Cut off any broken or damaged roots on the under side with a sharp knife, and take great care of the small fibrous ones, as on these the life of the shrub depends very largely, and see that they are quite moist. Then place the roots in the prepared hole and spread out all of them evenly, working in among them some of the finest soil, pressing it firmly and adding more until the hole is filled. While the roots should be well covered, it is not advisable to plant too deeply, especially on heavy land, and the nearer the fibrous roots are to the surface the greater warmth do they receive and consequently start into active growth more quickly than if buried some distance from the surface. When the planting is completed it is an excellent plan to give the shrubs a good mulching of any suitable material at hand such as decayed leaves or long dressing. This is of the greatest assistance if warm weather prevails, for it keeps the roots moist and cool and prevents surface soil from becoming baked.

NOT TOO MUCH WATERING.

Many people are under the impression that newly planted shrubs should be copiously watered at the roots, but I consider this unnecessary, and often times detrimental. If a good watering is given immediately after they are planted, which will settle the soil about the roots, and a mulching is applied, very little water will be needed for some time by the roots, but it is an excellent practice to spray them overhead frequently. This keeps the wood moist and greatly assists the buds to develop. If shrubs of standard form are planted, they will need some support until they become well rooted, and for this purpose nothing is better than a straight stake, sharply pointed, and driven firmly into the ground as near the stem as possible without injury to the roots. The shrub can be secured to it by wrapping a neat piece of cloth or rubber around the stem and tying to the stake firmly with string, but care should be taken that no injury is done to the shrub as the bark expands with growth. Many beautiful American shrubs are notoriously fond of peat and if the conditions are not naturally favorable for their cultivation, liberal additions of this material should be incorporated when preparing the ground, if it can be obtained. Peat, however, is not always available, neither is it absolutely necessary, for many peat-loving subjects will succeed admirably in a mixture of fibrous loam, decayed leaf mold and sand.

PRUNING TOO LITTLE UNDERSTOOD.

The pruning of hardy shrubs is one of the most important matters connected with them but at present it is very imperfectly understood and we see far too often the lamentable results accruing from a lack of knowledge of their individual requirements. All that is generally considered necessary is for an incompetent workman to give the shrubs an annual trimming with a pair of shears, with the result that when the work is finished the shrubs all have about the same rounded, stiff appearance, much of the old growth which should have been removed is left and forms a mass of useless growth and the young wood, which should be carefully preserved for future blossom, is cut away. It is not possible to lay down any hard and fast rule, as shrubs differ so much in their individual requirements, but it is better not to prune at all than to prune indiscriminately. The large majority of flowering shrubs produce their blossoms during the spring and summer months and some of these, such as the Philadelphus, Deutzias and Forsythias, which produce their flowers on wood of the previous season's growth, are improved by having some of the flowering stems cut clear out as soon as the blossoms have fallen. This will help to strengthen the new growths sent out from the base and give them a better opportunity of becoming well ripened before winter sets in. The majority of hardy shrubs, however, require very little pruning beyond occasionally removing the old growth so as to keep them shapely and open to enable them to receive the full benefit of the sun and air. It is only by intelligent study and actual practice that one can become conversant with the requirements of different shrubs.

A VERY COMMON MISTAKE.

As I have previously mentioned, it is quite unnecessary when planting ornamental shrubbery to use only those shrubs which are of bushy form, and by the inclusion of some of pyramidal growth for example and the proper use of standards one can produce a very much more attractive arrangement. A very common mistake, which should be carefully guarded against, is to plant all the larger shrubs at the back and graduate the others down to the front. By bringing some of the larger shrubs to the front and placing a well-grown standard on the edge of the shrubbery, where it stands clear above its neighbors, one will be able to give the appearance of much greater depth, which is important where space is limited. It will, of course, be necessary when the shrubbery is first made to plant more shrubs than those which can permanently remain.

Acid Phosphate Making.

IMPORTANCE OF PRODUCT IN FERTILIZERS.

The manufacture of acid phosphate has come to play such an important part in the fertilizer industry of the United States that the department of agriculture has just issued a bulletin (No. 144) on the subject, which is designed both for manufacturers and for progressive farmers. Phosphate rock, it is said, has almost entirely displaced bone, guano and apatite as a source of phosphoric acid, and a knowledge of the exact composition of the rock is of importance, because not only the phosphate of lime but all the impurities as well are acted on by the sulphuric acid used a reagent, and influence the finished product.

Of all the impurities occurring in phosphate rock, compounds of iron and aluminum are the most dreaded. Even in small quantities these elements are apt to cause a certain amount of reversion, and in large quantities may render the product sticky and unfit for use. By careful handling, however, phosphate high in iron and aluminum compounds may be made to produce high-grade acid phosphate. On the other hand, carbonate of lime is rather desirable when the quantity is not excessive.

Both the "den" and the "open dump" systems are in general use for making acid phosphate, each having certain advantages. In the "den" system, after the rock and the sulphuric acid are thoroughly mixed, the compound is dropped into a closed, brick-lined chamber or "den," where the chemical reactions raise the temperature to a high point and are completed in twenty-four hours or so, the product being then ready for shipment. In the open "dump" system, as the name implies, the mixture of acid and rock is dumped on an open pile and may require a month or even longer to become fit for use. The fumes given off in process, moreover, may become a serious nuisance in the vicinity of towns. On the other hand the removal of the acid phosphate from the den is troublesome, and, when done by hand, sometimes dangerous.

The cost of producing acid phosphate, the bulletin says, depends on a number of varying factors such as the size, location and equipment of the plant and the cost of sulphuric acid. Exclusive of office expenses, it may be said to range from $6.20 to $8 a ton. The product is sold on the basis of its so-called available phosphoric-acid content and is worth at the factory from 40 to 56 cents a unit, or 20 pounds. The phosphoric-acid content runs from 14 to 21 per cent of the marketed product.

Uses of Vegetables in the Hospital.

Many gardeners find it indeed a hard matter to meet every demand with a sure and certain supply, sufficient to fill all of the hospital's needs in getting up the daily requisition of vegetables. They consequently must get posted or standardized on each and every sort of vegetable used, how often served, and the amount of which are regularly consumed. Some sorts are sure to be wanted at all seasons and are used in large bulk; some are used often in moderate quantity; some will be wanted at times only, others will be wanted and often cried for, just when you haven't them, while yet others are a real drug on hand and seldom wanted at all.

The practice here has suggested to the writer several things. First, the law of demand, as a natural supply needful to be grown regulator, as well as a better classification of all such vegetables, and a proper seasonal knowledge of the period or periods of actual use. Secondly, a proper grouping according unto the manner of cooking and serving, as follows:

Group No. 1.—Boiled in bulk, served hot.

EASTER TRADE PROSPECTS GOOD.

Business conditions for the past week remain about the same as previously reported. As Easter approaches, one sees a larger variety, both in plants and cut flowers at all the stores, and greenhouse men report that a good crop of all seasonable flowers will be on the market, and the quality this year will be better than ever. Easter lilies are beginning to be quite plentiful now, with a fair demand. Carnations are becoming more plentiful, but clean up remarkably well, considering the enormous amount of bulbous stock which arrives daily. Sweet peas, too, are increasing in supply as the sun shines brighter and more hours each day. Lily of the valley has been in big supply. Violets have been selling only fairly well. Mock roses are a daily factor now in the rose market. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses will soon be with us, the first shipments arriving the latter part of this week. American Beauties are still scarce. Orders for white carnations for St. Patrick's day indicate that the market will be cleaned up early. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri and adiantum are plentiful. String smilax has been short of the demand.

NOTES.

A barricade of grass seed (about 300 pounds of it), piled against a door at Botzum Bros. seed store. 653 Woodland avenue, foiled burglars, who "jimmied" the entrance against which the bags were placed.

The Gasser Co.'s retail store is advertising a "vase full of flowers—all for one dollar." The vase has the Gasser Co.'s name on it, which helps to advertise their business.

An exhibit of bird houses, manufactured by E. S. Schoerndorfer, 1577 Columbus road, attracted quite a crowd at the James Eadie Co.'s window. The entire window was screened off from the rest of the store, and sparrows and canary birds flew among the ferns, lilac and other decorations.

A. Barber, of the Jones-Russell Co., spent the latter part of this week at Beloit, Ohio, helping his father at the greenhouses. Mr. Barber Sr. has not been feeling well for some time.

BUSINESS IS INCREASING.

All the stores are now beginning to show an Easter appearance, and with the fine weather we have been having, things are looking much better. Most of the growers are behind with their Easter lilies this year, and many of them have become discouraged and have shut off the heat from the houses, as it is an added expense, as the plants will not now be in on time for the Easter trade. Bulbous stock never looked better, and in that line we should have some fine stock, but flower sales have increased steadily and Saturday, March 13, was a "hummer" for everybody in town. From appearances violets will have somewhat of a shortage this Easter. Azaleas will be higher in price than in former years, but are good.

NOTES.

The Newport Garden Club and the Newport Horticultural Society have dicided upon August 12-14 as the dates for the mid-summer flower show to be held in Newport.

Cumberland Hill Nurseries, Woonsocket, R. I., have received the contract to trim the trees in the village of Manville, R. I.

J. H. Cushing, Quidnick, R. I., is cutting large quantities of carnations now, and also making good cuts in his rose houses.

The business of the late Michael Sweeney will be continued by the estate, under the name of M. Sweeney.

E. E. Howard, of Auburn, has some fine Spiræa Gladstone in 8-inch pots that is going to be fine for Easter.

Sam Kinder, of Bristol, has some of the finest Lilium giganteums that have been seen in this locality.

There are some fine Spencer peas in this city at present. H. A. T.

PLENTIFUL SUPPLY FOR EASTER.

All florist stores are taking on an Easter-time variety and profusion of display. Flowers of every kind promise to be plentiful. The volume of orders being booked is fully up to last year, and everybody is feeling good over the prospect for a big Easter trade. Lilies are abundant and are good stock. The same is true of sweet peas. These two leaders have perhaps received greater attention from local growers than at any previous season. Hydrangeas also come in for a larger consideration. Current business is quite satisfactory, particularly with bulbous stock. Dealers claim that this bids fair to be a banner season in flower planting. It is felt that the space given in newspapers generally on garden hints and home cultivation of plants is creating a more widespread interest in florists' activities and is bringing about an intelligent enthusiasm that will be permanent. The Lenten season is curtailing the demand to some extent for cut flowers for social events, but most florists have been having a good funeral trade. There is no scarcity in any flower.

NOTES.

During the week of March 15-20, the Columbus public recreation department will receive orders for plants, shrubs and trees from such portion of the public as will co-operate with it in its city beautiful plans. A nominal charge is made for stock. At the end of the week all orders will be turned in to growers for early delivery.

James Underwood, one of the best-known florists of Columbus, who has for several years past been superintendent of Franklin park, was married, March 10, to Miss Fannie McIntroy, of this city. They will reside in a handsome new residence which has just been completed on the park premises.

It is announced that the Hardesty-Schory Company, which has been operating the Brunst greenhouse on West Mound street, has given it up. They will continue to operate their store on Parsons avenue. J.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

The first March meeting of this society was held in the County building, Hartford, on the evening of March 12, President Warren S. Mason in the chair. It was voted to hold a show Thursday, June 10, the proceeds above expenses to go to the Red Cross Society. As announced, this was carnation night, and William A. Dawson, of Willimantic, exhibited his new seedling carnation, Red Wing, registered under No. 565 by the Carnation Society of America. Alfred Cebelius exhibited the folowing roses: Ophelia, Sunburst, Killarney, and Mrs. Aaron Ward; also Carnations White Enchantress, Enchantress and Beacon. A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, displayed a vase of Arawana, a very dark red carnation. President Mason had on exhibition a vase of Spirea Philadelphia; also Carnations Matchless, Princess Dagmar, Philadelphia, J. H. Gray and Mrs. C. W. Ward. John F. Huss, G. H. Hollister and George B. Baker were appointed judges, and, after much deliberation, decided as follows: William A. Dawson, first-class certificate; A. N. Pierson, Inc., first-class certificate; Alfred Cebelius, cultural certificate; Warren S. Mason, honorable mention.

The following committee of three was appointed to make final arrangements for the June flower show: G. H. Hollister, chairman; Ed. A. Brassill, and J. M. Adams. At the next meeting there will be a demonstration of the art of pruning fruit trees by G. H. Hollister, C. H. Sierman and John F. Huss, W. W. Hunt to furnish the stock. This will also be rose night, and we expect to have our lady members with us. ALFRED DIXON, Sec'y.

TRADE CONTINUES SATISFACTORY.

As the Lenten season progresses it is not noticed that there has been any diminution in the flower trade. All the stores report that business continues quite satisfactory, and that that there is going to be plenty of demand on St. Patrick's day, judging from the many inquiries that are being made. Weddings and funerals both have created flurries in the trade during the last week or two, many orders coming in for such from isolated portions of the state. Spring is developing fast now. This is the most backward spring the writer has ever seen here. Usually at this time fruit trees are getting past their flowering period and forest trees are mostly in leaf. So far this year, March 14, there is scarcely a leaf in sight. The seed trade is beginning to assume quite an activity, though the real spring rush has not arrived.

NOTES.

The bagworm as a scare has taken such a hold on people here that thousands of handsome shade trees have been butchered, until some of our streets have the appearance of being lined with gigantic hat-racks. The stupendous ignorance of our commissioners of public property allowed the information to go abroad that the only way to get rid of the bagworm was to cut away the branches on which the cocoons were fastened, and burn them, and in spite of attempts of civic leaders to check this wholesale destruction, great havoc has been wrought to our shade trees.

One of our mercantile stores has taken up the small nursery stock line, and is selling young plants, such as roses and flowering shrubs, at 10 cents each. We look upon this as a good sign, as it will stimulate the trade in hardy stock, which is a branch that sadly needs developing here.

The Oklahoma State Society of Florists discussed the flower show problem in detail at its last meeting, and a committee of three will have full charge of getting up the affair. The show will be held in early November.

Visitors: R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex., J. W. Furrow, Guthrie, and A. S. Gray, Chickasha. S. S. B.

New Orleans.

R. C. Kerr, president of the Texas State Horticultural Society and member of the S. A. F. executive committee, passed through this city, enroute to Chicago to attend a meeting of the board of directors of the S. A. F., and while here gave a very interesting address to the florists of this city, reviewing the good work of the Texas State Horticultural Society during the first year of its existence. He then advocated advertising in trade journals and daily papers, complimenting THE AMERICAN FLORIST and other journals. He discussed the possibilities of organizing a southern state association of florists. After thoroughly explaining his views on the subject, he called for an expression of opinion from the members. C. W. Eichling informed Mr. Kerr that the New Orleans Horticultural Society, a few years ago, had attempted to organize the florists and nurserymen of the south, and in fact such organization was effected, the first meeting being held in Chattanooga, Tenn., and the second in New Orleans, but owing to the lack of interest and support of the florists of the south, the organization died a natural death, and with it, the southern trade journal that had been put in circulation with the organization of the Southern Florists' Society, also expired, although Mr. Eichling further stated that he thought there might be a possibility of reorganization, the florist business having increased by rapid strides since the dissolution of the old society.

C. R. Panter gave as his opinion, that there was no necessity of a southern society for the florists, but he considered there was ample room to perfect state organizataions, and that all local societies should be affiliated, through representation, with the S. A. F., or that there should be a business meeting of representatives of all local florists' societies, in national convention, for business purposes only, as a separate branch of the S. A. F., when all matters appertaining to the florists and nurserymen could be thoroughly discussed and acted upon.

P. A. Chopin expressed himself as concurring in the remarks of Mr. Panter, stating that the bulk of the business of the florists of the United States was done with the eastern states, and therefore, it was an absolute necessity that the florists of the whole country should be in closer touch with each other through a national organization. The following florists also expressed their views on the subject, and the general opinion was to enlarge the scope of the national organization: P. Abele, H. Scheuermann, H. Illenberger, C. Ory, C. Farley and others. After a very interesting evening spent discussing matters of interest to the trade, Mr. Kerr was escorted to Kolb's cafe and entertained by the local florists, leaving for Chicago the following morning.

GARDEN ASSOCIATION EXHIBITION.

The mid-winter exhibition of house plants by the Newport Garden Association proved to be a gratifying success, the display being larger than was expected and included many kinds of plants growing in all kinds of containers from a tin can to a pail. Some handsome plants stood about, sent from private places to give effect. Florist Oscar Schults was show manager and the judges were Frederick J. Palmer, of Brookline, Mass. H. W. H. Powell and William McKay, the last named, president of the Newport Horticultural Society.

Mr. Palmer gave an informal talk, telling how to grow house plants, and naming some of the best kinds to grow. Rev. Roderick Terry, D. D., president of the Garden Association, said among other things, that the association would hold monthly shows during the summer months at its experiment garden, Old Beach road.

NOTES.

The writer was talking with Hugh Williamson about Historian Bancroft's collection of roses, and he said that Bancroft's secretary told him that the name American Beauty rose originated in Bancroft's garden in this way. Bancroft was showing a lady about his rose garden, and upon the lady asking the name of Rose Madame Ferdinand Jamain, and he not being able to give the name, the lady remarked, "never mind the name, it's a beauty anyway," and straight away Bancroft named it American Beauty.

Ex-president John T. Allan, of the Newport Horticultural Society, has recently discovered a tulip in his collection that resembles Tulip Proserpine in color, and has the characteristic of having three blooms on one stem. He will place this tulip on exhibition in New York for the purpose of establishing its identity.

Westchester & Fairfield Hort. Society.

The attendance at the monthly meeting of the above society held in its rooms in Doran's hall, Greenwich, Conn., Friday, March 12, was well attended. President Sealey was in the chair, and exceptionally fine displays in competition for the prizes offered by James Stuart, were noteworthy features. The competition was spirited and a remarkably fine lot of plants and flowers were staged. The first prize was awarded to A. Wynne for a handsome vase of Gerbera Jamesoni, and the second prize went to W. J. Sealy for a beautiful plant of Lilac Marie La Gravere. Honors accorded the other exhibits were as follows: Wm. Whittin, honorable mention for Lilium formosum; A. Wynne, honorable mention for schizanthus; Wm. Graham, honorable mention for display of cyclamen and vote of thanks for Carnation Princess Dagmar and Rose Mrs. Chas. Russell; Robert Allen, honorable mention for specimen plants of Dendrobium Wardianum. Robert Williamson was awarded honorable mention for a specimen plant of Chorizema splendens and also a vote of thanks for specimen plant of Sutton's Reading Gem cineraria, a variety intermediate between the stellata and hybrida types. J. B. McArdle was given a vote of thanks for exhibit of Gertrude hyacinths, and Louis Whitman's exhibit of a specimen plant of Crimson Rambler in bloom, was also awarded a vote of thanks. P. W. Popp exhibited a pan of Tulip Kaiserskoon, for which a vote of thanks was accorded to him.

Among the visitors present were the following: A. L. Ricards of the Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, and Alex. Cummings, Jr., of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn. Seven new members were elected and seven new names were proposed for membership in the society. The entertainment committee made its final report and was discharged with a rising vote of thanks. The lecturer of the evening was Alexander Cummings, Jr., who read a very interesting paper on "Rose Culture," and his hearers heard much in regard to the merits of some of the older varieties as well as the new ones. A rising vote of thanks was given the speaker for his instructive and very interesting paper. It was voted to hold the summer show in Greenwich, the dates which will be in June, to be announced later. The fall exhibition will be held in Stamford, Conn., the opening date being November 2.

For the next meeting, which will be held April 9, A. L. Ricards offers a cash prize of $10 for the best exhibit and an interesting display is anticipated.

Worcester, Mass.

The first spring show of the Worcester County Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural hall, Thursday, March 4. The hall was transformed into a Dutch garden, consisting of exhibitions of bulbous stock by H. F. A. Lange and Edward W. Breed. Walks of tanbark outlined with brick were artistically arranged throughout the garden, and a quaint Dutch tea-house was set up near the stage. In the garden leading to the tea-house, rhododendrons, primroses, hyacinths and tulips from Lange's were displayed. The tulips, Pride of Harlem, were exceptionally good. The Sunnyside greenhouses exhibited some splendid carnations, and a display of orchids by Mrs. John C. Whitin attracted considerable attention. A local orchestra, hidden by greenery, furnished music during the exhibition. The displays, all well arranged, included cut blooms and plants in large variety, and competition in the awards was keen. Among those who carried off the honors for excellence in quality and arrangement were the following: H. F. A. Lange, Sunnyside Greenhouses, W. Estabrook, Forbes & Forbes, Edward W. Breed, Mrs. John C. Whitin, Allyne W. Hixon, Miss Lucy M. Coulson, Mrs. Wallace Sargent, Charles Potter and P. F. Brigham.

Fire destroyed the home of Herbert W. Austin, a bulb grower of Milford, Mass., March 3. Five hundred dollars' worth of bulbs, stored in the cellar, were destroyed, and the damage to the house amounted to $2,500.

R.

Lancaster County Florists' Club.

When you can get more than one-fourth of the members of a florists' club to get out at five o'clock in the morning, take a visiting trip covering over 250 miles and get home at 11:30 at night, we feel that we have some live club, and if it were not for the fact that a goodly number of our members do their own firing, the number would have been over one-half. The party consisted of E. P. Hostetter, C. S. Loeffler, John Shreiner, Harry Weaver, F. L. Kohr, Chas. B. Herr, H. K. Rohrer, B. F. Barr, A. M. Herr, Elmer Weaver, Chas. B. Weaver, Rutter Hess, Ralph Hess, W. R. Denlinger, M. J. Brinton and Jas. Brown.

The first stop was at E. A. Stroud's, Strafford, Pa. Here we were joined by S. S. Pennock, Isaac Passmore, A. H. Lanser, Wm. Muth and Leonard H. Dedman, and being met by automobiles, were rushed to the greenhouses and shown through by W. E. Johnson, who did the honors nobly. Carnations are always the first attraction for this aggregation and we were well pleased with the houses of Matchless, Gloriosa, Philadelphia and Mrs. C. W. Ward. The retail end of this establishment has grown to a two-truck delivery size and of course requires some room to grow the stock, which was all in elegant shape and consists of the usual line, with a few unusual things for variety. A section of wallflowers and some very choice camellias were especially noticeable. Their multiflorum and giganteum lilies were in extra fine form, and the number ran into the thousands; in fact, there were so many good things here that the place would require a column or more to describe it.

Leaving Strafford at 8:45 a. m. we reached Broad street station, Philadelphia, at 9:17 and made a grand rush for the Reading terminal, where we were met by our two Chester county friends, Wm. Swayne and Chas. Marshall of Kennett Square, Pa.; also Mr. Bernheimer of the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa. The Florex Gardens was our next point, and our first inspection was their large house, where one does not think in ordinary florist's figures, but gets into those of high finance. When one is in their King-constructed house, 172 feet wide, 700 feet long and 30 feet high, it does not take much of an imagination to complete the rest; seven miles of paths, 60,000 panes of glass, 56,000 feet of heating pipes, 79,000 roses, 50,000 plumosus, gives some idea of its immensity and the imagination of the mind that conceived it. Bigness is characteristic of the whole place. Take their Mr. Geiger, who conducted us over the place; he is not only big in stature, but big in all he undertakes, and the heads of the various departments realize that it is up to them to uphold the reputation of the place. H. B. Girvin, a former Lancasterian, has charge of the carnations, and they are simply superb. White Enchantress and Enchantress are here on solid beds as good as they have ever been grown, and it would do Peter Fisher's heart good to see these Enchantress, immense flowers, perfect in form, color and substance and scarcely a bursted calyx to be seen. They also have a pink variety of their own called Ruth, and it is a wonder that some novelty introducer has not captured it, as it certainly has all the earmarks of a profitable variety. They also have a flesh-colored pink that looked good, but does not ship very well and will be discarded. Having carnations on benches and in solid beds, they have decided after a number of years' trial, that the solid beds are the most profitable. A small house of snapdragons upheld the reputation of the place by producing 10-foot stems.

After a dinner at North Wales, which suited everyone and cost only a nominal figure, we started on our way again, bound for Hatboro. When we reached Willow Grove park we missed connections with the street car and would have had to wait half an hour, so we formed a "hike club" with S. S. Pennock as chief, and started a three-mile hike, leaving the lazy members of the party to take the car. Both parties arrived at the Weiss establishment at Hatboro, Pa., about the same time and were shown around by Harry Weiss, who proved an enchanting host, in spite of the fact that we came upon him unexpectedly. The carnations here have a world-wide reputation, and we were not disappointed; in fact, we were surprised at the qualtiy of blooms grown here, and the extreme neatness of the place. They had evidently visited our Chas. B. Herr and were patterning after him. This firm believes in trying a new one properly or not at all, and will plant over 5,000 Alice next season and they have made enough out of Gorgeous to plant 30,000 of this variety for next season.

Our next stop was the Stevenson rose house 72 feet wide and 850 feet long of Lord & Burnham construction, their representative, Dennis Connor, having met us at the Weiss place. Not being rose growers ourselves, this house was more of an attraction as house than the crop, but we were shown how to pack flowers, and it was a revelation to many of us. I did not get the name of the manager here, but he was some manager all right, as the place was 100 per cent pure.

We then hustled back to Philadelphia and divided, some going to Leo Niessen Co. and some to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. to see how flowers were handled in the closing hours of a commission house, it then being 5:45. There was some food for thought here, and this part of the trip was very interesting to most of us. After a 6:30 dinner we all marched in to the rooms of the Philadelphia Florists' Club and inspected the carnation blooms on exhibition, it being carnation night for the club. We evidently took them by surprise, as they were so busy showing us the hospitalities of the club that it was time for us to leave before the meeting opened. They evidently forgot they had a meeting for the night, or are not as prompt as our Lancaster club, which opens on the minute designated on the notice, regardless of everything else. But we had a good time all the same, and only await an opportunity to reciprocate.

It was a pretty tired party that returned to Lancaster on the 8:50 train from Broad street, but well pleased with the day and considerably wiser in many ways. Our next trip comes pretty close, March 13, leaving Lancaster 12:15 noon, with Christiana as the first stopping point, and as many stops on the way back to Lancaster as daylight will permit. Visitors are always welcome on these trips, and are always allowed to pay their own way, so that they do not need to feel under any obligations to anyone.

The meeting of the club will be held March 15, with Charles Grakelow of Philadelphia, Pa., as the speaker.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Tri-City Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Club was held at the residence of Ludwig Stapp, Rock Island, Thursday, March 11. There was a large attendance present. President J. Staack called the meeting to order, and in addition to the regular order of business, officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Harry Bills, president; Henry Pauli, C. Sorenson and Ed. Patten, vice-presidents; Wm. Goos, secretary; A. Anderson, financial secretary; Wm. Knees, treasurer; Ludwig Stapp, James Hansen and Thos. Hensley, trustees. Retiring President John Staack's name was put up for re-election, but having served two terms he declined the honor in favor of Harry Bills. A rising vote of thanks was given on a resolution as an expression of appreciation of the retiring president's work in behalf of the club. A letter from J. J. Beneke, secretary of the St. Louis Florists' Club, relating to the annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America in St. Louis, Mo., in 1916, was read, and it was resolved to lend the aid of this club to add to its success. A social hour was enjoyed after the close of the business session. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of William Knees, Sr., Moline, Thursday, April 8.

Nassau County Hort. Society.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, Wednesday, March 10, President Ernest Westlake in the chair. Arthur Harris, Glen Cove, was elected to active membership and one petition for active membership was received. The president appointed as judges for the monthly exhibits, George Ashworth, John W. Everitt and Thomas Twigg, and their awards were as follows: For competition, vase of 12 carnations, white, James McCarthy, first; 12 pink, Frank Honeyman, first; 12 any other color, Frank Honeyman, first. The president's special prize, a fountain pen, for 25 mixed carnations, was also won by Frank Honeyman. For exhibition only, vase of antirrhinum (seedling) exhibited by A. Fournier was awarded a certificate of merit. Bush beans, exhibited by J. F. Johnstone, was given honorable mention and a collection of greenhouse flowers, exhibited by H. Jones, was also given honorable mention. The exhibits for the next meeting will be vases of flowering shrub, six gardenias and a vase of 12 indoor roses, mixed.

Holyoke and Northampton Florists' Club.

The monthly meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held Tuesday evening, March 9, in the large, new G. H. Sinclair greenhouse at Smith's Ferry, Mass., and was largely attended, about 40 being present. Wm. Sefton, president of Hitchings & Company, New York, gave a most interesting and instructive talk upon the construction of greenhouses, and the mathematical calculations required in the roofs of large houses to make them rigid and safe in any kind of snow or wind storms. His remarks were closely followed by all the members present, and many questions were asked at the close of his talk. The new Sinclair greenhouse is 60 feet by 400 feet, and although only completed last October, is now in fine condition. Carnations occupy half the house and look very well indeed. The other half is devoted to sweet peas, gladioli, antirrhinums, forget-me-nots, and young carnation and chrysanthemum stock. His sweet peas are a sight worth seeing. H. Downer, of Smith College, exhibited English wallflowers, with a pure white one among them. He also exhibited nemesias in 4-inch pots, which attracted much attention. D. Gallivan exhibited some well grown and flowered ericas, F. D. Keyes & Son, calla lilies, and the Massachusetts Agricultural College, carnations. W. Fraleigh, of Holyoke, exhibited a bunch of the double blue Farquhar violets. The April meeting will be held at Florence, at the greenhouse of F. D. Keyes & Son.

FRANK H. TRAENDLY, the well known New York wholesale florist, has suggested a new title for George Asmus, equally well known Chicago retailer, calling him the S. A. F. business agent.

VICE-PRESIDENT MACRORIE, of the Society of American Florists, arrived at Chicago from the exposition city March 15, enroute to New York, where he will present to his brother officers of the national organization details of the preparations for the San Francisco convention next August. He carries the names of 22 new members, making a total of 66 which he has enrolled since the Boston meeting last year.

LILY growers of experience who exercise the usual care in handling their bulbs and plants have little trouble with them and find this crop comparatively easy to manage.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY business in the florists' line, according to a shrewd retail observer, is not increasing because of racial prejudices against the inartistic association of spuds, clay pipes, green carnations, etc., with natural flowers and plants.

The New York Show.

The New York flower show opened on time at the Grand Central Palace, March 17, but a considerable number of the exhibits are incomplete or unlabeled as the telegraph operator takes this message. The ground floor and balcony are completely filled with exhibits. The decorations are quite simple, wild smilax being used extensively on the numerous columns. The most imposing exhibit to date is the formal rose garden of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., with rustic appointments. Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., make a fine showing of orchids with electrical effects. Vaughan's Seed Store has an extensive display of seasonable specialties. J. M. Thorburn & Co. present a formal garden in which rhododendrons and bulbous plants are conspicuous. The F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., makes a fine display of its famous ferns, also palms. G. E. M. Stumpp shows an elaborate pergola covered with English ivy. Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., have adorned a summer house with evergreens and clipped trees. The Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., displays lilacs, lilies and callas. The Horticultural Society shows a summer house with banks of roses, lilies and bulbous plants. The Horticultural department of Cornell University has displayed its horticultural and floricultural literature in a booth. The balcony is reserved for competitive displays of plants and cut flowers, the tulips being especially fine. There are extensive exhibits of garden accessories and the Red Cross Society has a very effective tea garden conducted by prominent society ladies for the benefit of the war organization.

The special exhibits for Wednesday, March 17, include plants in flower, palms and foliage plants, ferns, bulbous stock, orchids and roses.

Thursday, March 18, is reserved for cut roses.

Friday, March 19, carnations.

Saturday, March 20, table decorations.

Monday, March 22, violets.

American Sweet Pea Society.

A supplement to the schedule for the exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society to be held in the Palace of Horticulture, Panama-Pacific exposition, San Francisco, Calif., June 4, 1915, has been issued and includes the following additional classes:

Class 20, open to gardeners and amateurs. Prize donated by G. A. Dennison, chief of horticulture, Panama-Pacific International exposition. Best display of sweet peas arranged on tabling 3 feet by 6 feet. Display to face the front of tabling only. Tabling furnished by society. Any style of vases may be used. First prize, $25.

Class 21, open to gardeners and amateurs. Prizes donated by John Bodger & Sons Co., wholesale seed growers, Los Angeles, Calif., for 12 vases sweet peas, 12 distinct varieties of Spencer sweet peas, 12 distinct colors. First prize, $15; second prize, $5.

Class 22. To the winner of most points at the exposition the Garden Magazine offers its handsome medal. A first prize will count 5 points; a second prize will count 3 points; a third prize will count 2 points; a fourth prize will count 1 point.

Class 23, open to all florists. The President's prize, handsome silver cup, value $50. Presented by Lester L. Morse, president American Sweet Pea Society, for the most original floral design in sweet peas—any size. Only sweet pea blossoms to be used, but any foliage may be employed. Exhibitors may display neat advertising cards with their exhibit after judging has taken place. Intending entrants for this class will notify the secretary 10 days before the exhibition the space they will require for their exhibit.

Class 24, open to seed growers and seedsmen. For the best trade display of sweet peas, medals presented by the National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain. First prize, gold medal; second prize, silver gilt medal; third prize, silver medal.

F. G. CUTHBERTSON, Ass't Sec'y.

Jonquils, Daffodils, Narcissus.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

There appears to be some variation of opinion in the cut flower trade as to what are jonquils, narcissus and daffodils, and the undersigned wishes you would kindly state how they differ, giving the botanical names in each case. D. H. W.

New York.

The three of these belong to the genus narcissus. This genus is divided into three large groups, as follows:

Magnicoronati, or large crown. To this belongs Narcissus pseudo-narcissus, which is the true daffodil. In this group the crown or trumpet is as long as the perianth segments or longer than them. All of the showy members of this genus in the trade with this large crown, belong here and are true daffodils.

Mediocoronati, or medium crown. To this belongs Narcissus incomparabilis. In this group, the crown is usually about one-half as long as the segments of the perianth. The members of this group are usually referred to as narcissus.

Parvicoronati, or small crown. In this group the crown is reduced to a flat, or merely cup-shaped organ, many times shorter than the segments of the perianth. To this belongs Narcissus tazetta, the Polyanthus narcissus; Narcissus poeticus, the poet's narcissus; and Narcissus Jonquilla, the jonquil. The members of this group are referred to as narcissus, the last, Narcissus Jonquilla, being the true jonquil. This has, as you are aware, terete leaves.

The limits of each of these groups, of course, is not hard and fast; if they were, they would take rank as genera rather than as groups.

GEO. V. NASH,
Head Gr., N. Y. Bot. Gdns.

Watch Out!

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

There is a smooth young man going the rounds telling young gardeners that he is the advance agent for a new horticultural periodical, to be devoted wholly to the interests of private gardeners. He secured to my knowledge five subscriptions here, two receipts being sent you herewith. One of the subscribers has written to Columbus, O., and gets no reply. I would suggest that other possible subscribers investigate before making any payments.

FLORISTS' CLUB MEETING.

A very enthusiastic meeting of the florists' club took place March 11 at the Odd Fellows' Hall, at 2 p. m. President Jules Bourdett, owing to pressure of business being unavoidably absent, W. S. Wells, vice-president, took the chair. A paper was read by W. W. O'Weiler, of Shaw's Gardens, on "Soil for Florists' Use." After the meeting the members and visitors went to the wholesale houses of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co. to attend the carnation display and novelty exhibition. Many were here who were not present at the club meeting. Refreshments were indulged in and a good time was held and enjoyed by all who participated. NOTES.

A painful accident befell Vincent Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly. He attended a skating party with several of his employes, and in doing a few stunts fell and broke his ankle, which will probably lay him up for two or three weeks. This is especially hard on his brother, Frank, who willingly attends to his duties and those of his brother.

Grimm & Gorly have opened up a floral department at the famous Barr department store on the main floor. Ladies from the main store on Washington avenue are in attendance at the sales counters. George Wagner has returned and is working again as designer at the old stand.

George H. Angermueller is doing jury duty at the Porcurt court this week. He has his catalogue out with St. Patrick's day and Easter novelties; also his special florists' album, which is well mounted and very attractive.

Robert J. Windler visited his father-in-law in Chicago recently. It is rumored he will go into the growing business at that city, his brother Joe taking care of the St. Louis store.

A. Jablonsky will have a fine stock in lily plants as usual. He is at present not cutting very heavy in carnations.

The Mullanphy Florists have a fine display of imported shamrocks in their windows which attract much attention.

Ant. C. Zvolanek, of Bound Brook, N. J., and Lompoc, Calif., spent a few days here taking orders for sweet pea seed.

White carnations are on the up grade, owing to the demand for dyeing purposes for St. Patrick's day.

Ostertag Bros. will be busy all week at the "Made in St. Louis" exhibition, at the Coliseum.

F. H. Weber's windows are very attractive with a fine display of plants and cut flowers.

Special sales of carnations and sweet peas in all the downtown stores took place recently.

Julius Dilloff was with us and reported trade good.

TRADE BETTER.

Trade is a trifle better than it was last week and is showing a steady improvement. Stock of all kinds is still plentiful with the exception of fancy American Beauty roses which are scarce. There are still plenty of American Beauty roses of inferior quality to be had, but this stock is being jobbed off at low prices. There seems to be a good supply of the new rose Mrs. Chas. Russell around and the quality is all that can be desired. Outside of Ophelia, roses in general are in good supply and moving rather slowly. Carnations have sold better this week than they have for some time, but there is plenty of stock to go around, including white, which were in good demand for St. Patrick's day. Lilies and callas are more plentiful and some very choice stock in both lines is to be had. Sweet peas are in good supply and some magnificent stock is being offered, but are not bringing the prices that they should get. Lily of the valley has been moving rather slowly and the same holds good for orchids and gardenias. Freesia is still seen in large quantities at several of the stores and the supply of snapdragons and Ten Weeks stocks is gradually increasing. Violets, both single and double, are seen in large supply, but are still being sold at low prices. Jonquils, daffodils, Paper White narcissi, daisies, pansies, calendulas, forget-me-nots and other miscellaneous seasonable flowers are to be had in large supply. From present indications it appears as if there will be plenty of stock for Easter in both cut flowers and plants and that prices will be considerably lower than last year, but it is always advisable to place orders well in advance.

NOTES.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. report that business is improving nicely and they are all ready for the Easter rush. Inquiries in regard to Easter stock are arriving each day and everything points to a very satisfactory business. Mr. Vaughan acknowledges a pleasant visit from his old friend, Dan Mac Rorie, San Francisco, Calif.

A special meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association will be held at The Tavern, West Washington street, Thursday evening, March 18, when the members will consider the invitation to join the Chicago Florists' Club either as a body or individually. Every member is requested to be present.

J. A. Budlong is pleasing his trade with choice stock in all lines, especially roses, and the report at this store is that the cuts will be large for Easter. Lily of the valley, as usual, is arriving in large supply daily.

Chas. W. McKellar and wife write from San Francisco, where "they are doing the exposition," saying the past 20 years have made a wonderful change in the city.

August Lange's telephone business has increased to such an extent that he has been compelled to install a switchboard, which greatly improves the service.

C. W. Crumb left for Des Moines, Ia., this week to manage the new store of U. L. Crawford, which will open in the Shops building in the near future.

G. M. Reburn, of A. Henderson & Co., is planning an eastern trip, including the New York flower show and his old home at West Grove, Pa.

President Keimel, of the florists' club, has returned from the south, greatly improved in health.

Hoerber Bros. never had a better or a more complete line of stock to offer than they have at present.

Mrs. Elijah A. Wood has returned to the city after a prolonged stay in the east.

Sam'l J. Pearce will celebrate his fifty-sixth birthday anniversary March 20.

O. A. Tonner is offering a large supply of snapdragon in yellow and pink.

Louis Visas has returned from a visit at Duluth, Minn.

The Peter Reinberg store force, accompanied by Mr. Leake of Belvidere, visited the Reinberg greenhouses on Sunday, March 14, to get an idea of what the cut will be for Easter. Everything appears to be in good condition, and with the exception of American Beauty roses, everything will be in better supply than last year. Seven large houses have just been planted to the new rose, Mrs. Chas. Russell, which will replace the American Beauty to a great extent at this mammoth establishment.

Percy Jones is supplying his trade with some of the finest tulips of the season. This firm is making preparations for a banner Easter trade and Manager Van Gelder and his able force of assistants have every reason to believe that it is going to be if business is any way at all brisk, for they have a large supply of fancy stock to do it with.

Wietor Bros. expect to enjoy a big Easter trade this year, for they will have a big supply of roses and carnations and inquiries regarding stock for this occasion are arriving in good numbers each day. The shipping trade promises to be exceptionally brisk and if the weather conditions are favorable the local demand will be as good as formerly.

Joe Einweck of the Bassett & Washburn force, and his brother, Tony Einweck, of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., were called home from work on Saturday, March 13, by the sudden death of their father. Both of the men are popular in the local market and have the sympathy of the trade in their recent bereavement.

Bassett & Washburn are showing fancy cut lilies in good supply and will have a large quantity to offer their trade at Easter in addition to their usual fine line of roses and carnations. Bulbous stock is seen in large quantities at their store, with fancy tulips the principal offering.

Joe Schuler of Hoopeston was in the city on Monday, March 15, when he placed an order with a local manufacturer for another large American Beauty house. He favored A. L. Vaughan & Co. with a call and made definite arrangements with them to handle his entire output.

Erne & Klingel have had a brisk demand right along for fancy smilax, which they are handling in quantity. This hustling firm will soon celebrate its third birthday according to the junior member of the firm, who says that the business is just as old as the Klingel twins.

John Kruchten has booked several large orders for lilies, both cut blooms and pot plants, for Easter, but will make city deliveries only on the latter. Gardenias are more plentiful at this store now and will be in good supply for several weeks to come.

H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, Can., arrived here on March 15 to remain until after Easter. He is president of the new firm of A. T. Pyfer & Co., which has taken over the entire cut flower business of the old Chicago Carnation Co.

Sidney Buchbinder left this week for Des Moines, Ia., to superintend the installation of the new set of store fixtures, including a Buchbinder refrigerator that Buchbinder Bros. built to equip the new U. L. Crawford store.

F. J. Munzing is doing a nice business at 6101 Broadway, and it would not be at all surprising to hear that he is going to add several houses to his range this summer.

James Novak is at Tucson, Ariz., where he expects to locate permanently, according to Mrs. Novak, who will leave with the family to join him in a few weeks.

Paul Klingsporn says that Chicago Flower Growers' Association is now receiving stock from at least 75 growers, which means a splendid variety to select from.

George Willens of the Willens Construction Co. has returned from Detroit, Mich., where he has completed his contract with Henry Ford of that city.

John M. Kunesch, who opened a store at 6328 South Racine avenue several months ago, is well pleased with the business that he has enjoyed so far.

Elmer Sigwalt of Arlington Heights, a stockholder in the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, is all smiles over the arrival of a baby boy.

W. W. Adams, 1021 Rush street, suspected something was wrong when he received a telephone order on Sunday, March 14, for $3 worth of flowers, to be delivered at 1029 North La Salle street. The man who telephoned said he was Dr. Ray E. Bardeman, Jr., and asked that the messenger also be given $17 change, since he intended to pay for the flowers with a $20 check. The clerk sent the flowers and the $17. He also notified the police. Detectives waited until the transaction was completed, then arrested "Dr. Bardeman." He proved to be Ray Hamilton, 29 years old. He was identified by eight other victims of similar swindles. Hamilton, the police say, has confessed.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a large supply of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses and will have a good crop for Easter. At the Morton Grove greenhouses the lilies are coming along nicely and new orders are being booked for pot plants every day. The supply of lilies, azaleas, hydrangeas and other flowering plants is larger than ever this year, but a cleanup in all lines can be expected. In the supply department business is steadily improving and advance orders for Easter are most encouraging.

C. B. Arnold will hereafter devote more of his time to the florist trade at the A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co. at 16, 18, 20 and 22 South Peoria street, and will endeavor to furnish even better service than in the past. This firm has a large number of basket containers ready for delivery which can be used to good advantage to avoid breakage and bruising on Easter deliveries. They can be folded up on the return trip and used again on other deliveries.

J. A. Sikuta says that the write-up that Frank M. Ross, Philadelphia, Pa., received in the retail department of THE AMERICAN FLORIST last week was a most interesting one and that the eastern florist has the right idea of conducting a retail store. Several other local florists expressed themselves likewise, which reminds the writer of what George Wienhoeber said a few days ago and that is, it is volume instead of class that counts.

Mrs. E. C. Kohout, wife of Joseph Kohout of Libertyville, underwent a very serious operation at her home last week and is now resting very comfortably. Dr. Blouke of this city and Dr. Beebe of Antioch performed the operation and have high hopes for her early recovery.

BUCHBINDER BROS.
518 Milwaukee Ave., CHICAGO.

The George Wittbold Co. recently received a large importation of boxwood bushes and trees. The Easter stock is in splendid shape at the Wittbold establishment at Edgebrook this year, especially the hydrangeas, roses, lilies and other flowering plants.

Allie Zech and wife entertained the Zech & Mann employes at their home on Tuesday evening, March 16, when everyone present had a most delightful time. The dinner was simply splendid and the Victrola concert was greatly enjoyed.

At Zech & Mann's store fancy sweet peas are seen in large supply, but are in brisk demand and clean up well each day. Roses are also in good supply at this house and the same holds good for fancy freesia.

Sinner Bros. are booking a large number of orders for carnation cuttings these days and the large supply in the sand is gradually diminishing.

SUPPLY HEAVY AND PRICES LOWER.

Bright, warm weather last week brought in heavier cuts of all seasonable flowers and the market is well supplied in every line. Prices, generally, are lower than at the last writing, but are still at fair level. Roses and carnations are both plentiful and both have a fair market. The cuts of Easter lilies, callas and rubrums are all large. Bulbous stock, including tulips, daffodils, jonquils, Dutch hyacinths and poeticus are all in a large supply. Sweet peas are very plentiful and their price is not very high. Lily of the valley sells rather slowly. Other offerings include snapdragons, orchids, violets, forget-me-nots and primroses. The supply of greens is ample for present needs.

MARKET CONDITIONS SHOW IMPROVEMENT.

Trade conditions have shown considerable improvement during the past week. Stock as a rule cleans up fairly well and prices on bulbous stock have been a little better. The outlook for a good trade at Easter is bright and most of the dealers are making preparations to take care of it.

NOTES.

The bowling contingent of this city will "lock horns" with the ten-pin stars from St. Paul at the Elk's alleys in this city, Saturday evening, March 20, and everybody in the trade is talking about the coming event. Friday night, March 12, quite a crowd of bowlers in the craft had an enjoyable time on the alleys, Jack Byers carrying off the high score for the evening, with E. Farley out of the game with a sprained back.

Oscar E. Amundson has his store stocked with excellent carnations and roses from Will Bros. He handles home-grown stock as much as possible. Funeral work from out of town has been heavy with him the last week. The store has recently been redecorated and the fixtures re-finished and presents a very bright appearance.

Wm. Vasatka, at the Donaldson greenhouses is busy with four houses of lilies which are in fine condition and will average about five blooms to the plant. Rambler roses and azaleas seen at this establishment are also in excellent condition. A larger Easter trade than last year is looked for here.

Rice Bros. have been busy booking orders for lilies, and report that the way orders are coming in to them from outside points, indicates a better demand than last year in the Easter trade.

Oscar Swanson made a feature of rambler roses, with a very excellent display arranged in both baskets and jardiniers. Very good business is reported at this store.

Attractive window displays were features at both stores of the Whitted Floral Co. during the past week.

William Desmond spent several days in Chicago on business and called on the trade in Milwaukee on his way back.

Special sales were in full swing Saturday, March 13. The Eldridge Floral Co. and Donaldson's had flowers at cut prices. Eldridge's advertised roses and tulips at three cents each and daffodils at two cents. Donaldson's had on sale 100,000 violets, which they offered at 12½ cents per bunch. From the florists' standpoint, this proposition meets with little encouragement, as it tends, they claim, to cheapen the calling in general.

Thomas W. Nagle, of the Nagle Greenhouses, has been on jury service for a week, and is congratulating himself that he was not called for duty during the Easter period.

The Gopher Flower & Candy Co. has opened a new flower shop at 40 Seventh street, South. The fixtures are very artistic and the store presents a pleasing appearance.

Ted Vogel, of Chapman-Basting Co., has had some very pretty displays of spring flowers in the windows. He reports business as improving every day.

Ralph Latham is getting everything in readiness for the Easter business at his store, and the interior of his establishment is being redecorated.

Will Bros. have been cutting their usual large crops of roses, carnations and violets, with all hands on deck for the coming Easter rush.

Dayton, O.

Florists and horticulturists of this city and Montgomery county met March 3, and formed a new organization to take the place of the Dayton Florists' Club, which has disbanded. The body will probably be called the Florists' and Gardeners' Association of Montgomery County. Its object will be to bring more people into active membership and extend its interests farther outside the city than was done by the florists' club. About 50 people attended the meeting, among them a number of members of the defunct florists' club, all of whom signified their intention of entering the new organization. Altogether 25 persons paid their initiation fees and nearly as many more promised to become members later. Temporary officers were elected as follows: Horace M. Frank, president; Henry Jergens, Jr., secretary. A committee for drafting a constitution and by-laws was appointed, consisting of the following members: J. W. Rodgers, chairman; Mrs. J. W. Rodgers, E. E. Schaefer, M. L. Vogel, Elmer Brame, Mrs. L. D. Johnson, L. D. Polk and George Bartholomew.

MARKET WELL SUPPLIED; PRICES LOW.

Although it was reported to be very dull by most of the stores, there was considerable business; about as much as is expected in the mid-lenten season. The market is full of flowers of all kinds, which are sold at very low prices in quantity lots. Fine long stemmed Spencer peas have changed hands at $6 per thousand, but it is said they will not be so plentiful the coming week. Roses are in full supply, as are carnations. There is bulbous stock of all kinds, particularly daffodils; fine Emperors, and $2 per hundred is a high figure, while by the thousand the price is almost cut in half. Very little southern stock has appeared as yet. Gardenias are away ahead of the demand. Cattleyas are also to be had in almost any quantity at very low prices. Lily of the valley sells fairly well and Easter lilies and callas are seen in abundance, but they now go mostly for funeral work. Violets are showing that the end of their season is approaching, the singles particularly are getting smaller. Charles Meehan's retort at the florists' club, that but for the commission men there would be no growers, is shown in the way the market is relieved by the large shipments that go out, even in this dull season, to supply the trade worked up by this important branch of the business. The stock that is now handled by the department and 10 cent stores, all new agencies since last year, is very considerable. The Snellenberg store carries a very large stock, but a lot of it comes from the overstocked market of New York, where prices are said to be even lower than here. The Wanamaker store is about to enlarge their space as their business in the plant end requires it. What about Easter? This is the question we hear on all sides. Robert Craig, Jr., the optimist, feels sure it will be a great season. They have a magnificent stock and have already booked large orders. The dull periods of the past season and the slow business of Lent, clouds up the future for some of the pessimistic ones, and sorry to say, there are too many of these gentry, even in this business of sunshine, who appear to be always working in the shade and cannot see the silver lining to the clouds. The men who are on the job, pushing and making ready for the business, will get it. To win the race one must train for it, so hustle, boys, hustle so that when the final sprint comes—the rush days of Easter week—you will be there with the goods and the organization to handle them.

PHILADELPHIA SPRING SHOW
MARCH 23-25.

NOTES.

The plant growers are now hustling for orders and report stocks in good shape. Rambler roses are said to have come along so well with the favorable weather, that they can be kept cold from now on, which insures good color and substance in the flowers. The Robt. Craig Co. has a splendid stock of the popular varieties of these roses in all sizes, many of them trained to fancy shapes, which are good sellers.

The Aschmanns are noted growers and at the old place John Aschmann, the worthy successor of his father, has plant stocks that are up-to-date in every respect. Azaleas are seen in quantity in the moderate priced quick-selling sizes, all in fine shape. Multiflorum lilies are also largely grown as are spireas, French hydrangeas, cinerarias and bulbous stock in great variety.

The establishment of the Aschmann Bros., at Second and Bristol streets, is a blaze of color. Three large houses are filled with choice azaleas in popular sizes. There is a house of French and Otaksa hydrangeas, another of Spirea Gladstone and two of Easter lilies very well flowered and right on time to the minute.

Paddy's day windows in the stores are made attractive with all the regulation "fixings", such as flags, pipes, hats, and lots of shamrock, the shamrock in the pots being popular and featured by most stores and are offered at from 50 cents to $1 each. They are boxed for shipping and delivered to any address.

"Jimmy" of the Vollers House of Fowers force, when asked by a boy from another store who was complaining of his late hours, when he got off, said, "I get away when the last box of flowers goes out."

Fancy Lily of the Valley and Orchids
Roses and Carnations.

Fancy Ferns, special picked. Supplies and Wire Designs.

C. A. KUEHN, Wholesale Florist, 1312 Pine St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Robt. Craig Co., at its Forty-ninth and Market streets and Norwood establishments, is offering a fine line of Easter stock in lilies, spireas, azaleas, rhododendrons, rambler roses and lily of the valley.

Berger Brothers will be long on lilies for Easter. Their growers report splendid stocks of this great Easter flower. Fine lily of the valley is also a feature.

The M. Rice Co.'s force are as busy as beavers with their Easter baskets. Mr. Eschver reports business quite up to that of last season.

Every standard flower in quantity is the word with the Leo. Niessen Co. They are prepared for and expect a great Easter trade. K.

Milwaukee.

BRISK DEMAND FOR CARNATIONS.

Carnations have been in brisk demand for several days and have brought better prices than they have for some time. Taken as a whole, business has been fairly good, considering the unfavorable weather, and no complaints are being heard. Roses are arriving in splendid condition and the same holds good for sweet peas. Preparations are now being made for Easter on all sides and a glance at the calendar reminds one that the big flower day is only a few weeks off.

NOTES.

Holton & Hunkel Co. have a fine supply of plants to offer for Easter, including azaleas, spireas, genistas, rambler roses, lilies, etc. The demand for same is starting rather brisk and a cleanup in all lines is expected before the Easter week is over. Roses and carnations are arriving in large quantities at the store now and particularly noticeable is a splendid cut of the new rose, Mrs. Chas. Russell, the variety that H. V. Hunkel picked as a winner when it was first introduced.

Mrs. Ennis, of the Wisconsin Floral Co., reports trade as good, with the outlook encouraging for Easter. M. H. Moore, who is now acting as manager, helped to entertain the Chicago Lodge of Elks on March 13, when they performed the initiation ceremony for the Milwaukee Lodge. "The White Squadron," known as the Uniformed Marching Club, and a trainload of Chicago Elks, came up from the Windy City to participate in the big doings.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. will grow the new rose, Mrs. Chas. Russell, instead of American Beauty in the future, but on a much larger scale. C. C. Pollworth says that the demand for carnations was very brisk the past week.

Gust Rusch & Co. are handling a nice supply of stock and getting everything in readiness for Easter. A fine supply of the pretty pink rose, Mrs. George Shawyer, is now included in the daily shipments.

Albert Loeffler, of Watertown, is consigning some very fancy sweet peas to Holton & Hunkel Co.

Visitors: Carl Schultz, Menominee, Mich.; Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; E. J. Fancourt, representing S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

TRADE IS QUIET.

Business was rather quiet during the past week, with an increase in the supply of stock. The weather has been fine and stock has been coming on fast. This is very noticeable in plants as well as cut flowers; many fine rose plants, rhododendrons and other plant stock being now on the market. At this writing there is quite a lively movement in white carnations on account of the near approach of St. Patrick's day. American Beauty roses have not been very plentiful and the prices have remained fairly steady. The supply of various pink and white roses is increasing.

NOTES.

A number of changes will soon take place in the wholesale district. Traendly & Schenck, it is stated, have taken a large store at 436 Sixth avenue, between 26th and 27th streets. P. J. Smith will remove from his present location to 131 West 28th street, the store that Traendly & Schenck will vacate. The changes of location by J. K. Allen and H. E. Froment have been previously noted.

Very fine floral tributes were noted at the Elks' club house March 10 for the funeral of Max C. Anderson, a well-known manager of theaters. Fred. Lenz, of the staff of David Clarke's Sons, was in charge of the floral arrangements.

The interesting feature for this week will be the flower show. The promoters have worked hard and it is to be hoped that their efforts will meet with success.

The scores of the New York Florists' Bowling Club Thursday, March 11, were as follows:

P. Jacobson	161	173	180
C. W. Scott	176	170	160
H. C. Riedel	174	160	177

MARKET CONDITIONS SATISFACTORY.

Business during the past week has been very good for the usual trade during Lent. Carnations are in short crop and sell quite readily at $2.50 to $3 per hundred. Roses sold fairly well also, the prices on the general run of commercial grades ranging from $2 to $10 per hundred. Violets are very plentiful, and consequently bring very low prices, but with Easter in sight they are sure to raise in price. Sweet peas also are plentiful, and only high quality goods bring good figures. Marguerites are beginning to make themselves a prominent factor at the markets and are bringing good prices. Bulbous stock is plentiful and does not sell extra well, although large quantities are used. The plant trade is not very active just now, but the orders are coming in fast for Easter.

NOTES.

Violets and sweet peas are being shipped in large quantities by Wm. Sim of Cliftondale, Mass. He has just commenced to cut large Spencers from one of his houses, and they are unsurpassed by any peas coming to Boston. Since the resignation of Mr. Sprowl, his salesman, he has been marketing his own goods at his stall at the Boston Co-operative Flower market.

W. W. Edgar & Co., of Waverley, Mass., are busy booking orders for the Easter business. They have a good crop of Easter lilies, azaleas, rambler roses, genistas, lilacs and hydrangeas. Magna Charta and Ulrich Brunner are the leading roses with them this season.

The body of Albert Scott, who disappeared from his home in West Roxbury shortly before Thanksgiving, was found March 14 at Quincy. At the time of his disappearance he was said to have been in a highly nervous state that bordered on melancholia.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club held their annual banquet at the American House March 11. After the banquet there was an entertainment. The whole affair was very successful and a most enjoyable evening was experienced by all that attended.

The Budlong Rose Co., of Auburn, R. I., are cutting very fine American Beauties. The foliage is exceptionally good and the stems run about six feet in length. They also are cutting good Taft, Hadley, Killarney Brilliant and Cardinal roses.

W. R. Nicholson of Framingham has some of the finest mignonette coming to Boston. It is a strain of his own that he has been improving for some years. His carnations and yellow marguerites are also coming along nicely.

Sydney Hoffman has opened a new store at 194 Boylston street to take care of his Easter trade. He had the decorations for the spring opening at Filene's and Jordan Marsh Co.'s department stores.

John McFarland, of North Easton, Mass., is cutting very fine gardenias, freesias and lily of the valley. He has 7,000 Easter lily plants in fine condition for the Easter trade.

J. Foote, of Reading, Mass., has rather a novelty in pot and cut schizanthus. He is testing out its selling qualities this year, and so far is well pleased with the results. F. L. W.

Albany, N. Y.

One of the largest meetings held by the Albany Florists' club in some time was that for the present month. The announcement at the February meeting that growers would be asked to make exhibits had much to do with it. The result was shown along the north side of the meeting room, where a table four feet by 50 feet was covered with an array of blooms that showed the zeal of some of the growers to let the local trade know what they are doing. The list of exhibitors included:

S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—New pink seedling carnation, Mrs. C. Edward Akehurst, grown by C. Akehurst & Son, White Marsh, Md.

F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.—striking double variety.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.—White Carnation Matchless; Lilium formosum.

Roman J. Irwin, New York—Carnation Alice.

A. S. Burnes, Spring Valley, N. Y.—Lilies of many varieties, especially speciosum.

F. W. Velie, Rhinebeck, N. Y.—Single and double violets.

Ansel D. Carpenter, Cohoes, N. Y.—Early white seedling snapdragon to be introduced in 1916. This exhibit attracted considerable attention on account of the size of the flowers and length of stems.

William Hannell, Watervliet, N. Y.—Carnations Enchantress Supreme and Philadelphia; Pink Killarney, Sunburst and Hadley roses.

Henry Hansen, Catskill, N. Y.—Primroses and cinerarias.

Samuel Hanson, Troy, N. Y.—Pink and White Enchantress.

Joseph Traudt, Canajoharie, N. Y.—Genistas.

Fred Goldring, Slingerland, N. Y.—Azaleas and cyclamens.

Fred A. Danker, Albany, N. Y.—Cinerarias.

LENTEN LULL CAUSES LOW PRICES.

Business has been pretty dull during the past few weeks, and as we are in the middle of the Lenten season, there seems to be slight prospects of improvement for some weeks to come. There is plenty of stock of nearly every thing in the cut flower line to go around, and as a consequence, prices on nearly every thing have dropped considerably. Carnations are much lower than for a long time and the same is true of roses. Violets are still in great abundance and bringing very low figures. Bulbous stock of all kinds can be had in any quantity, and the prices they are bringing are anything but remunerative to the growers. Daffodils are about over, but there are plenty of other stock to fill the vacancy. Lily of the valley is in fairly good supply with steady prices prevailing. Freesias are about over for the season. Sweet peas are still scarce and very few of good quality are arriving, the common Earliest of All and white being the only two varieties in evidence. Orchids are very plentiful and the demand slow. There are plenty of lilies with little call as yet. Gardenias are none too plentiful, and the available supply is rapidly absorbed. The trade in plants is nominal and the same may be said to apply to everything in the green line.

NOTES.

The monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was held Saturday evening, March 6. There was a very large attendance. The final plans for the spring show as presented by the exhibition committee were adopted. A communication from the Chrysanthemum Society of America was read with reference to the fall show in the Palace of Horticulture. Definite action was posponed on motion of Joseph Thompson. It seemed to be the sense of the meeting that this communication be referred to the Menlo Park Horticultural Society, which centers in the greatest chrysanthemum growing section in the west. Menlo Park and vicinity are so located that they can put chrysanthemums into this market and the whole Pacific coast weeks before other localities. We hope that Chas. W. Johnson of the Chrysanthemum Society of America will communicate with the secretary of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society with a view of having the national society represented at the exposition this fall. It is once in a life time to us westerners that an opportunity like the present one offers itself, and the writer wishes that Mr. Johnson place himself in communication with the secretary of the Menlo Park society and I can promise that the growers there will make their usual remarkable display of chrysanthemus, both standard varieties and novelties.

The first flower show in connection with the exposition will be held under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society in conjunction with the department of horticulture of the Panama-Pacific International exposition at the Palace of Horticulture, exposition grounds, March 19-21. H. Plath has been selected as manager, John R. Fotheringham, assistant manager, and Tom Taylor, secretary. The following very excellent exhibition committee has been selected: Dan MacRorie, Jos. Thompson, Thos. Taylor, Frank Pelicano, Eric James, A. J. Rossi, Dan Raymond, Donald McLaren, Wm. Kettlewell, William Munro and John R. Fotheringham. The prizes for bulbous stock are varied and generous and the same can be said of plants. There is also to be a large display of cut flowers of bulbous stock. The last day will be devoted to floral arrangements, for which very valuable cash prizes and medals are provided for the successful competitors. This show is attracting a great deal of attention among the growers and private gardeners in this city and vicinity, and with H. Plath as managing director, we may expect to see something out of the ordinary. Mr. Plath has managed many shows in this city, and every one of them have been great successes. We hope this one will eclipse all his former efforts.

Frank G. Cuthbertson, secretary for the San Francisco exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society, has issued a supplement to the original schedule of the society for its exhibition June 4 at the Palace of Horticulture, as follows: Open to gardeners and amateurs—Prizes donated by G. A. Dennison, chief of horticulture—Best display of sweet peas, arranged on tables, 3 ft. x 6 ft.; first prize, $25. John Bodger & Sons Co. prize, open to amateurs and private gardeners for two distinct varieties of Spencers; first prize, $15; second, $5. The Garden Magazine offer their handsome gold medal to the person or firm winning the most points at the exposition. President Lester L. Morse of the American Sweet Pea Society has offered a handsome silver cup valued at $50 for the most original floral design made out of sweet peas. The National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain offers three medals for the best trade display by seedsmen or seed growers. The first prize is a gold medal, second silver gilt medal and third is a silver medal. Mr. Cuthbertson expects many more prominent premiums to be offered as the season progresses.

The exhibition committee of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society have decided to hold their spring flower show May 20. The show is to last for one day and evening. Owing to the fact that the fair will be holding many shows this spring it was not thought advisable to have a flower show lasting more than one day. John W. Daly will be in charge of the show, and that means that it is going to be a good one.

John Aitken has been appointed chief landscape engineer of the Jacob Stern estate at Menlo Park. Jack is a very competent and popular member of the craft and has the best wishes of all for his success.

M. H. Ebel and wife of Sacramento have been visitors during the week, taking in the Vanderbilt cup races.

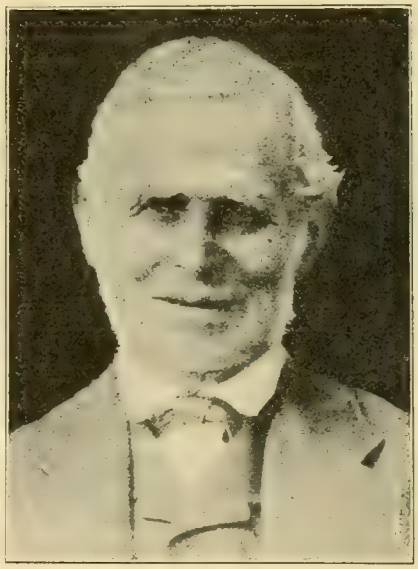
PUGET SOUND CABBAGE.—The heads passed through the winter in very fair condition and from present appearances the crop promises to be a normal one.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade March 17 were as follows: Timothy, $5.00 to $6.75 per 100 pounds.—Chas. P. Guelf, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., is due to return March 18.

C. Young & Sons Co., St. Louis, Mo.

The C. Young & Sons Co., which has a store and conservatories covering an area of 60,000 square feet at Belt avenue between Waterman and Berlin avenues, and a store at 1406 Olive street, has begun its fiftieth year of existence in St. Louis. The business was established by Christopher Young, who came to St. Louis from Toronto, Canada, in November, 1865. His family included five sons who assisted him in a small gardening business. They started with three small greenhouses where their present West End establishment is located, a part of St. Louis' most exclusive residence district. At that time the region was a forest and a few scattered farms. After the market for greenhouse products opened in the west and southwest, the Youngs began to advertise more extensively. They issued their first catalogue in the latter part of the seventies.



Christopher Young.

Founder C. Young & Sons Seed and Plant Co., St. Louis, Mo.

The Late T. Lee Adams.

As recorded in the seed trade department of THE AMERICAN FLORIST last week, T. Lee Adams, president of the T. Lee Adams Seed Co., one of the oldest seed firms in Kansas City, Mo., died at his home March 3, following a two years' illness. He was in his sixty-fifth year. Born in Waynesville, O., he removed to Kansas City in 1873, and identified himself with the Turnbull, Reynolds & Allen Seed Co., and in 1881 started in business for himself. He was prominently identified with both civic and religious interests of Kansas City, was a member of the Commercial, the Knife and Fork, and the Rotary clubs, and for 29 years had been a member of the congregation and a trustee of the First Presbyterian church. He is survived by a brother, David S. Adams, also a resident of Kansas City.

His life was a benediction to many, an example worthy of emulation, and the profusion of floral tributes in evidence at his bier testified to the feelings of profound sorrow that his death brought to a wide circle of friends. Funeral services were held March 5, and the remains were taken to Waynesville, O. for burial.

Non-Warranty Clause Decides Suit.

Louisville, Ky. — Thomas Wallace sued Wood, Stubbs & Co. for $488.50, claiming the defendant company sold him the wrong kind of corn. This suit has been decided in favor of the defendants by a unanimous verdict of the jury, the defense being based on the non-warranty clause.

NEW YORK.—The Harry A. Bunyard Co. has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $25,000.

LINCOLN, NEB.—The Gunn Seed Co. opened for business at 219-221 South Tenth street, March 1, E. S. Gunn and E. A. Pegler proprietors. Mr. Gunn was formerly general manager of the Galloway Seed Co., at Waterloo, Ia., and previously, for 19 years, vice-president and manager of the retail and mail order department of the Griswold Seed Co. Mr. Pegler has been handling poultry supplies for a number of years here in connection with his wholesale pickle business. His poultry department has been turned over to the new firm and Mr. Pegler will now give all of his time to the pickle and vinegar trade.

DREER'S

Cactus Dahlia Lawine

Candeur (Cactus). A wonderful pure white, which in the fully developed flower more closely resembles an incurved Chrysanthemum than any other sort.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100.

Delice (Decorative). The most popular pink variety. Its beautiful soft, yet lively color, a glowing rose-pink, together with its perfect shape, stout, stiff stems, and the fact that when cut it retains its freshness for a long time, makes this one of the most valuable for cutting.
Field roots, 10c each; $1.00 per doz.; $8.00 per 100.

Flamingo (Decorative). As a cut flower this ranks in the same class with Delice, and it is the first of its type to flower, not only flowering early but continuously, and holding up in good shape to the end of the season. While it frequently shows an open center this rather adds to its attractiveness; in color it is a glowing rose-pink.
Field roots, 20c each; $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

Galathea (Cactus). A medium-sized flower appreciated for its delicate color, which is an even, tender soft-pink.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Lawine (Cactus). White, with just a suggestion of blush as the flower matures; one of the best.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Mont Blanc (Decorative). The best all around white for cutting, flowers of good size, of good form, on good stems and very free flowering.
Field roots, 10c each; $1.00 per doz.; $8.00 per 100.

Miss Minnie McCullough (Decorative). One of the most popular autumn tints, rich bronze with yellow suffusion.
Field roots, 10c each; $1.00 per doz.; $8.00 per 100.

Mme. A. Lumiere (Decorative). Ground color white, suffused with red, the tips pointed with bright violet-red.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Nerthus (Cactus). Rich, glowing, bronzy, orange-yellow, passing to a carmine-rose at the tips, the whole suffused with a glowing, golden color.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Pink Pearl (Cactus). Mallow-pink at base of petal gradually shading to white at tips; a good flower.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Rheinkonig (Cactus). Pure snow white flowers of splendid form, 5 inches and over in diameter. These are of great substance, lasting splendidly when cut.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Wodan (Cactus). Bold, large, but not coarse flower, frequently 7 inches in diameter, of a pleasing, delicate salmon-rose color, shading to old-gold in the center.
Field roots, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

History of Kalamazoo Celery.

The first man to raise celery on the low land near Kalamazoo was Ivan Van Haaften, who raised one-fourth of an acre on the suggestion of Thos. M. Cobb, representative of this district at that time. That was about the year 1867 or 1868. As Mr. Van Haaften could not sell the celery that fall, he did not raise any more until the year 1873. In the year 1871, L. De Bruin, a gardener of Kalamazoo, raised about one-half acre. This he sold to the hotels there. One year later John Schaal raised about one acre and he was the first man to ship celery out of that town. These first shipments went to a firm named Rice & Moore of Grand Rapids, Mich. In 1873 celery was shipped to other places nearby. In the meantime W. Den Adel came to Kalamazoo from the Netherlands, and a partnership was formed between Ivan Van Haaften, his son, Cornelius, and W. Den Adel. These men went into the celery business on a much larger scale and were the first to ship as far as New York and Philadelphia, Pa. After a few years this partnership was dissolved. Ivan Van Haaften and his two sons, Peter and Cornelius, continuing the business under the firm name of Van Haaften Gardening Co., under which name the two sons are still doing business.

It was no easy task to raise celery in those early years of the industry. The largest part of the land had to be worked with the spade, as no one would put their horses on this marsh land. A great deal of it was covered with wire grass, and unless the weather was dry, it was almost impossible to bring such land under cultivation. Oh! the backache we used to have after hoeing in that wiry stuff all day. We soon tired of this, so we got to work and made shoes for the horses. The first we made with a heavy leather top, but soon found that the leather stretched when wet. Then we put iron clamps over the top of the hoofs, the same as are used today. We were the first to use boards for blanching the celery. Today there are millions of feet of lumber used for this purpose, and there are also thousands of pairs of these marsh shoes made and used.

The first celery raised was the Large White Solid and Boston Market; then after a few years Peter Henderson introduced the Golden Dwarf, and a little later he also introduced the most profitable of all celery, the White Plume. The best variety for eating is the old Boston Market, or Giant Pascal, but as this kind is not very profitable, it is seldom raised now. Nearly all the celery shipped from Kalamazoo is of the golden self-blanching variety. Hundreds of carloads of this are shipped every year. It is a nice looking celery, but it is not in it with the old style celery for quality.

CORNELIUS VAN HAAFTEN.

Early Potato Planting.

Truck growers who annually plant a considerable acreage of potatoes are warned by the United States department of agriculture that there was, on January 1, 1915, a very much larger supply of northern-grown potatoes in the hands of growers and dealers than was the case January 1, 1914. Experience has demonstrated that a large hold-over crop of northern-grown potatoes which is in good condition and selling at a reasonable price when the early truck-crop potatoes reach the market means low prices—sometimes so low that the shipment of such crops nets a loss to the grower. Under such conditions a small acreage means a smaller loss than a large acreage.

With 43,000,000 more bushels of potatoes in sight January 1, 1915, than were available at the same time last year and with a 1915 price of 43.2 cents as compared with 66.2 cents a year ago, a price which under the then existing conditions did not improve before the truck crop began to move, there is little hope that the conditions will be better this year. The price now is just about 33 per cent less than it was a year ago. The distribution of the crop is much better than last season, so there is little likelihood that the price of hold-over stock will reach last year's mark even by the end of the storage period.

Nashville, Tenn.

STOCK PLENTIFUL AND TRADE GOOD.

The weather for the past two weeks has been ideal for the growers; cool, but with a bright sunshine that tempted everything to grow at its best, and the result has been beautiful flowers and plenty of them. Trade has held up remarkably well, and the supply has fully equaled the demand. Roses were never better and carnations are prime. Violets have been on in great abundance and are very large and fine. Pot plants, especially cyclamens, are abundant; azaleas, too, are fine and meet with a ready sale. Bulbous stock is plentiful and sells comparatively cheap.

NOTES.

The sudden death of Hon. H. C. Anderson, speaker of the state senate, of the legislature now in session, created a large demand for funeral flowers, and wagon loads were sent by sympathizing friends. The senate and house of representatives sent a very handsome pall, made by the Joy Floral Co. The governor and secretary of state sent a large anchor, and other beautiful designs were sent by state and city officials. The funeral was at Jackson, Tenn.

The growers in this locality seem satisfied for the present with their capacity, and there will be very little extension of glass this season. However, there will be a lot of remodeling and changing around so as to get more space. The supply grown in this city seems to be fully up to the demand, and there is invariably an abundant supply of the very best of flowers, so there is very little need for great extension for the present.

To promote a love of flowers, and also to make the city beautiful, there has been organized in this city the "Garden Club," which seems much interested in developments along this line. Window-box gardening seems to be a fad that is about to be promoted by all flower lovers to stimulate a love for flower culture among those who have few pleasures to brighten their lives.

The Joy Floral Company has had on sale very beautiful specimens of Scotch heather, which they have bloomed to perfection. The heather is not well enough known here, however, to have very much demand for it. A taste for it will have to be cultivated.

The McIntyre Floral Company is offering roses at one dollar per dozen and carnations at 50 cents. They have good flowers and a good trade.

All the growers say they will have a fine supply of flowers of all kinds for the Easter trade.

Rochester Park Commission.

FAMOUS BOARD WIPED OUT.

On Wednesday, March 4, Charles S. Whitman, governor of New York state, signed a bill which puts out of existence the Rochester board of park commissioners, and substitutes a commissioner of parks, who is to be appointed by the mayor.

The retiring body, which has toiled and fought for a quarter of a century, has placed the public gardens and parks of that city among the foremost of the world, both in point of beauty and recreational and health giving attributes, and made them the envy of older and much larger cities. As late as 1890 Rochester was, with the exception of a few inconsequential and neglected city squares, a parkless city. Today a great system of parks and an arboretum, at present covering 1,603 acres, bears witness to the service that the park commission has rendered to the "Flower City"; a service to the city of which citizens and commission may both be justly proud.

The relation of Dr. Charles Sprague Sargent, who for many years has been director of the Arnold Arboretum, Boston, Mass., to Rochester's parks has been fortunate, and with Superintendent of Parks Calvin C. Laney, and his capable assistant, John Dunbar, in cooperation with Chairman Wm. C. Barry, the Highland park arboretum and pinetum has grown to be a valued addition to the city's park system.

The retiring members of the commission are: Alexander B. Lamberton, who has been president of the board since 1904; William C. Barry, vice-president of the present board and a member of the first board; John E. Durand, treasurer of the commission during its whole history; Calvin C. Laney, whose term as superintendent has been continuous since 1899, he having been recommended for that position by Frederick Law Olmsted; John Dunbar, first assistant superintendent, who has been identified with Rochester's parks since 1891. He is widely known both in the United States and abroad for his knowledge, attainments and achievements as an arboriculturist. He has also served as president of the Rochester Florists' Club.

Buy Evergreens Of "The Evergreen Specialists"

Florists and Nurserymen Be Sure Your "Specimen" Evergreens Are REAL Specimens

GROWING an evergreen to maturity and then referring to it as a "specimen" does not make it one. Every Evergreen we sell as a specimen is a real specimen, because each gets the training needed to build a perfect individual out of it.

The production of our specimen evergreens begins with little seedlings the size of a toothpick—and it continues for five, eight, ten or twelve years. As the trees develop we transplant them where they will have more room.

Hill's Evergreens are the Kind You Want

You can work up a good, profitable, permanent business in Evergreens if you have the right kind of stock. A trial order will convince you that we know how to grow them and that our business methods and prices are right. We are growing Evergreens almost exclusively and have been supplying the Wholesale Trade for over half a century.

Our stock is very complete with all the best varieties of Spruce, Pines, Firs, Junipers, Arbor Vitaes, Yews, Hemlocks, Boxwoods, etc., in small, medium and large sizes for all purposes.

You ought to visit our nurseries and see us growing millions of evergreens to understand properly what patience, experience and special skill it takes to do the job right. We have all three, plus a first-class organization to take prompt care of your orders—and our prices are right. Ask for Wholesale Catalog and Bulletin No. 5.

CLUB MEETING.

Schenectady has a florists' club. Eight persons interested in the trade met formally on the evening of March 10 in the Rosendale Flower Shop, 126 Jay street, Schenectady, and discussed the subject of organization upon the suggestion of the proprietor, G. E. Kopper. It was decided to choose officers, and Marvin P. Champlin of 220 Nott terrace was elected president and G. E. Kopper, vice president. Mr. Burkhart, a clerk in Mr. Kopper's store, was chosen secretary. The club will meet regularly the second Monday evening of each month. Following the meeting refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed. John C. Gorman, of Lord & Burnham Co.'s traveling force, was present at the meeting and was made a charter member.

Announcement is made by the state conservation commission of a bargain in trees for state municipalities to encourage reforestration. The commission will supply trees at 50 cents a thousand to cities, towns, counties, school districts and institutions supported by charity within the state. The commission's foresters are ready to cooperate with the communities and institutions in the planting in conformity with the rules and regulations of the commission. The low price and offer of co-operation are made to encourage the reforestration of tracts good for no other purpose.

G. E. Kopper is planning to build a propagating house at his establishment, Rosendale Nursery, Rosendale road, this spring. The structure will be 10 feet by 150 feet, and will connect two other greenhouses. R. D.

WHAT THE USERS SAY
KROESCHELL BOILERS

Cast Iron Boiler Cracked in Two Years.

We have a No. 4 Kroeschell Boiler. It takes care of 7000 sq. ft. of glass; it would take care of twice that amount.
I first had a new cast iron boiler which lasted two years when it cracked to pieces. The second was a second-hand boiler.
I consider your boiler the best paying investment I ever made.
You can refer anyone to us.
MARYSVILLE FLORAL CO., Marysville, Ohio.

Cast Iron Cannot Be Compared with Kroeschell.

We bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1904. It takes care of 5000 sq. ft. of glass, and we could add 2000 more. We are very well satisfied. We used a cast iron boiler before we had yours. It cannot be compared with the Kroeschell Boiler. Your boiler has certainly a great capacity for heating water.
HALL & ROBINSON, Montreal, Canada.

Kroeschell Better than Cast Iron.

I bought a No. 6 Boiler in 1903. I now have 10,000 sq. ft. of glass, and we could add 3300 more. This is ahead of five or six cast iron boilers which I have used. I saved $50 per season on the coal bill.
M. C. WARD, Quincy, Mass.

I bought a No. 4 Boiler in 1902. Have 7000 sq. ft. of glass; could add 200 more. It is perfectly satisfactory. Would keep only Kroeschell Boiler. Would not have a cast iron boiler for a gift. GEO. ENGEL, Xenia, Ohio.

Mr. Engel has increased his plant and ordered another No. 4 Kroeschell.

Ft. Wayne, Ind.

GOOD DEMAND ABSORBS HEAVY SUPPLY.

Business during the past week has been very good, and the supply has been much better than previous, during the weeks of March, owing to the sunshine every day and the atmosphere of spring that has generally prevailed. The current week promises more social activity, although the demand during the past week moved off a quantity of flowers in funeral work. Roses and carnations were cleaned out to a great extent, especially in the shorter lengths, as the short-stemmed flowers work up well in designs. Carnations have increased in numbers and bring $3 per hundred. Roses are more plentiful than a week ago. Killarneys are the bulk of the rose supply, although Ophelia, Hillingdon and Shawyer are showing up well. Sweet peas arrive in large quantities. Violets find comparatively few calls. Bulbous stock is slow in demand, especially Dutch hyacinths, Romans and Paper Whites. The Easter stock looks very promising, and from the outlook there will be plenty of demand.

NOTES.

A. J. Lanternier & Sons in Walton avenue are busy preparing for Easter. Their pot plants, especially Easter lilies, look very promising.

The Flick Floral Co. is showing some fine Easter stock in many varieties in their greenhouses in South Wayne.

Visitors: T. W. Plant, of the Haeger Brick and Tile Co., Elgin, Ill.; M. McCarthy, representing Philip Carbone, Boston, Mass.

The R. Bragg Co. moved into its new branch store on West Zumbro street, opposite the St. Mary's hospital, the same to be used to take special care of the hospital trade which is steadily on the increase. This company now operates two stores and the Rochester Greenhouses.

The present outlook for the Easter trade is very promising, and judging from Christmas business, which was much better than a year ago, the Easter business should show a marked increase. The weather conditions have been very fine the past two weeks.

A. F. Biehler, until recently manager of the Spokane Greenhouses, at Marshall, Wash., is visiting his brother, Jos. Biehler, manager of the Rochester Greenhouses.

What They Say:

Jan. 20, 1915
Willens Construction Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: The greenhouses you built for me last summer and with which I am so well pleased, received several severe tests within the last few days. During one cold spell of 30 degrees below, I easily maintained the desired temperature in the greenhouses.

I am well pleased with the material and also your pleasant business methods and am convinced that I have the finest greenhouses in Nebraska.

Yours very truly,
L. Buckendorf,
Norfolk, Neb.

PAYING HOUSES.

The above illustration represents an interior view of the range of short-roof houses that we built for Henry Baer at Peoria, Illinois. This type of house is recommended by all growers who are using our short-roof houses for they are neat, have an abundance of ventilation, and you will notice that there is no unnecessary space at all to heat. No unsightly posts mar the interior appearance of the houses and taken all in all there are no better houses to be had. It will be to your interest to get our sketches and estimates for your new house. Our construction is strong, lasting and efficient; at the same time it is inexpensive.

THE NEW YORK SPRING SHOW.

A Newspaper Writer's View.

"Eden rediscovered!" exclaimed an enthusiastic spectator who gazed from the balcony of the Grand Central Palace on the opening day of the New York flower show, which was held in that city March 17-23. In truth, he was not far wrong, for the New York Florists' Club had transformed the huge coliseum into one huge floral bower. The formal decorations were simple in the extreme, being used merely as a background upon which the gorgeous floricultural displays were built up. The great white pillars were twined with smilax, and quantities of the same foliage hung from the balconies. In front, as one entered the Palace, formal box trees, trimmed into fantastic shapes—a bird perched on top of an archway being especially noticeable—and dark, glossy bay trees met the eye. Scattered through the arena, at points of vantage were palms, bay trees and gigantic foliage plants, most of the finer specimens being contributed by Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.; Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., and the Secaucus Exotic Nurseries, Secaucus, N. J.

Without being so crowded as to spoil the effect, every foot of space, both on the ground floor and in the balconies was filled with growing plants and cut flowers, and on account of the mild weather, all were in a flourishing condition. The feature of the exhibit was the two rose gardens staged by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., and F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y. The attendance was such as gladdened the heart of the florists, the crowds at times making passage very difficult. The arrangements were practically the same as the preceding season, five wide aisles running the entire length of the hall. At the end were the exhibits of the seedsmen, Stumpp & Walter Co. and J. M. Thorburn & Co., in particular, exhibiting a number of varieties of spring blossoms that were a perfect riot of color. Among the tulips the Rev. Eubank, a large mauve single blossom, exciting special comment.

The retail florists were lined up along both the side walls. G. E. M. Stumpp erected a pergola covered with English ivy and embowered in ramblers; and close by Max Schling gave pointers to the trade on the artistic arrangements of baskets of flowers for all occasions. Tiny birch bark baskets, filled with foliage plants of assorted hues, delighted with their beauty and simplicity. The Horticultural Society of New York entertained visitors in their large summer house, which was fitted up with chairs and settees. In the center was banked a mass of tulips, the color scheme being such as to delight an artist; while in one corner a mammoth acacia, exhibited by Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y., won first prize in the single specimen class for private growers.

The Orchids.

The orchids, as usual, attracted wide attention, the varied cattleya being especially to the front in all exhibits. The majority of honors in the commercial class went to Julius Roehrs Co., who captured first, in both orchid plants and cut flowers in groups, as well as many single specimens. This display of plants was particularly striking, being set in a huge frame, illuminated by the indirect lighting system, so that the whole picture appeared as a slice of nature, the plants seemingly growing wild. There was a goodly showing of cattleya, Dendrobium nobile and Wardianum, lælia, odontoglossum and oncidium; while suspended from a cord, and suggesting Omar's was a beautiful specimen of phalænopsis, springing from a human skull, green with mold. Lager and Hurrell, Summit, N. J., were second in commercial plants, their artistic arrangement eliciting much praise. A comprehensive display of many varieties of the cattleya formed the base, from the centre of which rose a moss covered pole, with branching arms, from each of which hung little baskets filled with profusely flowering Phalænopsis Schilleriana, of delicate rose purple. Among the private growers Geo. Schlegel, Bay Ridge, N. Y., had a fine showing of plants of the varied cattleya, surmounted by specimens of the yellow oncidium and Phalænopsis grandiflora; while Clement Moore, of Hackensack, N. J., exhibited some splendid brasso-lælias, sopho-lælias and brasso-cattleyas. A particularly striking specimen, a hybrid, recently grown by him and named after the Queen of Belgium, was offered for sale at $250, the proceeds to go to the Red Cross Society. The substantial prize offered by the Ritz-Carleton hotel for the best showing of cut orchids table display, brought out some fine specimens from private growers, Geo. F. Baker, Tuxedo Park, N. Y., showing a dozen or more of the standard varieties. The judges, however, awarded the palm to Arthur N. Cooley, Pittsfield, Mass., by reason of the quality of the blooms and artistic arrangement.

"Every hyacinth the garden wears

Comparison between the different groups of foliage plants, and even single specimens was difficult, owing to the fact that they were so widely scattered, both upstairs and down. In the commercial class the principal awards went to Bobbink & Atkins, Julius Roehrs Co. and F. R. Pierson Co. In the flowering and foliage plant display, and also the forced shrubs and herbaceous plants collection, everything was won by the Julius Roehrs Co., its display of blossoming fruit trees eliciting special admiration. The conifer collections were exhibited in the balcony. A well balanced showing of trees and shrubs was staged by F. R. Pierson Co., Julius Roehrs Co. and Bobbink & Atkins. Although the Pierson exhibit captured first, there was little to choose between the symmetrical displays of that and the Roehrs collection. In the latter a fine specimen of Retinospora fllifera japonica was especially attractive. In the collection of foliage plants, Julius Roehrs Co. was easily first, the plants excelling both in growth and healthy color. The layman was especially attracted by a fine Coccoloba pubescens, its huge elephant-like ears rising horizontally one above another. A flourishing palm, 20 feet in height, also drew first in the specimen class. Bobbink & Atkins won many firsts in the single specimen class, their Kentia Belmoreana and Kentia Forsteriana being particularly well grown. As in the previous exhibition, F. R. Pierson Co. carried everything before it in its showing of ferns. They were all of the nephrolepis type, and their variety was the envy and admiration of all. Among the private growers of palms and foliage plants, W. B. Thompson, Yonkers, N. Y., and Mrs. D. Willis James, Madison, N. J., were easily first, while the stag horn fern of F. E. Lewis, Ridgefield, N. J., was a particularly vigorous specimen of this unique family.

Plants in Flower.

The azalea display was decidedly prominent, A. N. Pierson, Inc., getting the palm for the largest and most effective collection in the commercial class, while Julius Roehrs Co. bore off the honors in the single specimen class. Much admiration was expressed for the fine showing of hydrangeas, splendid collections ranging from pink to white, mingled with vivid blue being shown by F. H. Dressel, Jr., Weehawken, N. J., and Julius Roehrs Co. The latter also carried off the award in the collection of lilacs, this showing of both the white and purple varieties being unsurpassed. The display of rhododendrons was scarcely up to expectations, F. R. Pierson Co. getting first prize in the collection, and Bobbink & Atkins in the single specimen classes. The private growers covered themselves with glory in the flowering line. Mrs. A. M. Booth, Great Neck, N. Y., won many congratulations for her artistic staging of a collection of flowering plants and bulbs. A. Lewisohn and Ralph Pulitzer ran a close race for first honors in the specimen class, first and seconds being carried off by them in cyclamen, cineraria, Primula malacoides, P. obconica, and schizanthus plants. F. V. Burton, Newburgh, N. Y., carried off first prize with a magnificent anthurium, four feet high, and also exhibited a banana tree in fruit. Percy Chubb had a collection of cinerarias, particularly luscious in coloring, and Mrs. H. Darlington's collection of purple and white lilacs was beautiful and fragrant in the extreme. Wm. Fischer, New Caanan, Conn., easily won first with his magnificent specimen of marguerite, which was an almost perfect dome, thickly studded with the star flowers. A. Lewisohn carried off second; while Madsen & Christiansen, Wood Ridge, N. J., won a special prize for their Paris daisy. D. G. Reid and F. E. Lewis divided the spiræa honors between them, the former exhibiting a collection of pure white blossoms, the latter, those of delicate pink. Never have more splendid collections of lilies been displayed, and the group exhibited by C. W. Knight easily deserved the blue ribbon, some of the specimens being six feet in height. Others showing in this class were W. B. Thompson, Yonkers; Mrs. Ernest Iselin, New Rochelle, and Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck. Payne Whitney, Manhasset, N. Y., had entries in nearly all the bulbous classes and carried off numerous prizes, as did Mrs. D. Willis James, and Mrs. A. M. Booth, Great Neck, N. Y. Mrs. James won especial commendation in the hyacinth classes, her King Menelik, dark purple, and City of Haarlem, deep gold, forming a striking contrast. In the nymphæa class, particular interest attached to the specimens of the Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, named for the late lamented lady of the White House. A gorgeous display of 50 specimens of the calla Elliottiana, great golden bells, in pots, staged by George Gould, Lakewood, N. J., was very appropriately awarded a gold medal. In the commercial class F. R. Pierson Co. was conspicuous for a fine showing of lilies, while William H. Siebrecht, Astoria, L. I., had a display of lilies of the valley that pleased the judges as well as the spectators. Peter Blenheim directed his efforts to his tulips, which showed an unusual variety of colorings. The showing of carnations was up to the standard, the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., delighting the eye with a magnificent collection ranging from darkest maroon to white, through all shades of pink, each variety being displayed separately in a gilt basket, surrounded with ferns. A. Roper, Tewksbury, Mass., won a silver medal for his display of 50 specimens of a new variety not yet in commerce, the flower being a delicate shade of pink. The Cottage Gardens Co. also had a flower that especially pleased the florists, in their new seedling,

GROUP OF FLOWERING PLANTS EXHIBITED BY MRS. A. M. BOOTH, GREAT NECK, N. Y., AT THE NEW YORK SPRING SHOW.

Crystal White, a pure white blossom of unusual size. P. A. B. Widener, Ogontz, Pa., was one of the private growers much to the front, his vase of 150 specimens winning first prize. Although allowed the privilege of "decorative green, ribbon and other accesories" the exhibit was severely simple, nothing but the long stemmed, spicy flowers, in many shades of pink, being employed in the huge bouquet.

Cut Blooms.

The cut flower exhibits were staged in the balcony, antirrhinums, mignonettes, stocks and wallflowers being shown in abundance. An especially fine display of pink antirrhinum, 50 spikes, was shown by W. D. Howard, Milford, Mass. Among the private growers competition ran high in the display of cut pansy blossoms, the award falling to D. G. Reid. His collection was displayed on a board covered with purple velvet, which showed up to good advantage his magnificent yellow beauties, but did scant justice to those of the purple and black variety. In size and coloring, however, they ranked supreme. Other good showings were made by Wm. E. Iselin, Adolph Lewisohn and Payne Whitney.

As always, the rose was queen of the flowers, and never have more perfect specimens been offered for competition. A. N. Pierson, Inc., and F. R. Pierson Co., divided between them nearly all the honors in the commercial division. The miniature rose gardens laid out by these two firms were the first thing to catch the eye from the balcony, and both were bits of a veritable Eden. The former had erected a rustic summer house in one corner, and surrounded the plot with a rustic fence, both of which were completely overgrown with pink ramblers. White tea roses were posted as sentinels at each gateway, while the balance of the garden was given over to dwarf specimens of the fragrant flower. The setting of F. R. Pierson Co. was much more elaborate. Here were rustic bowers, wherein marble statues were enthroned, quaint little trellised arbors with a seat "just big enough for two," while in the centre was an old-fashioned sun dial. Pink ramblers were used in profusion to cover the various bowers. A most artistic effect was gained by placing in the centre, surrounding the dial, a circle of plants of deep crimson, shading to a delicate pink on the outskirts of the garden. The collection of perpetuals, teas and hybrids was won by A. N. Pierson, Inc., while a silver medal went to the South Park Floral Co., New Castle, Ind., for the best new rose not yet in commerce, the George Elgar, a small yellow blossom. Of course, the section devoted to cut roses, roped off at one corner of the hall, was the centre of attraction. Here the Pink Killarney, Richmond, Mrs. George Shawyer reigned supreme, while the exquisite yellow Sunbursts drew exclamations of delight from all beholders. There were several competitors for the 100 American Beauty and 50 American Beauty classes, F. R. Pierson Co. carrying off first in the former and L. A. Noe, Madison, N. J., in the latter. Of equal interest was the showing of Killarney Queens, A. N. Pierson, Inc., carrying off the honor in the 100 specimen class, closely followed by F. R. Pierson Co. The Ophelia was a general favorite this year, there being a number of specimens of this velvety flower. A. N. Pierson, Inc., was easily the leader among the commercial growers, scoring 11 first out of a possible 20, as well as a number of seconds. Among the successful competitors in the private growers were P. A. B. Widener, who won four blue ribbons, his showing of Frau Karl Druschki, 12 specimens, a pure white variety, being especially admired. Mrs. F. A. Constable's Sunbursts were equally admired.

Table Decorations.

Crowds, thick as bees around the honeycomb, surrounded the roped off plats wherein seven of the leading New York hotels contended for the silver cup offered by the Horticultural Society of New York for the most artistically decorated table, set for 12. The honor fell to the Holland house, whose table was a symphony in white, green and gold. Yellow rosebuds and white sweet peas were artistically disposed in a tall silver vase, the same flowers being banked at the base. Simplicity ruled, there being no floral favors, or extraneous floral arrangements to detract from the beauty of the centre-piece. The Hotel Biltmore employed an elaborate arrangement of yellow rose buds and white carnations; the Hotel Manhattan used luscious crimson Jacks with a liberal banking of ferns; while the Hotel McAlpine was a riot of scarlet and gold, narcissus and poinsettia with clouds of golden tulle giving an effect that would delight any Spanish heart.

The violets and sweet peas made a splendid showing, especially in the private growers' class.

true flower lover would protest, and that was the introduction of booths housing commercial interests that could not be called trade exhibits, for they were not even distantly related to floriculture, which seemed to be entirely out of place at a flower show of such quality and excellence. This cheapened the show and when in looking over the exhibits one came across one of these enterprising "fakirs" with his "line of talk" one would wonder if he had not struck the "midway" of a country fair.

Although the tea garden conducted for the benefit of the Red Cross work in Europe was not a trade exhibit; nevertheless with its humane and charitable work it is worthy of space anywhere. The tea garden, under the patronage of such prominent society leaders as Mrs. Belmont Tiffany, Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. Wm. K. Draper and others attracted many of the society folks, thus increasing the show admissions.

One of the new features of this year's show was display rose plants, arranged as a rose garden, covering 500 sq. ft. with appropriate accessories. There were two contestants in this class, A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., who was awarded the first prize of $300, and F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., who received the second prize of $200. A. N. Pierson's garden was perhaps the most pleasing, with its rustic fence and summer house, center of grass represented by moss, and stepping-stone walk, the scheme being a simpler and more naturalistic one. There might have been improvements in both exhibits.

The classes which were open to private gardeners only, brought forth several exhibitors and keen competition.

The ingenuity and individuality of Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., was shown in the unique arrangement of orchid plants in variety, covering 100 sq. ft. and arranged for effect; also of forced shrubs and herbaceous plants, covering 200 sq. ft., and arranged for effect. A scenic effect was obtained by framing in the orchid group, which was arranged in a case with a pleasing background of green cloth and illuminated by light reflected from hidden electric bulbs. This easily obtained the first prize, the second going to Lager and Hurrell, Summit, N. J., who arranged their plants in tiers on a rectangular table. The Roehrs Co.'s forced shrubs and herbaceous perennials were arranged in the form of a rock garden, with a few shrubs in the background and many Alpines scattered in among the rocks, was awarded first prize with commendation; equal second prize was recommended for the group of Bobbink and Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., which was made up entirely of shrubs.

Two other striking Roehrs' exhibits were a display of cut orchids, covering 100 sq. ft., and a large group of azaleas of striking colors, each variety being named.

Mrs. H. Darlington, of Mamaroneck, N. Y. (P. W. Popp, Gr.), showed 12 forced lilacs, five feet in height, and carrying fine flower; the plants of Marie Legraye in this group were better than of Charles X.

Class 340, staged on Saturday, a display of cut roses, covering 200 sq, ft. and containing not less than 500 or more than 1,000 blooms again brought the two Piersons to the front. Both groups were well arranged but F. R. Pierson Co.'s group containing 1,000 cut blooms deserved the first prize of $200 which it received.

NEW YORK SPRING SHOW.

Private Gardeners' Display of Bulbous Flowers.

College Man's Impressions.

Who can resist the charm and beauty of flowers? Certainly those who attended the third annual flower show went away with a greater appreciation of their beauty and a keener interest. The flower show, which was held under the auspices of the Horticultural Society of New York and the New York Florists' Club, was indeed a success, due to the loyal and unceasing labor of the flower show committee. The florists and gardeners are deeply indebted to these men who have undoubtedly, through the brilliant success of this year's show, made the annual flower show an established institution. This event is without doubt one of the greatest advancements made in floriculture, and was the very thing needed to bring the men of the profession together, both wholesaler and retailer, private gardeners and commercial men. Its influence on the general public is educational, and can not help but increase the love of flowers and thus result in augmenting the ranks of the buying public. That the show was the best ever held was the universal opinion. Both the general excellence of the stock, and the artistic arrangement of the exhibits, were noticeable on all sides.

It is noted that many of the trade exhibits are to be found in the same locations from year to year. This the exhibitors probably realize to be an important point, for their friends and customers will know just where to find them. Some of those who have exhibited in past years but were missing this time were M. H. Walsh, Thomas Roland, Anton Schultheis and W. A. Manda, Inc., but there were several new exhibitors and all the available space in the hall was occupied.

There was one thing to which the

F. R. Pierson Co.'s interesting collection of nephrolepis in variety was well staged and received first prize.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., received first prize for some very fine Adiantum Farleyense in class 140 of six plants and class 141 of 12 plants.

The Department of Parks, borough of Manhattan, was awarded a gold medal for a fine arrangement of foliage and flowering plants. A silver medal was awarded Mrs. A. M. Booth, Great Neck, N. Y. (E. Fardel, Gr.), for a collection of freesia hybrids and hilleborus hybrids.

Fine specimen schizanthuses were exhibited, one shown by A. Lewisohn, Ardsley, N. Y. (J. Canning, Gr.), being four feet in diameter.

Good Primula malacoides, full of flower spikes, were shown. The forced bulbs were universally good. The new water-lily, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, was to be seen. The hydrangeas were not very good, the heads being small.

The Art of the New York Show.

There are two things that go to make a beautiful flower show. The first is the splendor of the plants and flowers, and the second, and in some respects the most important, their artistic arrangement. Various exhibits of plants and flowers were fully up to, and in some instances, ahead of those of previous shows. There was beauty everywhere; no corners were filled up with indifferent stock, just to help out. Everybody had put their best foot forward, and the most successful flower show New York has ever had is the result.

The great beauty of the exhibition as a floral spectacle, however, lies, not so much in the general excellence of the plants and flowers, as in the art and decorative effect of their arrangement. The high lights, or features of the show that at all times held the crowds, were the exhibits where the various plants or cut flowers had been so placed as to color and foliage, and aided by the art and accessories of the decorator, that they presented a beautiful picture, a combination of nature and art that was ideal. There were a number of such examples, probably the most striking being the rose gardens of F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., and A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn. Each of these was ideal in conception and finished with close attention to detail to get the best effect. Had the pot plants been placed in rows across the same space, they would have received but a passing glance, while their artistic arrangement, with the latticed enclosure of the F. R. Pierson entry, and the rustic fence, summerhouse and lawn effect of A. N. Pierson's exhibit, made these, two of the most attractive features, surrounded at all times by admiring throngs. These same firms were also contestants for the best collection of cut roses, arranged for effect, and here again the art of the decorator, with his pedestals, baskets and vases, together with ferns and other plants as a setting, made wonderfully fine groups that were a symphony of grace and color, most elaborate and striking features, which would not have been nearly so effective, staged on a flat platform in the ordinary fibre jar. The decorative effect of the frame with its concealed lights, placed against an especially arranged bank of orchids, by the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., making in effect a huge picture of the beautiful flowers, was at all times an attractive center for the visitors. Another artistic effect by the same firm was produced with the aid of flower tubes held by suction clamps against mirrors, placed in the rear of their tables of orchid plants. These contained sprays of cut blooms, which were doubly effective by reflection in the glass. A. N. Pierson, Inc., for the commercial exhibit, had for a setting a large pergola, covering the entire space and decorated with asparagus. Their display of pot plants and cut flowers was much enhanced by this picturesque covering.

Arthur Herrington, Manager.

Much greater care and art had been displayed in the arranging of the various groups of foliage and flowering plants, in most cases the pots being concealed with ivy or sheet moss, giving a much more finished appearance. The group of blooming plants staged and arranged by W. H. Duckham was a riot of color, but there was art in their placing and the blending of colors was perfect. J. Canning and P. W. Popp had very artistically arranged groups of blooming plants that looked as if sections of their gardens had been lifted and carried intact to the hall. It is this garden effect, this getting close to nature, that is most effective.

The retail florists were not much in evidence, but those present voted with a loud aye! as the exhibits of Max Schling and G. E. M. Stumpp, together with that of F. R. Pierson Co., were at all times uncomfortably crowded. All had arranged elaborate booths or pergolas. That of Max Schling was a high skeleton cupola decorated with ferns. The space was filled with elegantly arranged, high handled baskets of growing plants and cut flowers. There were also bunches of cut flowers, notably a shower bouquet of orange blossoms. He called his display the "Place of Art", which his work seemed to prove, as the examples were all artistic to a degree. G. E. M. Stumpp's exhibit was very unique and interesting. Flower trays in various shapes and coloring, the low, shallow dishes, which hold water and in which flowers are placed with the aid of the English glass blocks, and the japanna holders, were beautifully filled. Small china or porcelain birds were placed on the edges of the trays, or amongst the flowers, held in place by plasticine, which is a sort of gum that enables them to be stuck on anywhere. Flower tubes for single roses, with rubber suction clamps were attached to sheets of glass, and were very effective with choice blooms in each. Hanging willow cages with birds and rings, in which hung a china or porcelain bird, were very decorative, as were garden sticks with their gaily colored wooden birds. There were also arranged baskets of cut flowers. F. R. Pierson Co.'s booth had a latticed and mirror background, made gay with wistarias and rambler roses. Choice plants and baskets of flowers were also displayed.

The miniature estate laid out by Woodrow & Marketos was a piece of decorative work, with its lawns, pergola, water basin, walks and large mansion, all in good proportion, that was much appreciated and always the center of an admiring crowd. The lawns were of clover, and the flower borders or beds of cut flowers. It was very well done. The rock garden of Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., was very effective and could be elaborated on to make a splendid feature. The seedsmen did much to add to their exhibits, with their trellis effects and grass borders. The displays of J. M. Thorburn & Co., and A. T. Boddington, with their masses of blooming spring bulbs, were very decorative.

F. R. Pierson is a believer in decorative effects, and worked hard to make the show a success artistically, as well as excelling in the variety and culture of the plants and cut flowers exhibited. To the lover of flowers, it is a privilege to be able to see such an exhibition. It is inspiring to a degree and one comes away with an aroused ambition and the way is pointed out for greater things. The Philadelphians feel their work is cut out for them; if they are to go this show one better in the Fourth National, in 1916, they will have to get together at once, and hustle as they have never done before.

The Business Meeting.

The sixteenth annual meeting of the American Rose Society was called to order Friday, March 19, following a dinner at the Parker House, at which the guests were welcomed by Hon. James F. Curley, mayor of Boston, Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., president of the society, and Patrick Welch, Boston, president of the Society of American Florists, who acted as toastmaster.

Following the address of President Pierson, the reports of Secretary Benjamin Hammond and Treasurer Harry O. May were given, the reading of the latter in detail being omitted, totals only being given, and the treasurer stated that at no time in his ten years of service in that office was there so large a cash balance in the treasury as at present. The reports of the three officers were greeted with applause.

Alex. Cummings, Jr., chairman of the central test garden committee, read his report, and Prof. Mulford, of Washington, D. C., in reporting conditions at the Washington test garden, stated that the grounds as laid out were in a splendid location and easily accessible. The quantity of material for planting received so far was liberal, he reported, but that considerable more could be used to advantage. He added that efforts would be made to make it a universal as well as ornamental addition to the public service, and that any support that the American Rose Society could give would be appreciated. Prof. A. C. Beal, of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., chairman of committee on test gardens, reported the conditions as laid out and published in the last annual bulletin as being most encouraging as to the successful work required in such an enterprise, and further efforts would be made to sustain the work for general benefits.

The selection of the next annual meeting place being next in order, William F. Gude, Washington, D. C., spoke of the importance of the coming national flower exhibition to be held in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1916, and moved that the American Rose Society accept the invitation already extended to its executive committee, provided that satisfactory arrangements be made. Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass., moved an amendment to strike out the proposition to make the acceptance conditional in any way, stating that the American Rose Society should do all in its power to aid the people of Philadelphia in making a great success of their effort. The motion was accepted; Eber Holmes, of Montrose, Mass., moved the passage of the motion in its amended form, and it was unanimously carried. A letter from Frank A. Friedley, Cleveland, O., stating that a flower show would be held in that city in November, which would be a large exhibition, and that one of the days had been set apart as "rose" day, with a prize list of $700, was then read. An invitation was extended to the American Rose Society to take charge of the rose exhibition. This announcement was received with much interest, and it was moved and seconded that the president be directed to appoint a committee to act for the American Rose Society in doing whatever was necessary to make the rose show in Cleveland a success. The president named W. G. Bates, as one member of the committee, the other two members to be selected later.

The next business was the nomination and election of officers, which resulted as follows by unanimous choice: S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa., president; Louis J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I., vice-president; Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y., secretary, re-elected; Harry O. May, Summit, N. J., treasurer, re-elected. Wallace R. Pierson, Robert Simpson, Robert Pyle and Eber Holmes were elected members of the executive committee. The matter of amending the by-laws so that the retiring president should become a member of the executive committee for the term of one year was brought up by President Pierson, and after a few questions were raised and answered, it was moved that a recommendation making the addition of such addition to the by-laws be brought up at the next annual meeting.

S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa.
President-Elect American Rose Society.

On motion of Joseph Heacock, which was seconded by Eber Holmes, being duly carried, it was decided that the American Rose Society should affiliate with the S. A. F. & O. H., the American Rose Society having 104 members in good standing, and that the president of the American Rose Society be directed to accept a seat in the board of directors of the S. A. F. & O. H.

President Pierson called attention to the matter of a standard for the growing of roses which was brought up in the annual meeting of 1911 by Past-president Wm. H. Elliott, and a committee at that time made a report upon the subject, but nothing had developed from it in a definite way. S. S. Pennock spoke upon the desirability of going into this work of adopting a standard method for designating cut blooms for commercial sale. After discussion, the president was instructed to appoint a committee to act in the matter in conjunction with the executive committee, and the following were named as such standard committee: S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa.; Patrick Welch, Boston, Mass.; Frank H. Traendly, New York.

The meeting adjourned to re-convene at the annual meeting of the Society of American Florists at San Francisco, Calif., August 17-19, 1915.

Secretary Hammond's Report.

Ten years ago in this building the present secretary assumed the duties of his office, and during the past ten years there has been a substantial development in the growth and influence of the American Rose Society, because each one has helped. From its first start, the aim was to increase the general interest in the cultivation, and to improve the standard of excellence of the rose for all the people. Every year, one after another, able men have done all they could to uphold the usefulness of the society by contributions to its support, in attending its meetings, in making its exhibits, and now the membership is spreading far and wide. The American Rose Society to be American in fact as well as in name, embraces various sections of country in which the climatic conditions are different, and there is probably no variety of flower that covers so much ground as does the rose. No matter where the rose is, there is no single flower which carries with it more attraction than the rose in full bloom; no bud has more significance in its choiceness than the rose-bud; no flower as a gift to sick or well has so much character or feeling attached to it as the rose. It grows in the confines of Mexico, on the Rio Grande river; it grows in the highlands of the Laurentian mountains beyond Lake Superior; it thrives in abundance in the warm breezes of the Pacific ocean; it thrives in the east and it blooms in the south, and a society to hold an interest in a connection of this kind is no small affair.

The past year has seen culminated efforts that have gradually grown up to provide test gardens for roses in various geographical locations. At Hartford, Conn., the rose garden there attracted attention which stirred up efforts in other directions. At the city of Washington interest was stirred up and now there has been started a national rose garden of some considerable proportions. At Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., which is an ideal region for climatic conditions for outdoor roses, there is now a garden that if pushed with persistent energy will become very soon as famed as some of the choicest spots in Europe. In Minneapolis in one of the beautifully located parks is a rose garden that has demonstrated what can be done where the winters are sharp and long, and the result as seen there is a credit to the man whose genius has created it. In southern California the rose is almost of spontaneous growth. In Oregon, Washington and British Columbia there the rose in the brilliancy of its colors, in the heydey of their bloom, make a showing that is wonderful. All these things when reduced to simple every day use add to the beauty of the home, and old as the hills comes the cry—"there is no place like home." The effort of the American Rose Society is to lead off and to affiliate with every local society that has its annual rose shows; to encourage the same by distribution of its medals. The past year the rose society in the city of Syracuse, N. Y., joined the American Rose Society. It has 244 members. In the city of Newport, R. I., two organizations have joined the society, viz.: The Newport Garden Club and the Garden Association.

The bulletin of the past year giving a record of some of the work accomplished is a book of value. It gives accurate illustrations of the rose gardens at Washington and Cornell; it gives articles from California and Oregon bearing upon this subject of rose adaptation which is of interest and value to every commercial rose grower, not only in America but in Europe as well, because America is a great rose market for imported stock. The past three years the limited income of the American Rose Society has been greatly assisted in its premium list by the associations with whom its main exhibition has been placed. There is no one connected with the American Rose Society in an official way that accepts any compensation whatever either for time or effort given. The society stands today in a position of influence in the development and adaptation of the rose for general display. One of the things we want to do and which was tried, when for over a year we published the Rose Journal, simply as a means of keeping in touch with its membership. The matter of scale of points as adopted by the society is one thing that has been accepted in various parts of the country. The judgment as made upon either plants or blooms by the able men who have been selected as judges and who have acted in the capacity of judging accurately the various points of value, have gained a confidence far and wide of local associations.

A society like the American Rose Society with interests in all parts of the country has a patriotic value as well as a commercial value; it touches local interests and home interests that are re-echoed far and wide from one place to another. The past year more medals were distributed than we ever before have given and last year was the first year that the five-year limit covering the Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard fund was reached. This medal went to a man in Massachusetts, M. H. Walsh of Woods Hole, while a close competitor for the honor was the well known rosarian, John Cook of Baltimore, Md., with his Rose Radiance. It is the hope of the society to see its growth in members largely increased; to see the spirit of affiliation take a wider form; to see the rose test gardens spring up in sections that will show what can be done in Texas, in Idaho or Montana, or what may be done in Kansas or Kentucky or what may be done in the Gulf states.

As a society, we have held our meetings mainly in the east. The coming year there is the greatest exhibition that was ever planned or carried out in commemoration of what is said to be the greatest physical work of engineers that the world has ever seen, the opening of the Panama canal, and what will be used to show up the grounds of the exposition to a large extent will be roses, because it is held in the land of roses. How many of our members will attend that exposition is unknown, but wherever you go on that journey you will find the rose in evidence, and wherever the next annual exhibition may be, we hope that it will reach a company of people who will make it a decided success in every way.

Our finances are in fair condition. The life membership fund has grown until it is $3,150, which is used as a permanent fund, and the larger this permanent fund becomes the more the American Rose Society will become a society of permanent ability to do good. Associate members are what we need, but if we get a membership, which we may get of associate members, we will have to have from time to time during the year publications of decided interest to the home rose grower. One thing that helps more than any other is colored illustrations, but these are expensive pieces of work if well done, but I hope the time will come when the publications of the American Rose Society will be so accurately illustrated and illustrated in colors that they will be a part of the choice products of the printer's art. To accomplish this we want an increased membership of all classes, and if there is anyone here today who is not a member of the American Rose Society we would be glad to have them join us in any of the three grades of membership, because when we leave Boston we want to leave it stronger than when we came, just as we have done each time we have been here.

The Exhibition.

The exhibition of the American Rose Society, held at Horticultural hall, Boston, March 18-21, in co-operation with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, was one of the best ever seen in this city, which has a splendid record for fine exhibitions. The spacious building was packed to its utmost capacity with surprising exhibits in both plants and cut flowers. To the rose growers the specimen plants of M. H. Walsh, Woods Hole, and Thomas Roland, Nahant, were unquestionably the most attractive features of the display, the latter exhibitor also showing some well grown ericas and acacias. The general public, however, appeared to be more interested in the Dutch garden arranged by R. & J. Farquhar & Co., with tanbark paths and many flowering shrubs and plants, including Azalea Kaempferi and A. mollis, magnolias, wistarias, primulas, spiraeas, bulbous stock, etc. A windmill in motion was part of a landscape and beneath it was a gardener's tool house, with wooden shoes hung outside and a red-tiled roof with lichens showing here and there. These accessories, it is said, were imported from the Netherlands expressly for this show. Some additional well grown plants were noted from the W. W. Edgar Co., Waverley. Orchids were well displayed by F. J. Dolansky, Lynn; J. T. Butterworth, Framingham, and a number of private growers. Cyclamens from various experts made a grand showing.

Cut blooms of roses were well displayed by S. J. Reuter & Sons; Joseph Heacock Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick. The principal contributors of carnations were Albert Roper, Tewksbury, and A. A. Pembroke, Beverly. The cut flowers arranged for effect attracted much attention, especially the work of Thos. F. Galvin, Inc., E. MacMulkin, Mrs. Duncan Finlayson, Henry Comley and Wax Bros.

Peirce Bros., Waltham, exhibited climbing Killarney rose; H. Huebner, Groton, new antirrhinums, and Jackson Dawson, of the Arnold Arboretum, new hardy azaleas.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society gave M. H. Walsh a special prize of $100 for his fine display of roses and R. & J. Farquhar & Co. gold medal for Dutch garden. The American Rose Society's premiums were distributed as follows: Waban Rose Conservatories, two first, one second; A. N. Pierson, Inc., five first; S. J. Reuter & Son, one first, two seconds; Wm. Crust, one first; Thos. Roland, one first, one second and Toronto Horticultural Society medal; Jos. Heacock Co., two first, one second; Penn, the florist, two first; Henry R. Comley, one first; Sidney Hoffman, one second; M. H. Walsh, American Rose Society's silver medal, four first, two seconds and Toronto Horticultural Society medal; W. W. Edgar Co., one first.

The official awards in detail were as follows:

The Philadelphia Spring Show.

The feature of the spring exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, which opened Tuesday, March 23, was the largest collection of tulips, hyacinths and daffodils in competition for the Michell, Waterer, and Dreer premiums. These are offered for selected named varieties, including the newest sorts, and are a great incentive to the skilled gardeners of this city and suburbs, as was shown by the many entries in the various classes. The quality of the stock was superb, nothing better ever having been seen here. The new daffodil, King Alfred, was staged by a number of growers, some of the flowers being immense. The Darwin tulips were especially fine, as were all the other classes, notable among them being the varieties President Cleveland and Princess Beatrice, new single and double pinks. The hyacinths were remarkable for size of spikes and coloring. The pans of Emperor and Empress daffodils were very full and showy. A collection of crocuses were interesting. Spireas were seen in quantity, new pinks in Rubens, Alexandria Improved, Philadelphia and America were very attractive. There were collections of hydrid tea roses, herbaceous plants, calla lilies, and a table of superb new sweet peas from the Burpee Fordhook farms.

Take it all in all, the exhibition lacked only decorative features to make it an artistic success. Every flower show should have a setting or background, a decorative plan, into which the various exhibits would fit, to carry out and become a part, contributing to make a perfect exhibition which would be at once inspiring and educational. Every effort must now be made to excel in next year's national show anything that has gone before. It will mean hard work, but the whole country looks for something great in this city, and all must unite to raise this standard and bring together the greatest collection of plants and flowers ever seen in this country. K.

LITTLE FALLS, MINN.—C. A. Sorenson is the only florist here, doing a small business in bedding stock with a little market gardening.

HUTCHINSON, KAN.—J. R. Souder, florist of Emporia, Kan., closed a deal March 16 for 10 lots located on Eleventh street, east, and will erect a range of greenhouses in the near future.

GREENVILLE, O.—James Frost built one new house for carnations last year and is thinking of adding another this season. He has given up market gardening, selling the land used for that purpose.—C. R. Wills is reducing his lettuce area, extending the space given to geraniums and chrysanthemums.—C. O'Brien reports a heavy run of funeral work.

The Insect Outlook for New England.

Abstract of an address by H. F. Fernald, Amherst, Mass., delivered at a meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, March 6, 1915.

The entomological conditions existing in this country when it was first settled, and as late as the eighteenth century, may perhaps fairly be termed aboriginal. Probably nine-tenths of the country was unsettled and covered only by its native plants, shrubs and trees, and these were attacked only by native insects. During the nineteenth century the spread of civilization westward enormously extended the area devoted to cultivated crops of various kinds and furnished corresponding opportunities for enormous increases in the abundance of insect- and also for destruction. New pests from foreign countries obtained a foothold here, in nearly every case escaping from their enemies in the process, and native forms, restricted in habitat, found new opportunities for progress in the coming of the settler. Shipboard surroundings can hardly be considered conducive to successful insect immigration. If an insect leaves Europe for example in one stage of its existence, and enters upon a long voyage, it is probable at least, that before its arrival its life in that stage will have terminated, and that it will transform into the next succeeding one. If freshly cut logs containing the larvae of the leopard moth, for example, form the cargo of a sailing vessel, which might be a long time in reaching its destination, it is probable that the changes in those logs due to cutting, drying, etc., would prevent the larvæ from forming.

During the last quarter of a century, the great increase of wealth in this country has caused large estates covered with rare and exotic plants to appear; acres of farm lands have been transformed into arboretums, stocked with plants from other countries; thousands of nurseries importing plants from all parts of the world have been established. Growing plants imported into Massachusetts alone, from foreign lands, represent a value of over $2,000,000, and as most of these are brought in with earth around their roots, the chance for new pests to establish themselves in this section has become greater than ever before. The importation of fruit from other countries affords another apportunity for the same thing to happen.

In order to protect ourselves as far as possible from unchecked invasion of this country by foreign pests in these ways, the inspection of all imported nursery stock is now provided for in nearly all states. Under these laws the actual inspection is left to the authorities of the states to which it goes. Reports of inspections show that many dangerous pests have been discovered in this way and destroyed. But while inspection of imported stock is valuable, its limitations should also be recognized. The work is often done under unsatisfactory conditions. The stock cannot be left open too long before planting or it will dry out and die; it may be in a place where the light is poor and something may be overlooked on that account; the shipments practically all arrive during two months in the fall and two in the spring, and it is often impossible to get sufficient trained men for such a short time.

On the other hand we have developed artificial methods of control to an extent unparalleled elsewhere in the world; have studied life histories carefully to learn where treatment could be effectively applied; have attempted to increase the effectiveness of parasites and diseases. Yet in spite of all these efforts our annual losses by insects are greater than ever before. If we consider the factors liable to cause increased loss in the future. we find them to be several. Our agricultural methods are liable to continue along their present lines, the acreage of crops of any one kind will increase rather than diminish, and the insect enemies of these crops as well as their parasites will thrive and follow them. It is probable that the intervals between outbreaks will become shorter because of the abundance of food, and each outbreak means a loss before it can be stopped. Insects not now important may change their food, and introduced forms will spread more widely over the United States and exact a larger loss than at present. New pests from other parts of the world will establish themselves, and the distribution of pests will be limited only by climatic conditions and food supply.

The discovery of parasitic and other enemies which at least reduce the importance of imported pests has resulted successfully in several cases. The discovery and introduction into Massachusetts of the gypsy and brown tail moths is of course of particular local interest and is important because it is the most extensive experiment of its kind ever attempted. Such attempts as this have their dangers, however. A careful and exhaustive study of the inter-relations of the forms concerned must be completed or the risk of introducing forms more injurious than beneficial will result. When properly conducted, however, this is one of the most promising ways in which man can be aided in his struggle against insects.

Much of our loss at the present time is due to ignorance, indifference and neglect on the part of those who can least afford losses by insects. When a general understanding of the problems of insect control shall have been reached, so that the work of an intelligent farmer in protecting his crops from insects is no longer nullified by the failure of his neighbors to similarly care for theirs, the real methods of control will become more evident and the results more commensurate with the efforts put forth. New principles of attack, different methods, and above all a more general understanding of conditions and the realization of the necessity of concerted action will undoubtedly accomplish much.

The Late William Hatcher.

William Hatcher, one of the oldest residents in the District of Columbia, and for nearly 30 years a gardener and florist at the Soldiers' home, died at his home on Harewood road in the District, March 16, at the age of 86 years. His immediate family were with him at the time of his death, which was due to pneumonia. He retired from active service three years ago. A native of England, he came to this country at the age of 15. He is survived by his widow and two sons, both of whom have been employed for many years at the Soldiers' home. Funeral services were held March 18, the burial taking place at Rock Creek cemetery.

The Late William B. Patterson.

TOWN TALK.

EDDYVILLE, IA.—The greenhouse of Charles Bickford was destroyed by fire March 12.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.—A handsomely equipped flower shop will be opened by the Shelton Seed Store.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—The Carolina Floral Store has not felt the strained war conditions in its business, having had more trade than last year.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—Wm. H. Vance says trade is rather slow, although there is a considerable outlet in funeral work. Easter prospects are good.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Joseph Trepel has opened a new florist shop at 1070 Flatbush avenue. The establishment is equipped in the most up-to-date style.

OTTAWA, KANS.—John T. Lester says this has been the darkest winter for many years in this vicinity, but business has been fine. Stock in all lines has been scarce with prices good.

LINCOLN, ILL.—John C. Moninger Co.'s baseball team, the Striech Colts, will open the season March 28, by playing Gullett & Sons' team at the I. & M. Park, near the new greenhouse.

HAMILTON, O.—There was a big snow storm here, March 18, and many telegraph and telephone wires are down. John Lodder & Sons say there is plenty of stock for Easter and look for a good business.

MERIDIAN, MISS.—Mrs. N. G. McKinney is as busy as can be with Easter prepartions. The war, she says, has not affected her trade in the least, and she is looking for a bigger business than ever this season.

DULUTH, MINN.—Seekins, who was recently burned out at Third avenue, east, is now settled at his branch store, at Second avenue, west. Walter Jaap says the local demand will about take care of all his Easter stock this year.

ITHACA, N. Y.—Contracts for the new floricultural greenhouse range at Cornell University have been let to the Wm. H. Lutton Co., Jersey City, N. J., King Construction Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y., and Johnston Heating Co., New York.

HOUSTON, TEX.—The Texas State Florists' Association, through President Kerr, has invited the members of the executive committee of the Society of American Florists to attend the second annual convention at Fort Worth, July 13-14.

FLINT, MICH.—Following a recent meeting here under the auspices of the state agricultural department, 125 bean growers of Genesee county have decided to organize and co-operate with the bean jobbers' association. J. F. Rieman, of Burton, has been chosen temporary president.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Retailers say the competitive conditions are deplorable with daffodils at 35 cents per dozen and violets and sweet peas at 35 cents per bunch. A few years ago Golden Spur and Von Sion sold here for 75 cents per dozen and there were not enough of them to go around.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—B. Stover says St. Patrick's day, so far as green carnations are concerned, is on the wane. There is so much cheap stock on the market that green carnations are not wanted. Last year he sold 500, this year 50. Business otherwise has been good and the weather ideal. There has been no snow since January and he is now looking forward to a good Easter business. There has been a great deal of funeral work here.

IT is said the attendance at the New York show March 17-23, was 75,000.

THE horticultural humbug dispensed to the public through the newspapers is well illustrated in the Chicago Tribune of March 24, where the "Garden Editor" seriously recommends a tablespoon of castor oil for an ailing rubber plant.

VICE-PRESIDENT DAN MACRORIE, of the Society of American Florists, has returned to San Francisco after visiting Chicago and eastern cities, fully convinced the attendance at the convention next August will eclipse that of all previous annual meetings of the national society.

Personal.

R. Karlstrom, for many years identified with the establishment of W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., will, it is stated, move to Cromwell, Conn., to take charge of A. N. Pierson's new landscape department.

Edwin Lonsdale's many friends will be pleased to learn that his health is steadily improving at Burpee's Floradale Farm, Lompoc, Calif., according to latest reports.

Am. Institute Chrysanthemum Show.

The annual chrysanthemum show of the American Institute of the City of New York will be held in the Engineering Societies' building, Nos. 25-33 West Thirty-ninth street, New York, November 3-5, 1915. The schedule of premiums will be announced when ready.

WM. A. EAGLESON, Sec'y.

Killing Weeds With Plant Poisons.

Killing weeds by plant poisons and afterward growing crops on the same land is a subject that seems to be of much popular interest. There are but few situations, however, where this method is feasible. In Australia, fields containing prickly pear have been sprayed with an arsenite of soda solution, and after the pear has been killed, the land plowed and planted to crops. According to reports from specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture it has been found satisfactory to handle honeysuckle under certain conditions by spraying the tops with fuel oil or crude petroleum, and after the leaves are dead and dry, setting fire to them. This removes all the tops and obviates the great inconvenience encountered in cutting them off or plowing them under. Considerable attention has also been given to applications for killing the vegetation and sterilizing the soil. This method is applicable to driveways, pathways, tennis courts, railroad rights of way, and similar situations.

For the past five years experiments have been made at Arlington Farm to find the best material, the best strength of application, the best time of application and other points. The list of materials used in the tests embraced practically all materials that had been suggested as being effective, and these tests have shown that of many materials there are three which, at the prices assigned, are better than any of the others, namely, arsenite of soda, common salt, and fuel oil. There are several points to be considered in selecting the best material among these three. The prices used as a basis were as follows: Commercial arsenite of soda, 25 cents per pound; common salt, $12 per ton; fuel oil, 12 cents per gallon. These are approximately the maximum prices which the small purchaser would be asked to pay. Under certain conditions the consumer may find the price of one of these substances relatively lower than the others. The character of the vegetation also governs the choice; broad-leaved plants seem to be relatively more affected by arsenite of soda than by salt or oil, as compared with narrow-leaved vegetation, such as grass. Salt is often objectionable when used on brick walks or other conspicuous places on account of the white residue which remains for some time.

As to the number of applications required, it has been found that several light applications are better than one heavy one, which is partly due to the fact that weed seeds in the soil, which are but little affected by these treatments, germinate and produce a new crop of weeds after the first crop is killed. After the first year, however, the number of applications may be reduced until weeds entirely cease to come up. The quantity of these herbicides to use depends on the character of the vegetation and the soil. On some of the arsenite of soda plats where the vegetation was largely broad-leaved plants the tops had been practically killed by a remarkably light application at a cost of $1.50 per acre, but the effects were merely temporary and new tops immediately sprang up. As an illustration of the quantity of material required, a weedy driveway having such plants as bluegrass, crab grass, plantain, clover and dandelion could be almost cleared by treating it with any one of the following substances, the amounts being given on a basis of 1 square rod: One-fourth pound of commercial arsenite of soda dissolved in 6 gallons of water; 22 pounds of common, coarse salt dissolved in 9 gallons of water; or 1 gallon of fuel oil. All these applications would cost approximately 12 cents per square rod, or $20 per acre, for the materials.

In the experiments the results with common salt have been somewhat erratic, so that preference should be given the other two substances. However, if a small area is to be treated, and the cost is therefore not a primary consideration, salt should be used in larger quantities than advised above, dissolving it at the rate of 1 pound to 1½ quarts of water. All applications should be made when there is no prospect of rain for 24 hours.

Flour From Flowers.

Although the title of this paragraph would seem to indicate that certain flowers may provide the basis for bread-making, it was not our intention to give this impression, though it is said that the pollen of the staminate cat-tail flowers is sometimes used for bread-making in India. At present we are interested in pointing out the fact that the word flour has really been derived from the word which designates the blossom of a plant. To most people the flower is the best part of the plant. So settled is this that amateur gardeners may often be heard to speak of their flowers when only leaves and stems are in sight, says the American Botanist. In a similar way, then, the flour was the best part of the meal; one might say the flowering part, just as we now speak of the efflorescence of a salt to indicate the fine powder that often forms upon it. The idea of a blossom is also embalmed in various other words with which we rarely associate it at present. For instance, to florish once meant to bear flowers in profusion, though we now speak of a plant as flourishing if it merely produces an abundance of leaves. The word, however, indicates how closely the idea of the general well-being of the plant and floriferousness are connected. Florid, again, originally meant covered with flowers. We still speak of flowery discourse or florid language and by a sort of extension of the idea, of a florid complexion. The word florin, which has been in use for centuries to designate various foreign coins, also shows a derivation from the flower. The first florin was coined in Florence, but it did not take its name from that city. It was called a florin because it bore a flower—a lily—upon it. The word flower originally came from the Latin flos or floris.

BUSINESS NORMAL.

The weather conditions are fine, bright sunny days being the rule; however, the cold, lake winds keep the thermometer hovering around the freezing point, with heavy frosts at night. Business is normal for this time of the year, stock being plentiful, and sales satisfactory. Roses are in good supply, especially in Pink Killarney and White Killarney, and the quality is very good. Red roses are a little short of the demand, especially in long-stemmed stock. Mrs. Aaron Wards are in good supply. American Beauties are still off crop, and it is a question whether they will be very plentiful for Easter. Carnations are in good supply, white cleaning up daily, however. Sweet peas are good stock, and in good demand. Lily of the valley and violets are equal to the demand. Snapdragons clean up daily. Mignonette, daisies, freesias, calendulas and swainsonas are part of daily receipts. Calla and Easter lilies are in good supply, both long and short stem stock. Bulbous stock still arrives in quantity. Florists are ordering wire-hanging baskets and sheet moss, getting ready for outdoor work. Inquiries and orders for Easter stock are numerous and point to a good business. Florists at the Sheriff street market had a full orchestra entertaining crowds who visited there March 20.

C. F. B.

Memphis, Tenn.

St. Patrick's day brought quite a flurry of business to the trade here and notwithstanding general apathy holds the field, some interest in the window displays and quite a few dinner parties were given in celebration of the day. Some excellent hyacinths and tulips in pots and pans are shown in the various floral shops. The department stores are selling Boston and Whitmani ferns at 10 cents each this week. All were brought here from out-of-town points.

NOTES.

This city is to have a sure enough florists' club, organization having been effected by the adoption of by-laws and work mapped out for the coming year. The temporary officers are Will Englehart, president, and A. Haisch, secretary.

Albert Haisch, 87 Madison street, filed a petition in bankruptcy, March 17, liabilities $6,672.90; assets, $3,392.55. Omar L. Jewell, Tennessee Trust building, has been appointed receiver.

PLENTY OF STOCK.

Trade has been rather quiet the past week, but is better at this writing, with plenty of stock of all kinds on hand to fill the orders. Roses of fine quality are arriving in good supply, especially fancy Mrs. Chas. Russell, which are seen featured in the window displays of the leading stores. Richmond is also in good supply, but is not moving any too well. American Beauty roses are arriving in large quantities and are being jobbed off in some instances at rather low prices. Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Queen, Killarney Brilliant, Hadley, Mrs. Geo. Shawyer, Milady, Rhea Reid, Sunburst, Bulgarie and Mrs. Aaron Ward are included in the offerings, and like the other roses, are plentiful. Carnations are seen at all the stores in large quantities, and while they clean up well each day, it is at low prices. Lily of the valley is in over-supply and has sold at lower prices last week than for some time past. Gardenias are none too plentiful at present, but orchids are in fair supply. Sweet peas of magnificent quality are seen in quantity, and while they are in good demand, prices are not what they should be, but have been inclined to stiffen the past few days. Callas do not appear to be any to plentiful, but lilies are in large supply and in good demand. Freesia is not selling as well as it might, and fancy stock is obtainable at very reasonable prices. Double violets are to be had in quantity, but home grown singles are scarce at times. Choice pink and yellow snapdragons are being offered, but clean up well each day at good prices. A limited supply of Ten Weeks stock and Spanish Iris is seen. Tulips, daffodils, jonquils, Paper White narcissi, daisies, pansies, mignonette, calendulas, forget-me-nots and other miscelleanous stock is also seen in quantity and southern jonquils are arriving in larger supply. Out-of-town as well as local orders are being booked for Easter in large numbers, and while everyone expects that cut flowers will be plentiful, and prices will be lower than last year, a brisk Easter trade is expected and it is advisable for everyone to place their orders well in advance. The demand the past week for Easter plants has been brisk, and while there appears to be a lot of lilies in sight at present, a cleanup in this item can be expected. Azaleas, roses, spireas, hydrangeas, rhododendrons and deutzias are as usual among the offerings and bulbous stock in pots and pans seems to be in larger supply this year. The supply houses all report a busy week with the demand for cut flower and plant baskets unusually heavy.

The Cook County Florists' Association met at The Tavern, West Washington street, March 18, to consider the invitation to join the Chicago Florists' Club either as a body or individually. After considerable discussion a committee, consisting of John Zech, Wm. H. Amling and Philip Brodbeck was appointed to meet with a committee representing the Florists' Club and consisting of W. J. A. T. Pyfer & Co. are redecorating the interior of their store and will have everything in tip-top condition for Easter. Miss Nettie Parker, the popular young secretary of this firm, celebrated a birthday on Wednesday, March 24.

At Erne & Klingel's store smilax is in good supply and is selling well. Sweet peas, roses and carnations are arriving in large quantities and some especially fine Killarney are among the offerings.

The E. C. Amling Co. and the A. L. Randall Co. are moving into their new quarters in the Le Moyne building on Lake street and North Wabash avenue where the Easter trade will be handled.

The shipping trade is on in earnest at the Geo. Wittbold Co.'s store, the demand for Easter plants such as spireas, rambler roses, hydrangeas and lilies being as usual in brisk demand.

George Economopolus says that sweet peas are in brisk demand at the Alpha Floral Co.'s store and more sales are recorded each day for this item than any other flower.

Joseph Ziska & Sons report a brisk demand for supplies of all kinds and manage to fill all orders on time even though their ever increasing business demands larger quarters.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is receiving a large variety of choice stock in all the seasonable offerings and is looking forward to a brisk Easter trade.

Miss Schroeder is the latest addition to the staff of the Atlas Floral Co. on East Randolph street where Mrs. Irene Williams presides.

Prices As Low As Others.

Otto W. Frese visited Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s greenhouses at Morton Grove on Monday, March 22, to get a line on the stock that his firm will have to offer for Easter. He found everything in splendid condition and the outlook is fine for heavy cuts of roses, carnations, lily of the valley, bulbous stock, etc. Mr. Frese, who is an expert judge of stock, says that he never saw as fine a lot of lilies as his firm has this year and that the same holds good for azaleas, and other visitors to the greenhouses are of the same opinion. Orders are arriving in grand style at both the store and the greenhouses and a very brisk Easter trade is anticipated. T. E. Waters and his assistants are busy filling orders in the supply department for Easter stock, especially for cut flowers and plant baskets, which are in excellent demand.

Peter Sroczynski, 1525 North Harding avenue, was operated upon February 20 for gall stones and 19 days afterwards was able to return home and is improving a little each day. During the time he was in the hospital business went on without a hitch and his stock of Easter lilies have a good count this year and will be as good as ever. He says he had one consignment of bulbs from Holland, mostly tulips, which was the largest dump that he had in 25 years. Everybody who knows Mr. Sroczynski or "Big Pete," as he is often called, are pleased to hear that he is feeling better and hope to see him about again soon.

Peter Reinberg and wife are visiting at West Baden for a few weeks. At the store the receipts of My Maryland and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are large and according to Felix Reichling will be in nice crop for Easter. At the greenhouses Emil Reichling and his crew have practically finished planting all the Mrs. Chas. Russell roses which are being grown in exceedingly large numbers and replaced the American Beauty to a large extent.

The Fleischmann Floral Co. is making very elaborate window displays of cut flowers and plants at its East Jackson boulevard store, and particularly noticeable this week was an artistically arranged basket of splendidly grown Mrs. Chas. Russell roses, colored freesias, jonquils and pussy willows.

John Kruchten is pleased with the way his pot lilies have been selling and has many nice large orders booked for Easter. He has over 35,000 pot plants to offer this year and intends to dispose of them all to the local trade. His receipts of cut blooms will be as large as in former years.

Zech & Mann are having a brisk local and out-of-town demand for fancy sweet peas, which are being handled in unusually large supply at this establishment this season. They will have a large quantity of lilies to offer at Easter.

Paul M. Palez, Little Rock, Ark., has been here for several days buying stock for his Easter trade. He reports that business has been quiet in Little Rock so far this year, but has shown considerable improvement since March 1.

John Kruchten was relieved of a new pair of auto tires and a complete set of tools when somebody broke into his garage one night this week and walked away with the outfit.

George Reinberg filled a large order for rose plants this week that called for a whole car load of stock.

J. J. Kral, formerly with the Fleischman Floral Co., is now in the employ of George Wienhoeber.

Heaton Nichols has taken over the management of the Labo greenhouses at Joliet.

The demand for rose plants and carnation cuttings is better than it has been for some time. Killarney Brilliant is selling especially well.

STOCK CONTINUES PLENTIFUL.

The past week stock in general was plentiful. White carnations from March 15 to 17 were stiff in price, three to four cents being the prevailing price. Colored varieties in carnations were plentiful. In roses the only scarcity appeared to be in American Beauties. Violets are getting smaller blooms daily. Sweet peas, especially in the poorer grades, are plentiful. Plenty of all varieties of greens.

New Orleans Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society was held March 18, President P. A. Chopin and Secretary C. R. Panter at their respective posts. The committee on by-laws submitted the revised laws and they were distributed among the members present. Application for membership, made by H. Mische, was balloted upon and he was unanimously elected. The question of making a spring exhibit was taken up and discussed by P. A. Chopin, J. Steckler, P. Abele, H. Kraak, H. Illenberger, R. Eichling and others. All of the above members seemed to think that the time was opportune to hold a spring show, in connection with the members of the committee who are undertaking the project of making the city beautiful campaign a success, and the president appointed the following committee to arrange details: J. Steckler, chairman; P. A. Chopin, ex-officio; C. R. Panter, secretary; P. Abele, H. Kraak, H. C. Doescher and C. W. Eichling.

MARKET SHOWS IMPROVEMENT.

Market conditions have improved during the past week. Paper-whites are not very plentiful, and yellow tulips are scarce, but other colors are in good supply. Daffodils and jonquils are not so plentiful as a week ago. The demand for roses is in balance with the supply, and carnations are getting more plentiful, but the price holds the same—three cents for good stock. Lilies are arriving in fine condition, and easily command 10 cents for quality stock. Pot stock commands from 8 to 12½ cents in fancy grades. The florists as a rule are using plants for window displays and report excellent sales in this line as compared with previous years. The low prices that have ruled on special sales have advanced somewhat during the past week, but customers still seem to think that the retail florist is making an exceptionally large profit at $1 a dozen for stock they get, or think they get, in quality just as good as 24 cents a dozen, and a salesman has to convince them that there is a "difference" for the difference in price.

NOTES.

Max Kaiser, of the Merriam Park greenhouses is busy with his large stock of Easter lilies and rambler roses. He will add two extra delivery trucks to his auto service next week to handle the St. Paul and Minneapolis trade.

W. C. Drake has purchased a farm in Polk County and will build a range and cater to the wholesale trade. He intends to dispose of his establishment at Fourth avenue and Lake street.

Rice Brothers are very busy sending out supplies, and report that so far, the Easter sales for 1915 will eclipse those of a year ago.

Wm. Desmond is the busiest man in the "twin-cities," with all the different departments—retail, wholesale, cut flowers, and plants.

John Rovich, shipping clerk for Rice Bros., is arranging a dance for Saturday, April 10, and expects all the craft to be there.

Carl Rice left recently on a business trip to Duluth, Hibbing and other northern points.

A. S. Rice is back at the desk again, after a two months' hard battle with typhoid fever.

Wm. Holmes had a fine trade for the opening of his flower department at Dayton's.

Gardeners' and Florists' Ass'n of Ontario.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Association of Ontario was held in St. George's hall, Elm Street, Toronto, Tuesday evening, March 16, President Charles Maxey in the chair. After the business session was finished, and three new members elected, E. F. Collins gave a very interesting and instructive talk on "Bedding, the Location and What to Plant." J. McPherson Ross also read a valuable paper on "Hardy Flowering Shrubs." Both talks were much appreciated by the members present, who numbered about 40. Four exhibits for competition were also a feature of the meeting.

Business during the past week has been exceptionally good for the season. The fine weather we have been having has brought in a larger supply of flowers, but the trade has increased sufficiently to clean up most of the stock. Violets and sweet peas are very plentiful, and large quantities are being used at prices that may be considered fair. Roses went a little better this week, although there was not as marked an improvement in their sale, as was the case with carnations. White carnations were in heavy demand March 15 and 16 for use on St. Patrick's day, nearly any kind of flower bringing $4.00 per 100. The demand for carnations of all colors held up well during the week, prices averaging three cents.

NOTES.

Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, the well known grower of sweet peas and violets, has given the selling agency of his goods to Henry M. Robinson & Co., the wholesale florists. The goods will be sold at his stall at the Co-operative Market as usual. Mr. Sim is at present shipping some exceptionally fine sweet peas of the Spencer type. His violets are also of fine color, size and fragrance. On Saturday, March 20, he sent to the market 18,000 sweet peas and 75,000 violets.

Morris Comley, of Burlington, is sending to Henry Haas at the Co-operative market, a large supply of carnations, violets, sweet peas and stocks. All his goods come in over the road in a large motor truck he bought for the purpose.

Maurice Hambro, of H. M. Robinson & Co., is attending his duties again after having been laid up for two weeks with blood poisoning in his leg.

N. M. Silverman, the Winter street florist, has been confined to his home with illness for the past two weeks. He is improving rapidly at the time of writing and is in hopes of soon returning to his business.

Some of the finest White Enchantress carnations seen in this city are grown by A. Eaton, of So. Sudbury. He also has Winsor, Pink Delight, Fenn and Beacon that are exceptionally well grown.

F. E. Palmer, of Brookline, is recuperating from a severe attack of la grippe. Business at his store has been holding up very well and preparations are being made for his spring landscape work.

F. R. Mathison, of Waltham, has taken over the business of A. G. Cartwright of that city, and is shipping his roses to Welch Bros. F. L. W.

Lake Geneva Gardeners' Association.

The first regular meeting of the above association, under the new board of directors, was held Tuesday, March 16, in Horticultural hall. The routine business being disposed of, the reports showing the association in a good financial condition, the following new members were proposed and elected by acclaimation: R. P. Montgomery, S. Gotter, P. Peterson, H. West and F. Brady.

It is the plan of the new board of directors to make the meetings more interesting and instructive and it is hoped that in the future, one or more interesting papers on seasonable subjects will be read and discussed at the meetings. A. Martini read a paper on "Vegetable Culture in Frames" and Axel Johnson gave a short talk on "Seasonable Work." Both papers were well discussed and a very interesting and instructive evening was enjoyed by those present. For the next regular meeting, April 6, T. Sampson will talk on "Sweet Pea Cultivation" and T. Blackwood on "Roses Under Glass."

The board of directors for 1915 are as follows: A. J. Smith, president; W. P. Longland, vice president; T. Niles, secretary; A. Johnson, treasurer; A. Martini, F. Sampson, T. Blackwood, M. Barrett, W. Wahlstedt. T. N.

Newport, R. I.

John T. Allan, one of the judges on orchids and roses at the New York spring show, has returned home and reports a "fine show." While in New York he exhibited a photograph of a tulip having three blooms on one stem, and persons who are an authority on tulips said they never saw anything like it and thought it to be of commercial value.

The park commission has made a new departure by advertising for a park superintendent to take full charge of caring for the parks. In previous years the work was let out on contract.

Thomas Gibson has been to Boston and Providence, securing plants and flowers for his Easter trade.

Dr. Roderick Terry is building a sectional greenhouse 25x75 feet, for palms and flowering plants.

Holm & Olson's store has a very attractive window display of plants, and everybody is getting ready for a greater than ever Easter trade.

O. R. Eckhart & Co. are busy packing lilies and other plants for shipping, with plenty of orders booked for Easter to make them happy.

John Hoffman, formerly with L. L. May & Co. has opened an attractive flower shop on East Sixth street.

FAIR DEMAND, BUT MARKET OVERSUPPLIED.

The market situation is much the same as last week; more flowers than can be used, and yet a very fair demand considering the season. Roses are sold cheap in large quantity lots, because perhaps there are not many buyers who have facilities for handling special sales. The smaller buyers, whose limit is 50 to 100 of a variety at a time, pay, even in dull times, nearly the highest market price. American Beauty roses are more plentiful, and full crops are expected with some large growers at Easter. Killarney and Killarney Brilliant are wonderfully fine just now. Carnations are helping to bolster the market, they being scarce. White daffodils are undoing the good efforts of the carnation, the supply appearing unlimited, and the worst is yet to come, for the southern stock is now being thrown on the market freely. Sweet peas have shortened up considerably, advancing in price from 25 to 50 per cent. Cattleyas are not quite so plentiful. Gardenias and violets are in oversupply, and the single violets are getting much smaller. Easter lilies and callas are in fair demand. Arbutus is now plentiful and is in good demand, the street men paying more than the stores.

NOTES.

George Cooper Watson, who now parts his name in the middle, takes exception to those who criticise the selling of flowers by the department stores. As far as the writer has heard, there has not of late, at least in the past few years, been criticism of their being in the flower business. It was only when the growers and some commission houses began feeding them stock on consignment, taking back the unsold and giving credit for the same, that exception was taken, on the ground that it was impossible for the average storekeeper to compete with the large store when they worked under such an arrangement. There is no question but there is a great opportunity for a large business in flowers in any of the modern department stores. C. C. Trepel has shown what can be done in New York and Brooklyn. He buys outright, however, and gets his advantage in the lowest quantity prices. Cut flowers are perishable and must be sold, but they should be sold at some price, and not given away, as it practically amounts to, when the unsold stock is taken back. While on this subject, the rumor of last week that Walter Yates was to run a department in Gimbel's store has not been run out true. He has declined the proposition, as they would not lease and would only permit the business to be carried on with 30 per cent of the gross receipts turned over to the store management. All the large stores handle Easter plants, buying in quantities. One department store is reported to have purchased their Easter lilies at 6 cents per bud and flower. This appears to be a low record price for good stock.

Quite a number of the local fraternity visited the New York show last week. All pronounce it a wonderful exhibition, and feel that Philadelphia will have to get all her forces together to beat it in the international show next year.

Secretary Rust, of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, says the outlook for a good spring show is very favorable, there being a large lot of entries. There will be great competition for the Dreer, Michell & Usterer prizes.

The Easter lily promises to be a record crop this year, all the growers having exceptionally fine plants, well-timed and budded. Ten cents per bud and flower for local delivery appears high for the select stock.

Pennock's window was very showy the past week with its display of lavender colored baskets, filled with snapdragons, tulips, roses and other spring flowers.

The M. Rice Co. are featuring all kinds of paper coverings on pots. A large business in Easter baskets has kept the force working nights.

Buyers from many cities were visitors during the past two weeks, looking over the growers' stocks, and many large orders have been booked.

Berger Brothers are handling a special brand of lily of the valley that is extra fine. They expect a great holiday business.

Edward Reid reports that his out-of-town trade must expect to do well, judging from the large orders already received.

Henry A. Dreer has had a great run on table ferns, selling them in very large quantities for the past two months.

The Leo Niessen Co. anticipates a great Easter business and has never been better supplied than at this time.

STOCK PLENTIFUL AND PRICES FAIR.

Carnations and roses have been selling at fair prices, with enough to fill orders. The demand for white carnations for St. Patrick's day did not seem so strong this year as in previous years, there being a good number of white carnations to be had for this occasion, and orders were well taken care of. The bulbous stock is still glutting the market, and sweet peas and violets also arrive in quantities. Smilax is somewhat scarce at the present time, but asparagus and Sprengeri are equal to the demand.

NOTES.

At the C. C. Pollworth Co. the lily plants have never looked finer, and are being ordered up daily. They also have a fine lot of azaleas and ramblers, which will be just right for Easter, and at the new greenhouse the rose stock is looking fine.

John Arnold has rented a location on the main floor of Schuster's dry goods store, Third and Harmon streets for a floral department and opened up Saturday, March 20. He reports trade satisfactory for the opening.

Gust Rusch & Co. are receiving some fine orchid sweet peas from Watertown, which find ready sale. The roses from the Cudahy greenhouse are of excellent quality and soon find ready sale.

Holton & Hunkel Co. are cutting a fine lot of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses at present, and are disposing of a large lot of plants for Easter, which are of a fine variety.

Mrs. Harry Mann is seriously ill at St. Joseph's hospital, and has but a very slight chance for recovery. Harry has the sympathy of his friends in the trade.

Currie Bros. have a fine store and report trade as good as ever.

Dayton, O.

At a meeting held March 17, at the Y. M. C. A. building, the organization of the Dayton Florists' and Gardeners' Association was perfected, a constitution and by-laws were adopted, and the following officers were named: Horace M. Frank, president; E. D. Brame, vice-president; E. E. Schaeffer, secretary; J. W. Rodgers, treasurer. W. L. Vogel, L. D. Polk and L. D. Johnson were elected directors. The meeting was attended by about fifty of those interested. Regular meetings of the association will be held on the Tuesday after the first Monday in each month, and W. A. Barber, E. E. Schaeffer and J. W. Rodgers were selected as a committee to secure a permanent place of meeting. At the next meeting papers will be read by George W. Bartholomew on "Growing Flowers," and by M. Anderson on "Store Management."

Warren G. Matthews, florist, notified the city welfare department, March 17, he would be willing to donate material for 1,000 bird houses, and suggested the use of lumber for bird homes for the city parks. The offer was thankfully received by the city officials.

BUSINESS IS NORMAL.

While the flower show attracted great attention during the past week, business was about normal. The supply was not particularly heavy, though increasing toward the last of the week; neither was the demand heavy.

March 22.—This week opens very quiet with all stocks moving slowly and largely on the increase.

NOTES.

Jos. Millang of the New York Cut Flower Co. continues to receive fine roses, from both A. N. Pierson, Inc., and F. R. Pierson Co.; also the noted Cottage Gardens carnations, all of which were leading features at the flower show.

Among many others who have recently visited this city and the flower show was J. Vonder Linden, the well known violet grower of Rhinebeck, N. Y. He advises us that he now grows carnations as well as violets.

We have recently noted in the Cut Flower Exchange, very fine Ullrich Brunner roses from the estate of Mrs. Chas. Snyder, Woodside, L. I., N. Y.

J. K. Allen has recently received from Chas. Hunt, Staten Island, N. Y., very finely flowered plants of geraniums and mountain phlox.

At W. F. Sheridan's we have just noted particularly fine Mrs. Chas. Russell roses; also J. L. Mocks, and a good line of other stocks.

While there are plenty of snapdragons on the market some of the best we have seen are at the store of Jas. McManus.

Geo. C. Siebrecht is featuring a most excellent stock of the Darwin tulips, acacias and other good stocks.

At the present time Wm. Kessler is very strong on fine Easter lilies, but has plenty of other good stock.

John Young is receiving fine stock of Francis Scott Key, Taft and all the other newer varieties of roses.

E. C. Horan is always strong on lily of the valley, with a good variety of other stocks.

Wm. P. Ford continues to receive very fine sweet peas, tulips and double stocks.

At the United Cut Flower Co. we note good roses, carnations and pansies.

The scores of the New York Florists' Bowling Club, Thursday, March 18, were as follows:

J. Fenrich	162	165

GOOD EASTER TRADE ANTICIPATED.

Weather conditions the past week have been cool, but not stormy. Trade has been on the quiet side, with stock, such as bulbs and carnations equal to all demands. Funeral work has been about all that the retailer could call a good part of his business. All the growers are hopeful of a good supply of everything for Easter, and only extremely cold and dark weather can retard anything. Plants of all kinds, in flower, will play an important part in the Easter business this year. The artistically trimmed pot, or the basket with various plants growing, will appeal to the buyer when placed beside one dozen roses at $2, $2.50 or $3 and other more elaborate arrangements to choose from. The corsage of violets, sweet peas, or a pretty arrangement, will be what they want so salesmen "think", and sell what you think the people should have, not forgetting that your boss may be growing a fine lot of plants or sweet peas and a limited number of roses or carnations, which are so generally called for and so liable to that increase in price. This is the year of all years when sales count, and the goods you grow should be disposed of.

Clippings from one of our Eastern papers say that the New York Central green houses at Batavia, N. Y., have 60,000 plants, getting ready for the planting along their lines from Buffalo to New York. Looking backward, the writer well remembers when Wm. Stroh, the big grower of Attica, N. Y., with a store in Buffalo, was the manager of the N. Y. Central range at Batavia. Will has made good at his Attica place; also in Buffalo.

Mrs. E. C. Armbrust is spending the cold month of March in Southern Pines, North Carolina. BISON.

Lancaster County Florists' Club.

A number of the members, not knowing how to come to a meeting that was not preceeded by a trip of some sort, came into town in the afternoon and visited some of the local greenhouses; the rest, or nearly all of the rest, congregated at the rooms by 7:30 p. m. After the minutes were read and approved and a few bills ordered paid, the meeting was adjourned to witness the parade of the churches to the Stough tabernacle. The meeting then resumed and a report was heard from the "glad hand and sunshine committee" in regard to ladies' night, April 15. Their report called for a banquet at the Stevens house. The committee consists of Ira Landis, Paradise, Pa.; S. Rutter Hess, Gap, Pa.; J. Wade Galey, Strasburg, Pa.; Chas. B. Herr, Strasburg, Pa. They will be ready with the glad hand for any visiting florists, and will endeavor to extend sunshine into the affair from 7 p. m. until any old hour they may decide to quit. The decorations will be voluntary, and no doubt profuse.

Elmer Weaver gave a talk on the recent trip to Philadelphia, and his little journey into Chester county the next day. Charles Grakelow then gave us an excellent impromptu talk on our business in general, and it was without question the best and most profitable evening we have ever had. There was not one who did not go home with some good new ideas under his hat, and if all the retailers had been present, instead of two of them, the flower trade would have had an impetus here that would have been felt keenly. As it is I am afraid these two who were present will get all the trade; they at least got all the ideas for getting trade. It is unfortunate for the rest of the world that this talk was not in the shape of a paper to be printed. Mr. Grakelow brought out strongly the benefit to be had by, and the necessity of having a strong personality in this business. He also brought out the necessity of getting away from the stereotype forms of advertising, and putting out advertising with what he calls, a punch to it. He spoke of department store features of our business, and pointed out the necessity of our being able to meet this sort of competition, as well as that of the street men. Our president was so deeply impressed with the talk that he started to make a motion himself to give the speaker a vote of thanks, but was headed off by the writer, and Mr. Grakelow was not only given a vote of thanks, but actually had them from every member present. After the meeting, a bowling league under the leadership of George Goldbach was formed, and the first evening was spent in rolling duck pins with scores ranging from 64 to 110. ALBERT M. HERR.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—A special demonstration arranged by the extension division of the Minnesota college of agriculture, the Northern Pacific railway and the Soo railway, for the purpose of displaying good seeds to Minnesota farmers, will start from this city April 1, stopping at most of the farming communities. The trip will require six weeks.

PROSPECTS FOR EASTER TRADE GOOD.

The prospects for Easter trade are very bright. General business conditions are better right now than has been the rule for several years here and we look for the florists having a better Easter trade this year than has ever before been experienced in this city.

The trade in cut flowers and plants for indoors continues to be quite satisfactory. The weather remains so cool that nothing so far is being done much in out-door planting. With Easter but two weeks away the flower store windows are beginning to show some of the attractions in preparation for that date.

NOTES.

President of the Oklahoma State Society of Florists, G. W. Stiles, has appointed the committee of three to take charge of the flower show, which the society will hold early in November. The members of the committee are J. W. Furrow, C. T. Bickes and S. S. Butterfield.

Furrow & Company, in addition to a choice selection of flowering plants are also showing a collection of tastily arranged baskets, which tend to make a very attractive window display.

The Stiles Co. are bringing in rhododendrons, lilacs and pot Dutch hyacinths, all in splendid bloom.

MARKET OVERSUPPLIED, DEMAND LIGHT.

Trade has fallen away miserably during the past ten days. There is too much stock of all kinds and no demand. The early opening of spring has hastened into bloom all flowering plants usually used at this time of the year, with a consequent falling off in demand for greenhouse stock. Carnations are a glut, and likely to continue so. The same may be said of roses. Out-door roses are now beginning to make their presence felt in no small degree. Bulbous stock of all kinds is in oversupply and bringing very low figures. Lilium formosum and giganteum are also plentiful, but as yet without any marked demand. Violets are getting poorer in quality, owing to the very warm weather. Gardenias are in good supply and of splendid quality. Orchids are plentiful, but are holding up fairly well. Sweet peas of the early flowering varieties are beginning to be more plentiful, but as yet none of the Spencer type have put in an appearance. Greens, smilax and ferns are in large supply. Snapdragons are scarce and command fairly good prices.

NOTES.

At the last meeting of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society it was decided not to affiliate with any other society holding a spring show. The attendance was large and very enthusiastic. Vice-president David W. Slade read a paper on "Shrubs as Grown in California," and judging from the masterly way in which he treated tl is subject the author is an authority of no mean experience. Several new members were admitted to membership.

Secretary Frank G. Cuthbertson of the American Sweet Pea Society reports entries coming in so fast that he was obliged to place an order for one thousand extra vases for sweet peas. This is indeed good news to every lover of this flower and the writer has no hesitancy in predicting that the show held on June 4, under the auspices of this society is going to be one of the most interesting held during the exposition.

John McLaren is leaving nothing undone to have the Convention Garden in the finest possible shape when the members of the Society of American Florists convene here in August. Every member of the trade in this city is hoping that our eastern friends will come in large numbers, and no effort will be spared on our part to see that they enjoy themselves thoroughly after their trip across the continent.

Manager H. Plath announces that all plans are completed for the spring show at the Panama-Pacific exposition. The number of entries were much larger than at first anticipated. It is the hope of the committee that this show will be so successful that greater interest will be attracted to each succeeding one.

The display of greenhouse-grown bulbs by San Mateo county is one of the features of the exposition just now. Head Gardener A. McDonald is showing us some grand stock, especially hyacinths and formosum.

Redwood City, a suburb of San Francisco, has decided to hold a floral show in the rotunda of the court house building, May 25. Several hundred dollars in cash prizes are to be awarded the successful exhibitors.

C. C. Woodword and wife of Santa Clara were visitors during the week, having motored up from that city. Chas. C. Navlet and Arthur Cann, both of San Jose, were visitors also.

The Art Floral Co., on Powell street, is featuring some splendidly grown French hydrangeas this week. V. Matraio, the manager, reports that they clean up well.

Podesta and Baldocchi are showing some exquisitely arranged windows of orchids, as are also Pelicano, Rossi & Co.

G. N.

Cincinnati.

SUPPLY INCREASES WITH FAIR DEMAND.

All seasonable varieties of stock are plentiful in this market. During last week and the preceding week, the receipts showed a steady increase in the size of the daily cut, and at the rate stock is coming in, the prospects for Easter are very bright. The demand for stock is fair and results in fairly good amount of business, although not nearly enough to keep the market cleaned up each week. The rose cut is very heavy and generally of a very good quality. The receipts in American Beauties are easily sufficient to take care of present demands. Carnation cuts, too, are heavier than they were. They have a pretty fair market. Lilies are in a good supply. Bulbous stock, including tulips, jonquils, daffodils, Dutch hyacinths and poeticus are all plentiful. Both callas and rubrums are also in a fair supply. Sweet peas are in a large supply, and meet with a good active call. Lily of the valley and violets sell rather slowly. Other offerings include antirrhinums, Baby primroses, forget-me-nots and mignonette.

Increase Your Sales
Get Volume of Business

Your business can be easily increased by creating more and bigger sales with your present customers, and by creating new flower buyers through EFFECTIVE ADVERTISING. Our FLORIST FOLDERS give you direct advertising, which goes straight into the homes of those you want to reach. Our printed folders are in color. They are harmonious with the idea of flower advertising. Flowers give us the most beautiful color and they require color advertising. Florists in over 500 towns and cities are using our system of Folders.

Write us for our sample folders, cuts and slides for advertising:—

SPRING PLANTING

Our Spring Planting Folder is one of the best folders we have ever issued. A beautiful out-of-doors illustration in colors with lots of human interest and selling power. Every retail florist, landscape gardener, nurseryman seedsman, should mail this folder to his customers and prospective customers.

Just the thing to promote anything in connection with the out doors—bulbs, trees and shrubs, hanging baskets, window boxes, porch boxes, sun parlors, seeds or lawns. This folder can be printed up with your individual wording under any heading. It is suitable for making any kind of a Spring Announcement. Size unfolded 10¼ inches by 6¼ inches—folds twice and can be sealed and mailed under penny postage or in standard 6½ size envelope. Also a beautiful line of cuts and slides. Send for samples of Folders and further information.

MOTHERS' DAY

May 9, 1915.

We have a sales-producing campaign mapped out for this day, complete in every detail. Don't plan your advertising for MOTHERS' DAY without seeing our samples. You will be delighted with the plan we have worked out for promoting MOTHERS' DAY. The plan covers beautifully colored folders same size as Spring Planting folders described, also newspaper cuts and colored slides. The florists who used our Mothers' Day plan of campaign last season secured very satisfactory results. Write for further particulars and samples—mailed free on request. Don't pass up Mothers' Day until you have gone into the proposition with us carefully. We have worked out a plan which meets every objection put forth by retail florists against pushing Mothers' Day. Don't wait until the Easter rush is on. Write for samples today.

A man's mail will reach him where no mortal can. Send us your name for our Mailing List.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif., President; J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., First Vice-President; E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer; S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O., Assistant Secretary.

Thirty-Third annual meeting, San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, 1915.

BELOIT, KAN.—The Beloit Seed Co. is improving its store on South Mill steet.

A. J. BROWN, of the A. J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., says the wholesale trade is booming.

W. H. GRENELL, Pierrepont Manor, N. Y., is spending a few weeks at Clifton Springs, N. Y., sanitarium.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade March 24 were as follows: Timothy, $5.00 to $6.50 per 100 pounds.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. L. Rogers, of Rogers Bros., Alpena, Mich.; B. W. Dulaney, representing J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.

IT is strange that while European buyers have taken more than 500 carloads of old dry peas, yet they will not buy a case of fresh canned goods.

IT is believed the stock of freesia bulbs in southern France, California and even in Bermuda, has extended far beyond the increase of trade requirements.

GOLFERS' COMMENT.—The newly elected president of the United States Golf Association intimates, "that amateurs who have studied the game know more about seeds, soil and fertilizers than most professionals."

NASHVILLE, TENN.—"If the balance of the seedsmen are like I am," says J. R. Peay, of J. R. Peay & Co., wholesale field seeds, "they have all they can say grace over. I couldn't ask for a better business than I am doing."

THE cool March weather in the west has tended to hold the mail trade in check and it is not considered that the height of the mail order business has as yet been reached. There are still indications of ice in the vicinity of Chicago where the ground is not touched by the sun.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., March 5.—The Missouri house this afternoon engrossed as a special order of business the pure seed bill introduced by Representative Gordon of Clay county which provides that the state board of agriculture test seeds and tag quantities of more than 10 pounds.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Beckert's Seed Store reports that business with them is excellent, and a continuance of the good conditions is looked for. "Something new" in the windows of the handsome store almost every day is a business bringing idea with them that helps sales.

THE Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., of Gilroy, Calif., writing under date of March 10, say: "Crop prospects generally are good. There has been some little damage to onion from excessive rains, but this is not serious. Sweet peas are looking well. Growers are all busy planting lettuce, which they were unable to get in earlier on account of the rains."

PORTAGE, WIS.—The T. H. Cochrane Co., seed dealers, reports that business during the past year has been better than that of any year since the company was established. The warehouse will be enlarged this spring to take care of the increasing trade.

SAN JOSE, CALIF.—The Braslan Seed Growers Co., Inc., writes as follows, March 10: "Excessive rainfall in January and February has been detrimental in some localities and interfered generally with seeding. Favorable weather from this date may change the present complexion and there is yet a possibility of good average returns."

PARIS, KY.—The creditors of R. B. Hutchcraft, wholesale seed merchant, who was recently forced into involuntary bankruptcy by some of his Lexington creditors, have agreed to allow his wife 15 per cent of the appraised valuation of the property in lieu of her dower rights in the estate. By this arrangement the property can now be sold without an entanglement and a clear deed given.

LYNN, MASS.—James J. H. Gregory & Son, seed growers of Marblehead, Mass., have opened a branch store at 162 Oxford street, this city. The new quarters, a warehouse with three floors, 265 feet long, has a spur track and a large garage capable of caring for six trucks. R. G. M. Stockwell, formerly in charge of the seed department of the Collins Hardware Co., which went out of business last year, has been appointed manager of the local branch.

NEW YORK.—At the store of J. M. Thorburn & Co. it was recently stated that spring business was starting up well, large orders for grass seed being booked.—Peter Henderson & Co. state that the outlook for the season of 1915 is far better at this date than was expected early in January. It looks now as if it will be a very good year, particularly in vegetable seeds.—At Vaughan's Seed Store it is said that counter and mail trade in all kinds of flower and vegetable seeds is on the increase.—Wm. Elliott & Son and Burnett Bros. say the outlook is favorable.—Weeber & Don consider the condition of business satisfactory.

GILROY, CALIF., March 11.—Waldo Rohnert writes as follows: "Regarding prospects from present appearances will say that so far what is in the ground is looking very good. We have had considerable rain, but no serious floods. From early December until the end of February it seemed to rain continually, so that there was little opportunity to do any sowing. Lettuce and radish will probably be a little late, but owing to the good condition of the land we can look for reasonably good crops. Sweet peas are looking promising, also all root crops. Comparing this season with the last three seasons I would say that conditions are better than normal."

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., March 8.—John Bodger & Sons Co. report: "We have replanted most of our sweet pea acreage twice and at this writing have decided to cultivate 200 to 250 acres and plant beans, as the season is now past for replanting sweet peas. This includes a large portion of our grandiflora and Spencer varieties, besides the early flowering, excepting Mrs. Wallace, which survived, but was nipped by frost and does not look like a crop. We expect you have had reports from the north of the rains which have been coming at intervals of six to eight days ever since December. Our heavy land is so wet that we have been unable to stand on it for 40 days. Seed planted barely under the ground rotted as though it was standing in water. Conditions, however, are more favorable for flower seeds on which we are concentrating our energies."

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—S. G. Courteen, president of the Courteen Seed Co., gives the following interesting report of market conditions: The past winter has been a memorable one to all wholesalers in agricultural produce. Values on the average for all farm products have been probably the highest in the last 30 years—the direct cause being the European situation. The market in dried peas has felt it equally with other cereals. The large quantity of old seed peas hanging over the market for the past two seasons have disappeared, having found their way across the Atlantic as a cheap food for the distressed Europeans. Supplies at the present time of dried peas are extremely limited, and prices hovering close to the three dollar per bushel mark. The exports of old Alaska and other seed peas have aggregated 250 to 300 cars, this in addition to the free exports of the standard varieties of cooking peas.

FUNERAL WORK BIG FACTOR IN SALES.

Funeral work is still the biggest part of the business done and some elaborate and expensive pieces have been executed lately. Many people seem to deny themselves flowers just now, but the offering of tributes at funerals has not decreased. There is a good supply of roses and carnations at moderate prices, and large quantities of bulbous stock at any old price on the market, which all seems to find a sale, doubtless at a loss, for it is hard to see how Golden Spur narcissi can be grown profitably at 40c per hundred, nor retailed at 25c per dozen with a profit. Easter plants will be better than ever this year as the winter has been moderate and correct temperatures in the respective houses have been maintained. Lilies have never been so free from disease as this year and they are well budded and of even growth. Hydrangeas, since the introduction of the French varieties, are much easier to handle and have every shoot in bud, and their great range in color should make them next to the lily, the best Easter plant going. Pot roses are somewhat like the azaleas, a little shy to bud. It is said that they were lifted too soon, though some varieties are quite satisfactory. There will be the usual supply of cyclamens, primulas and bulbous stock.

NOTES.

The Canadian Horticultural Association executive meeting will be held April 12 in London, Ont. The usual custom was to hold it in March, but owing to Easter being so near, it was felt that the members would be more at liberty after Easter.

St. Patrick's day did not come up to expectations. Most dealers had stocked up heavily, but had to sacrifice it cheap when they found it did not sell. Shamrocks were plentiful, but none were left with the growers.

Among the private gardeners, a few changes have taken place, but not so many as in former years, as the majority are content to await better times.

R. Scott, Montreal, west, intends to do some enlarging at his present range for a general plant trade.

Tom Gillespie was the winner, March 15, at the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club euchre.

John Walsh is about again, but with difficulty. His sprained ankle will take a lot of care yet.

E. J. Hayward, St. Paul, is making plans to build a house for fern growing. L.

Hardening Plants.

Growers generally recognize the necessity of preparing plants for moving from plant beds to the fields. Hotbed men believe they have the advantage over the greenhouse men, as they can remove the sash and expose the plants to the full air. This looks well in theory, but in practice we often find that a rainy spell with high temperature, together with the bottom heat from the manure and excessive fertility, upsets our scheme, and instead of a sturdy plant, we have a soft, overgrown and undesirable product.

The greenhouse man, on the other hand, must resort to the reduction of moisture. This he should regulate as soon as his plants are well started, aiming to reduce the moisture to a point of actual starvation by the time the plants are ready to set out. It is surprising what amount of drying most plants will endure without harm. As the plants absorb their moisture through tiny rootlets, it follows that the less the moisture, the more rootlets are needed and formed. When such plants are well watered just before removal, and care used in lifting them, they will transplant perfectly and "walk right off," while the soft plant will have a struggle for a living. We have repeatedly referred in these columns to our ideas in plant production, one of which is to mature a plant as near as possible in a temperature corresponding to the place it is to occupy later on. Thus a greenhouse man, by withholding heat at night, can train a plant to low temperature, which is not possible in a hotbed with manure at 75°. Our plants are all in rows and check rowed, and as soon as we can we use a knife between the rows as a cultivator. Each time the knife is run deeper, until we cut to the bottom of the bench, 3 inches. We can thus restrict the roots, harden the plant, and remove the entire ball if needed, without the use of pots or paper bands. This cultivation produces sturdy plants. MARKETMAN.

TRADE HOLDS UP WELL.

It is seldom that a pre-Easter season has held up so well as it has this year, considering such a bad year as we have experienced, but business is really very good, having held up quite well ever since Christmas. There has been but little dark weather of late, and the goodly amount of sunshine we have had has kept the several varieties of stock in the best of supply. Prices, we might say continue to remain firm, except for the trivial gluts that sometimes affect such stock as tulips, daffodils and lilies. The latter have not been selling so well of late, owing to the large amount being cut by the local growers, due, no doubt, to the fact that many were forced a little too early for Easter. We are assured of a heavy supply of Easter lilies from all sources, and tulips will also be with us in quantity. There is always a great demand for the double Murilla tulip at this season, so this is probably the only variety that will be entirely consumed. Carnations are also holding up their end very well, and growers report good prospects for large cuts during Easter week. American Beauty roses are always in more demand than supply, and we cannot speak encouragingly of a good Easter supply. Tea roses are still bringing good prices and there are just enough to go around nicely. The market is well off in the way of fancy sweet peas, and some of the best stock displayed here in some time may be had at quite reasonable figures.

NOTES.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. now occupies, and is doing business in their magnificent new store at 118 Seventh street. Messrs. Clark and Langhans take great pride in showing the trade around their new home, and their efforts are amply justified, for it is hard to find another wholesale house in the country to excel it.

George Marshall, of the McCallum Co., has been confined to bed with an attack of la grippe for over a week. During the early siege of his sickness he was very weak, but is rapidly recovering, and expects to be in good shape again for the Easter rush.

Joseph Thomas, the plant specialist, of Greensburg, reports a heavy trade in blooming and decorative plants of all kinds. His one big specialty is ferns, and he certainly is displaying some pleasing ones this year.

The McCallum Co. is adding another greenhouse to their range of glass at Allison Park, and expect to have it in full running order this fall. Some excellent Spencer sweet peas are being featured at their store.

G. L. Huscroft held his spring opening March 20, at his Steubenville, O., store, and reports pleasing results from the affair.

John Colton, of East Liverpool, Ohio, has expanded his business and may now be found doing business in Steubenville, O.

Miss Cathryn Friel, with R. J. Duschbach's force, is confined to her home with tonsilitis.

Visitors: Julius Dillhoff, of Schloss Bros.; M. Alexander, of Lion & Co., New York; Frank Farney, of M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Joseph Thomas, Greensburg, Pa.; Geo. L. Huscroft, Steubenville, Ohio. G. M.

Evolution Reversed.

Dr. William Bateson, president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, intimates that our ideas of evolution need a rearrangement. In his presidential address he suggests that instead of evolution in general moving from the simple to the complex, that it may be just the other way about. Usually we have assumed the appearance of a new characteristic in plants or animals to be developed de novo to fit the conditions to be met, but Bateson's work in plant breeding has convinced him that no character can arise that was not latent in the cell from the beginning. If a new color appears in a flower, for instance, he explains it by the loss of some character that caused the normal color or by the appearance of a color factor that has previously lain dormant in the plant. So with other characters. All are regarded as existing in the cell and produced or suppressed as circumstances determine. Some characters he supposes to originate by fractionation of the original characters or by a rearrangement of such characters. To illustrate this he cites the case of the sweet pea which consists of a single purple-and-white flowered species that up to the present it has been impossible to cross with any other plant; and yet breeding has produced a most remarkable series of colors in the flowers. Similar conditions as to color, size and flavor exist in our various apples which are regarded as the descendants of a single wild species. All the different forms are supposed by Bateson to be due to the loss of some deterrant factor. The old evolution explains such cases by the reverse of this process; that is, each new form was assumed to be due to the gain of some character. Darwin's idea of the matter seems the more plausible of the two and we may wait for more evidence before accepting Bateson too literally. Upon the theory he propounds all yellow flowered species should contain in them the determiner for red flowers and all red fruits possess the capability for yellow ones.—American Botanist.

American Association of Nurserymen.

Fortieth annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June 23-25, 1915.

MONROE, MICH.—Alien employes of two large nurseries here are striking for a 50-cent daily wage increase.

NEW ULM, MINN.—Preferred stock is now being sold in what will be the Pioneer Nursery Co., capitalized for $50,000.

HELENA, MONT.—The State Nursery Co. is celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of starting in business in this city.

NEMO, TEX.—J. G. Jones, of Austin, Tex., who owns a 1,500-acre farm near here, will devote part of the tract to fruit raising. Fourteen thousand trees will be planted as a beginning.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—County Horticultural Commissioner Lamiman has inspected over 50,000 trees in Shasta county. Olive and prune are the leading varieties sought by the orchardists.

TEXAS nurserymen have been appealed to by state, city and county authorities, civic clubs and other welfare workers, to donate a part of their surplus stock so that each student of the public schools in the state can cultivate a tree.

DENVER, COLO.—The European pine shoot moth has made its appearance in Denver and Colorado tree growth and is considered such a menace that the United States department of agriculture has called the attention of the city department of horticulture to the necessity of stamping out the pest.

SPOKANE, WASH.—State horticultural inspectors will have the power to enter infected orchards, eliminate diseased trees and charge the expense against the property if the horticultural code proposed by the state department of agriculture becomes a law. The code has been placed before the joint committee on horticulture.

NAMPA, IDA.—Advices that Governor Alexander intends to veto the portion of the appropriation bill providing for horticultural inspectors has aroused local orchardists. It is pointed out that if the governor cuts off all inspectors an immense amount of harm will be done, not only to the fruit interests, but to the farmers of Idaho as well.

Arbor Days of the States.

For the first hundred years as a nation the United States was too busy cutting down trees for homes, to realize that we were in many cases causing needless waste in our manner of home making. When we began to appreciate the real value of our trees, we also awoke to the fact that each year they were growing scarcer. As a result we have begun to plant trees and to try to save those we have. For a number of years nearly all the states have observed an annual Arbor day and in some states—there have been one in the spring and another in the fall. It is, in some states, fixed by law, and in others the governor is empowered to proclaim a date which he deems advisable. It is observed more particularly by the public schools, the state in many cases furnishing the trees for the children to plant and the operation taking place with appropriate ceremonies. The greatest benefit from Arbor day, is the fact that tree-planting and the esthetic value of tree planting is inculcated in the minds of future Americans while they are yet young. Following are the dates of Arbor day in the United States and Canada; also the manner in which it is fixed:

Our New Rose Mrs. Moorfield Storey

Has strong upright growth, the wood being very stout and smooth, with large handsome dark green foliage practically mildew or black-spot proof. The flowers, which are freely produced, are of good size and substance with abundant petals, opening freely. The color is a shell pink deepening toward the centre with the large smooth petals tipped deep rose. It will be a fine, yet distinct companion for the Mrs. Charles Russell Rose.

WABAN ROSE CONSERVATORIES Natick, Mass.

Houston, Texas.

At a meeting of the local florists' club at its rooms in the Chamber of Commerce, March 15, it was announced by C. L. Brock, city superintendent of parks, that 10 acres of the George Hermann estate will be converted into an experimental garden for sub-tropical plants and flowers, and a specimen grove of Texas native trees and shrubs. This experimental garden will be a municipal affair, among the functions of which will be to co-operate with the United States department of agriculture in carrying on important experiments with plants that are exotic to American soils and climate, and new varieties of other plants. The grove of specimen Texas plants will ultimately include every shrub and tree grown in Texas. Already a number of plants have been selected for the purpose. The park will answer to the purposes of a natural plant museum in which persons desiring to study Texas native plants may come to Houston and have in a small area practically the entire collection.

The meeting of the club was presided over by President Robert C. Kerr. It was announced that Mr. Kerr, Mr. Brock, A. L. Perring, C. H. Blecker and Henk Dirken will represent the club at the annual meeting of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists at San Francisco in August. H. T.

OLD ENGLISH GLAZING PUTTY

For Bedding Glass in Sash or for Filling Cracks or Seams in Roof Joints or Frames of Greenhouses or Hot Beds.

☞It is used in Machine or Bulb. If too thick for bulb thin with a little Pure Linseed Oil, boiled. So thinned, it can be brushed into any crack or leak, making a solid filling. It makes a solid bed, impervious to moisture, and holds glass in its place, and will stop any crevice or fault. When once set on dry wood it does not heave. As regards the goods, the article is no new invention, but simply an article of the very best class, to do thoroughly good work, like old-time gentlemen expected when sashes were made with lead, and small panes of glass used that caught the water and leaked unless set with an elastic putty, which once set by a mechanic was expected to remain, and did remain in good shape. This Twemlow's Old English Glazing Putty does; nothing more, nothing less.

Twemlow's Old English Putty used the country over. Made by HAMMOND'S PAINT AND SLUG SHOT WORKS, BEACON, N. Y.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Peonies.

As soon as the frost is out of the ground the peony beds should be forked over and the manure mulch that was placed on them last fall should be forked or spaded in, but let this be done by a careful man, or at least not by help that knows nothing about this work. The young growths start very early and are very tender, so it is best not to fork too close to the crowns, but loosen up all the soil around the plants. It is also well to leave the stems covered as deep as they have been all winter, for a sharp frost may injure a stem that has been protected through the severe winter and then subjected to sharp cold. But the loosening of the soil to good depth will conserve the moisture and allow the air to get into the soil. If the plants were not mulched with manure in the fall it is well to spread some old manure, not fresh, on the beds before spading and fork it in.

Although the fall is the best time to transplant peonies, yet, if not done and it is desired or necessary to move them, they can be transplanted early in the spring, but this must be done before the growths are above the surface of the ground and as much soil left about the roots as possible. These plants make their young roots in the fall and if any attempt is made to shake the soil off, the roots will be broken doing this. Divisions must therefore be carefully made, so as not to disturb the roots more than possible. The dry roots that are purchased at this time are much better planted in pots or boxes until the roots are formed in the soil and later transplanted to the ground. It cannot be expected that plants of this kind will produce any flowers this year, for it will only be possible to get them established in their new location the first season.

Hardy Roses.

The rose bed should be pruned and then spaded as early as possible after the ground has opened and if the canes have been buried the covering should be removed and the canes cut back. To properly prune a bed of hybrid perpetual roses is a careful, painstaking piece of work. This work is too often done in a careless, haphazard manner, and by many every variety is cut back alike. To get the best results a study of the varieties is necessary, for instance, strong growing varieties like General Jacqueminot and Magna Charta can be cut back and the small wood cut out much more severely than Prince Camille de Rohan or Mme. Gabriel Luizet. When pruning it is first necessary to determine whether quantity or quality is the most to be desired. If quantity is wanted more wood can be left and six to eight eyes left on the canes. If quality is the main object this must be obtained at the expense of quantity, and the strong canes only retained and these cut to two or three eyes, depending on how the eyes are located. The top eye that is left should be pointed out from the main stem so that when the growths start they will not crowd toward the center. This will allow of plenty of room for development and a good circulation of air through the plant. After the bushes are pruned the soil should be spaded good and deep and leveled off.

Potting Young Stock.

At this season of the year the plant grower will have thousands of young seedlings to pot or place in flats and as many more to shift from a small pot to a larger size, and it does not seem that any instruction in potting should be necessary, but we chanced not long ago to see a boy potting and wondered if the plants would live and we then saw in the houses many of the plants which had been potted struggling for existence. It seems to be the general idea with the young gardener that the one that can pot the most plants in a given time is the smartest, regardless how well it is done and how the plants afterward grow. The young man whom we saw would fill the pot full and then make a hole in the soil with his finger, place the seedling in the hole and then press the top soil around the stem. The chances were that the roots of many of these plants were still hanging in an enclosed hole in the center of the pot, for the soil should have been firmed around the roots. That he could handle a large number of plants in a given time was no question, but a much better plant can be grown if the soil is made firm around the roots first and then the top firmed down. The same thing happens in transplanting where the loose soil is thrown around between the plant and the pot and the top then firmed down. A little soil should be first thrown in the bottom of the pot and the plant placed in this, then a little soil around the plant which should be firmed down, then a little more soil which can be pressed down from the top. This will take longer, but the plant will live and grow enough better to pay for the extra pains.

SHIPPING LILIES AT POEHLMANN BROS., MORTON GROVE, ILL.

Bedding Stock.

The general florist will now have his hands full with bedding stock which should now be spread out and given the necessary room. The geraniums should be spaced and if any have grown too tall to make shapely plants the tops should be cut back, but at the present day the trade wants a geranium in bloom at bedding time and very little pinching should be done after the first of April, for it will take from then until the first of June to produce a new branch with a flower. Ageratums, alternantheras, alyssums, heliotropes and like blooming plants should be kept on the move and be given good, light positions. Salvia should be kept pinched back until the latter part of the month, which should produce fine, shapely plants. The coleus should be rooted and the top rubbed out as soon as established in the pots. Seedlings should be potted or flatted, the former preferred if a price can be obtained commensurate for the extra labor, but if flatted give them room enough to develop properly. Cannas will now require a warm, light location and plenty of root room. The one great factor in growing good bedding stock is, at this season, to keep the plants moving and never allow them to get a check, for if once severely checked a good plant is an impossibility.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Aftermath of a Holiday.

One of the most important features of the holiday business is the record made of the event immediately after it is over. Before the clean up the next day, an inventory should be taken to include all unsold stock, both in plants and accessories, such as baskets, pot covers, etc., that were bought especially for the business of the holiday trade. While the baskets and other goods of like character can be held until sold, they should, like the perishable plants, be charged against the business of the week, as excess stock, which makes the profits that much less. As soon as possible, while every detail of the busy time is still fresh in mind, a record should be made of all the essential features, a list of all stock that was ordered, from what firms, and the prices. Notes should be made of the quality, whose was the best at the price; also when the orders were given, and if in some cases too late for the first choice, this should be a point to be improved upon next year. There is seldom anything saved in delay, while there may be much advantage in being on the ground early, particularly for scarce stock. With this data to turn to when the time rolls around for the annual event, the matter of ordering the stock is very much facilitated and the quantities can be easily added to, or decreased, as the business requires.

The decoration of the store and the annex, if any, as well as the arrangement of the stock, should be described, if it was determined that next year there should be a change in arrangement because of difficulties here and there. Write it down and the reason why—you may forget it if you don't. Was your circular or advertising matter all right? File copies of it with your record, and note improvements as they occur to you now. How was the delivery, could the system be improved, were the tags and tag envelopes satisfactory; what additional autos or wagons were used, and when they came on? List the extra men and boys that were employed; note the good ones, jot down addresses and their salaries.

The extra clerks in the store are worthy of mention. Often good salespeople in other lines, whose business is not particularly active at this time, can be obtained for two or more days and are a great help. After one experience of this kind they look forward to it again, as it generally means a little extra money. Such people are of great assistance, relieving the regular force of much detail, giving them time for more important matters.

There are church decorations, and it is a great help if on the back of each order sheet a record of the number and kind of plants used is written down and the manner in which the job was done. The man in charge of this work may not be with you next year, but if the layout of the decoration is complete it will be easy for his successor to duplicate that of last season. Was the window all right? This is an important matter worthy of mention in detail, to be made different and if possible more effective next year. The cut flowers are an important item, as it takes careful buying to have enough and yet have little or nothing left over, the cost of which eats materially into the profits. The number of wreaths and other cemetery pieces are features of the trade that must not be overlooked. With a record of these designs, and the way they are made up, it is comparatively easy to advance this work very materially.

The above are the essential features, but there are other little matters that are worthy of going into the record, which will be found useful in arranging the next year's business. These holiday events are golden opportunities, and too much care and preparation cannot be given to make them successful in every way. K.

Attention to Details.

In the long run, it is the little things that count. We are told to look out for the pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves. If the little details of the business are carefully attended to, the success for which all the effort is made, is most likely to follow. Much care and constant vigilance in keeping everybody alert and on the job is necessary. Flowers are fragile and perishable, and the closest scrutiny is necessary to see that only those without blemish and mark of any kind on petal or foliage are sent out. The ends of stems should be freshly trimmed and every damaged piece of foliage removed. Too often this important matter is slighted, one or two bad specimens throwing doubt on the whole lot; it is not partial satisfaction, but the entire approval is what is aimed for. To hear when more flowers are ordered that, "the last boxes were not up to the mark, were not any too fresh and did not keep," is very annoying. The chances are that by an oversight or a little carelessness in packing one or two rather poor specimans slipped in with the others and contaminated the whole box. A little more care and the order would have been, "a nice box like the last one—they kept so well." Orders when taken should be very carefully written out, as frequently the salesman who might remember all the little details and preferences of the customer does not put up the flowers, which when delivered are found to be short of this or that flower, "The very thing I wanted the most." All orders for the next day should be carefully gone over the day before, to see that they are complete and provision made for the stock required.

The little matter of seeing whether a plant is dry before it is delivered, has saved many a dollar and much annoyance. In cold weather, a plant that is wilted the day after delivery from want of water, is declared to have been frozen on the way. Unreasonable of course, but if well watered before going out, the complaint could not have been made.

The matter of the lost card often causes a lot of trouble. If the article is a basket, bouquet, funeral spray or design, the card, enclosed in an envelope on which is written a brief description, should be securely attached. The delivery of many an order is doubted if the recipient does not at once acknowledge receipt, and as is sometimes the case, they cannot because the card was not sent, or had become detached. In a box of flowers the card should be placed next to and on top of the flowers; too often it finds a place between the folds of the wax paper or is placed on top of the packing and slips down the side of the box and is not to be found when the flowers are taken out.

The little table fernery is at times the source of much annoyance—"It is filled too full" or "without enough;" "has the kind that only live a day or is too coarse looking;" "the ferns were dead when it arrived;" "send for it and fill again without charge;" "it only lasted a week, you surely must make a reduction." A careful understanding when the order is given will make this path much smoother. A visit to the customer to explain to the butler how the fern dish should be cared for and the other house plants looked after is much appreciated. After a complaint of any kind has been made it should be looked into at the earliest opportunity and the matter straightened out to the satisfaction of the customer. Their trouble may be almost entirely of their own making and very unreasonable, but as a matter of business policy, their way is the best way out. If a flagrant case of neglect or ommission of an order occurs, or some other serious mistake has been made, it is best to at once make amends in a carefully written apology sent enclosed in a box of flowers. When this does not straighten matters out, the case is serious, and nothing but time will right the matter.

Personal attention is much appreciated by customers; they may have their favorite salesman, but they like to feel that their interests are also being looked out for by the manager. A flower for the little child in the store, is always a source of delight; for the lady customer, who personally calls and settles an account, a choice flower or nosegay to wear should be always at hand.

These are just a few of the many details that go with every day's business. It is almost impossible to keep everything running smoothly all the time, but close attention to the little matters prevents mishaps and congestions, and is a great help in building up the business.

New Field for the Retail Florist.

For some time I have argued with automobile salesmen that the time has arrived when it is necessary to put something aside from just motor cars in their windows to make them attractive, because they are a curiosity no longer. The L. Bemb Floral Co., Detroit, Mich., recently worked up a window decoration at one prominent automobile salesroom, with the result that this started the "ball rolling," and now a great many of the salesrooms in this line see the advantage of a pretty floral decoration forming an attractive setting for the autos. For one concern, the Studebaker Corporation, the Bemb artists arrange a different setting every week, and have orders ahead for work at several other salesrooms.

Many times I have made the remark that the sales department of the florist trade is not keeping pace with the producing department, and in calling attention of some other retailers to the fact in every new field we open, it means an increase of business, not only to themselves but to a great many others. This field is not as yet developed, but I can see a great future for good business in it for the florist trade.

"F. T. D." POCHELON.

Scranton Florists' Club Exhibition.

The Scranton flower show, held by the Scranton Florists' Club, in Town hall, Scranton, Pa., last week, the fourth show that the club has given, has been pronounced the best all-around display that has been presented to the local public. There were many features that were worthy of special note, one especially being the fact that out-of-town growers have taken considerable interest in the show and sent exhibits, and many attended.

The Lake View Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y., sent a very fine collection of flowering plants, consisting of Easter lilies, azaleas and hydrangeas. These received very much attention and admiration.

S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, Pa., sent a most effective collection of cut flowers, consisting of several new varieties of carnations, viz.: the red carnation Aviator, which is destined to be a winner, and will be disseminated in 1916; also a new salmon-pink carnation, Alice Coombs, which is a very pleasing shade, fine stem, and flowers of excellent form. Another, Grace, the shade of the Enchantress, pink, but of a different form and of a very pleasing perfume. There was also a fine vase of pink, the Carnation Morning Glory, and two or three other vases of the standard sorts were noticeable and effective. The Shawyer, Killarney and Brilliant roses were of excellent form, with fine long stems. American Beauties, with 48-inch stems, were in the center of Pennock-Meehan's table. The Double White Killarneys were magnificent. Mrs. Charles Russell, one of the most lasting roses, was finer at the close than at the beginning. Sunburst was most excellent in form and color. There were sweet peas of several tints, and several varieties of narcissi. S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. was very generous in the quantity exhibited, and the quality was of the highest standard, and the display attracted a great deal of attention.

The Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia, Pa., sent a fine bunch of lilacs of two shades, double centaurea or bachelor's button, Irish Fireflame roses, Irish Blaze lilies, and a most excellent bunch of snapdragon.

E. J. LeDuc, Danville, Pa., sent a very fine collection of carnations.

J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa., sent probably the finest collection of the Rose Radiant ever shown in Scranton.

The Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., sent a vase of giant pink snapdragon, beautiful and glorious in its color, size and dignity, a vase of Radiant and a vase of White Killarney. They showed a very attractive and new pink carnation, Pearl, a seedling, which will be watched with a great deal of interest by the florists. If it maintains the attractiveness of the sample shown it will become a general favorite. Another new one, the cerise Ruth, is also worthy of much note.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., sent a fine box of roses, White Killarney, Richmond, Pink Killarney, Sunburst and Killarney Brilliant, which filled several vases. The stock showed that A. N. Pierson's reputation as a rose grower is not only well established, but that he proposes to maintain it. It attracted a lot of attention at the show.

Anton Schultheis, College Point, N. Y., exhibited a new lilac, Louise Path, a fine robust grower and a beautiful shade of purple. He also had a new azalea, of a salmon pink, and a very delicate pink azalea, both of which were features of the show.

Anton Schultheis, of Scranton, Pa., is like his uncle at College Point, and takes much interest in growing plants, as was proved by his exhibit. He and his sisters displayed a great deal of taste in the arrangement of their numerous palms, flowering plants, baskets of flowers, bouquets and table decorations. Mr. Schultheis' lilies, tulips, hyacinths, azaleas, etc., were finely grown, and it was a very beautiful exhibit.

T. B. McClintock, Scranton, arranged a summer garden effect, erecting an elaborate summer porch, covered with vines and lined with porch boxes most gorgeously filled with varieties of plants. Summer vases filled with plants stood in front of this porch, and the base of the porch was effectively arranged with hyacinths and tulips, the whole scene being one of sturdiness and harmony, which occasioned much favorable comment.

Miss A. L. Besancon & Co., arranged a Japanese pergola, trimming same with wistaria. In this pergola, arranged on tables, were baskets very daintily and artistically filled with varieties of flowers. Leading through the pergola toward the back, was a glass case lined with plush, filled with corsage bouquets, and from the pergola running along the side of the wall, a white lattice work, with a pair of white reed gates with large reed urns at the top filled with handsome ferns; and inside of this enclosure two tables were arranged with beautiful table settings.

C. W. Baldwin arranged some very fine specimens of lavender and red rhododendrons, mammoth azaleas, and pans of beautiful and new varieties of tulips, hydrangeas, baby ramblers, and a vase of snapdragons, probably six feet high; also bride bouquets.

William McDonald, Moosic, Pa., florist, exhibited hydrangeas, red and pink baby ramblers, some fine specimens of azaleas, and a number of most magnificent growing ferns, Boston, Roosevelt, Improved Whitmani and the Scrantoniensis. The two latter-named are not unlike one another in general appearance and growth. The Scrantoniensis came out two years before the Improved Whitmani. There probably was nothing in the show that attracted more attention than did the beautiful specimens of these two particular varieties of ferns. In addition he had a cut flower setting with a number of vases of handsomely grown popular varieties of carnations.

George R. Clark, a florist who has been in business in Scranton for many years, exhibited some fine specimens of lilies, azaleas, lilac, and baskets of roses, carnations, tulips, etc., arranged for show occasions. In addition to this, he had planned an exhibit of the Florists' Telegraphic Delivery service, having telegraph poles, with wires and ticking machines. The shipping tags of several hundred florists, the map, telegraph wire, etc., made quite a unique appearance; also illustrating to the general public the utility of telegraph and telephone in having flowers delivered at distant points.

John Biegel, Capouse avenue florist, showed a fine variety of Easter and spring flowering plants and palms. While perhaps one of the youngest men to start in the business in Scranton, he has made a great record in his output of stock from the square feet of glass that he has, being limited for ground space. Nevertheless, his output is something quite pleasing, and his quality of stock is always considered among the best.

B. E. and J. T. Cokely, of the Scranton Florists' Supply Company, exhibited varieties of seeds and florists' needs in the way of spraying machines, spraying outfits, etc., and a fine line of florists' baskets. This feature added a little variety and was perfectly in keeping with the show.

B. E. Cokely was floor manager of the show and kept everything in harmony, and with T. B. McClintock, William MacDonald, C. W. Baldwin, Anton Schultheis and Miss Besancon, was very much interested in pushing this show to the point of being one of the best on record, and the success of which portends the continuation of the show another year with increased interest, the public having become more aroused this year than ever before over the painstaking work the florists of the city and vicinity have taken in this affair, which gives to the public a treat of spring-time delight which cannot be derived in any other way.

Watering Economically.

Nothing is more important than a plentiful supply of good water at all times for the grower of plants, either of vegetables or flowers, whether indoors or out, and the point we wish to call attention to with the most emphasis, is the distribution of it from the supply. We all concede the fact that for use with the florist we need pressure sufficient to insure considerable force from the end of the hose, and many of the establishments, especially among the smaller growers, make the mistake of using too small a pipe, which generally happens to be a ¾-inch pipe. That is the first mistake—better to use one inch or larger, according to the distance it is carried and the number of hose bibs that will be in use at the same time. Generally the smaller establishments have but one in use at a time, and for such the one inch pipe will be large enough. The longer distance the water is carried and the smaller the pipe will govern to some considerable extent the delivery pressure at end of hose. Remember this point—the one inch pipe, good common black pipe, will cost five cents up to eight cents per foot, and when well put in will be good for 15 to 25 or more years, while a good piece of hose will cost 10 to 20 cents per foot, and generally two or three seasons will see its finish.

Now in the first place, put in the pipe, and put in the hose bibs properly distanced to use a 25 foot piece of hose. In a house 20 feet wide by 120 feet long, put in six hose bibs, three in each outside aisle, properly distanced for a 25 foot piece of hose to overlap and get every inch watered. Just remember the pipe and hose bibs will cost only half as much in the start, and are in permanently and a 25 foot piece of ½-inch hose, fitted with ¾-inch couplings, is very light, easy to handle and will last several years. Any man can use with perfect control such an outfit, and it will not take as much time to do a complete job in watering a house, as the person that tries to use a 50 or 100 foot piece of heavy ¾-inch hose. Any one who tries to do that will be certain of trouble with management of the hose and very likely to overwater in places and the injury from a strong force, sometimes directed upon the wrong place, will break and injure growth. With a long piece of hose one cannot avoid getting kinks and tangles, and a break will come very quickly and most generally at a time when one is very busy or urgently needed at some other detail or work. Where one uses water through a meter a few breaks in the hose and emptying the water from 50 or 100 feet of ¾-inch hose is a sloppy waste, and makes useless expense and trouble.

The next time you need 50 or 100 feet of good hose—don't buy it, but instead buy several hose bibs and the few fittings and some second hand pipe, if you can't afford the new. Cut them into your service in proper handy locations. Then cut a piece or two 25 feet long from your old hose and save time, trouble and useless expense. Now we find that it is best to fix your water service supply for outside use the same way; that is, place the pipe service large enough for good supply to your most distant point, then see to it that it is properly located and arranged with hose bibs 50 feet apart each way, so that a 25-foot piece of hose will be the proper thing to reach every inch, and if automatic sprinklers are used, several 15 or 20 foot pieces, equipped, can be used at the same time, and if meters are used, a good quick job will be done with less water and expense.

Bolgiano & Son's Latest Advertising Scheme

A clever advertising stunt seen recently in Baltimore, Md., was used by J. Bolgiano & Son, seedsmen of that city. It was a tall, lean, lanky country chap, "Rube" Brown, making his way in and out of the crowds in the downtown district, closely followed by a big rooster, who does a number of clever tricks, and the idea catches the crowd everywhere. "Rube" carries a big gripsack, upon which is Bolgiano's advertisement as shown in the accompanying illustration.

JACKSON, TENN.—B. F. Kramer has resigned as manager of the Metcalfe Greenhouses, and will go in business for himself on Main street. George Roberts succeeds Mr. Kramer at Metcalfe's.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—The Chattanooga Floral Co. says trade conditions here are looking upward again, although things are still to be improved upon. The florists are preparing for a large Easter trade and stock is very good, considering the weather they have had the past winter and spring.

American Rose Society.

PRESIDENT PIERSON'S ADDRESS.

The address of President Wallace R. Pierson, of the American Rose Society, delivered at the annual meeting of that organization at Boston, Mass., March 19, was received too late, due to delay in transmission, to be recorded in the report of the proceedings published in these columns last week. Mr. Pierson's formal address was as follows:

On this occasion, which is the annual meeting of our American Rose Society, I make this formal address with mingled feelings of satisfaction and regret. It is gratifying to me to think that in the two years during which I have served as your president, much has been accomplished to carry out the principles which the American Rose Society established as its aim when framing its constitution. It is to be regretted that the work has not been carried nearer to completion, but the foundation has been laid and the advancement of the society is certain.

As a society, our aim has been to foster the love of roses, whether as a cut flower or as a blooming plant; to stimulate that love of roses for the specimen, trained and brought to perfection by artificial heat, and to kindle in the heart of its admirers a love for the rose in the garden, whether it be the hybrid tea with its continuity of bloom, or the climbing roses which make beautiful the gardens of our country for a few short weeks. To reach the people we must go outside the ranks of professional rosarians, and this is what we have attempted to do. We, who have labored hard to achieve the desired end, are gratified to state that the Syracuse Rose Society, the Newport Garden Club and the Newport Garden Association are now affiliated with us and we are hoping that similar societies may be added to this list to aid us in the work. Our bulletin goes to each member of these organizations, and that bulletin, improved greatly this year, can and must be made of greater assistance to the amateur. Our medals go to these societies to be awarded at their exhibitions. This must be an inspiration to the individuals who compete for them, and the giving of these medals is one of the finest tributes that the American Rose Society can pay to the skill and success of a rose lover.

The shows of these amateurs are of roses grown out of doors and they are successful. Do they not show us the way to fulfill the obligations of our constitution? For, gentlemen, we plainly state in our constitution that a show shall be given at a date later than March to recognize the garden rose. Such an exhibition can be held and be a credit to our society, and I should suggest that, in the event of such a show being held, premiums for professionals in the form of cash be dispensed with, and that all awards be of medals and ribbons. Those who use our American Rose Society exhibition for advertising, showing flowers grown in the open ground, are not sacrificing great commercial values such as are represented by the March shows, and the advertising is ample to repay the effort. For the amateur, cash premiums would seem advisable.

In the way of advancing interest in garden roses, the work of the American Rose Society, in conjunction with the United States department of agriculture and Cornell University, in forming the two large trial gardens, is highly commendable. You have read the reports of these gardens in the annual bulletin. They are the beginning, and in leaving the position with which you have honored me, I commend to my successor the importance of the rose trial gardens. That these gardens may become the beacons of light along the path of the amateur, and a consistent and dependable guide to those of us who deal in garden roses, is my most earnest desire. Let them determine for us and for the people, the intrinsic values of the different varieties. Let them give us the relative values of plants on their own roots, budded or grafted on Manetti, briar or other stock. Let them tell us how they stand the cold, northern winters and they will have served us well, but they will also serve us by being an inspiration to the thousands who will visit these gardens annually. Let us give our assistance in every possible way and leave no stone unturned to make these gardens a grand success and a credit to the American Rose Society, to the United States of America and to the state of New York, whose co-operation has made them possible.

The work of the central rose garden committee should be in a measure concentrated on the introduction into these gardens of the novelties of Europe as well as of America. I would suggest that any firm buying foreign roses, impress upon these firms the importance of sending their novelties, giving the American public and rose men the chance to buy upon proven merit, instead of printed descriptions. I wish to call to your attention that the action of our society upon the classification and grading of cut roses would be a worthy procedure. Our society settled upon uniform grades at the 1910 meeting, but, because these grades were not designated by names, they have not been recognized by the commercial growers. We are offered by the national flower show committee an invitation to meet in Philadelphia in 1916. In my opinion, it will be wise to accept this invitation. Rochester, N. Y., is starting plans to have us with them in 1917. We are wanted because we bring with us a show that is a credit to the society that invites us, and a credit to ourselves.

This is the end of my term of office. I appreciate the honor with which you have favored me and am grateful for the loyalty shown by the executive committee. I trust my interest and loyalty can be depended upon, and I shall be always ready and willing to help the American Rose Society carry forward the slogan: "A rose for every home, a bush for every garden."

Treasurer May's Report.

The report of Treasurer Harry O. May for 1914-15 shows receipts amounting to $1,875.89; disbursements, $667.60, and cash in bank, $1,208.29. The investment account consists of $3,000 in mortgage certificates, $150 permanent fund and the Hubbard Medal fund of $250.

OAKLAND, CALIF.—E. Flossman says business here has been very satisfactory, probably due to the fact that the exposition brings thousands of visitors every day.

TROY, N. Y.—Sawbrook Bros., florists, have opened a new store at Fifth avenue and Fulton street, moving from their old stand where they had been located for the past 25 years.

QUEENS, N. Y.—Plans for the establishment of an arboretum in Kissena Lake park are being prepared by John Weier, commissioner of parks. Work will be begun this spring.

UTICA, N. Y.—Milton Williams and Louis Wieder have purchased the range of Frank McGowan, 808 Sunset avenue. Mr. McGowan has accepted the management of the E. F. Quinn greenhouses at Norwich, N. Y.

Root-Knot a Destructive Disease.

Nearly 500 kinds of plants are already known to be susceptible to root-knot, and it is probable that future observations will greatly increase this number. Known under the names of root-knot, root-gall, big-root, etc., this disease does immense damage out-of-doors in all except the most northern states, and everywhere causes damage in greenhouses. It is due to a minute parasite of the nematode family, sometimes known as an eelworm, which causes the roots of susceptible plants to become so enlarged that the transfer of water to the stem and leaves is seriously interfered with. On the other hand, the entrance of harmful fungi or bacteria is made easier.

The seriousness of root-knot is pointed out in a new publication of the United States department of agriculture—Farmers' Bulletin 648, "The Control of Root-Knot"—which discusses the most feasible methods of eradicating the disease. Under ordinary circumstances, says the bulletin, the most satisfactory method is to rotate in the infested fields for a period of two or three years crops that are immune to the parasite, carefully killing at the same time all weeds and susceptible plants. Of the highly resistant crops the most important are mentioned in the bulletin. With such a rotation carefully carried out, it is possible to control the nematodes. There are, however, so many ways in which these can be reintroduced that in sections where they are known to be prevalent, it is desirable to repeat the rotation every four or five years.

The presence of root-knot is not always readily apparent. Badly infested plants are dwarfed, wilt readily in hot, dry weather, and are usually a paler green than healthy ones. With less severe attacks, however, these symptoms are not always noticeable, and the reduced yield is not infrequently believed by growers to be a normal one. Where there is any reason to suspect the existence of root-knot, however, the roots should be examined, and in the case of some tuberous plants like the potato, the tubers should be opened and the inside examined to detect the layer of discolored tissue usually found just beneath the skin of diseased plants. Tubers, nursery stock, and bulbs are common agents for transporting the nematodes from one place to another. In addition, however, this is frequently done by running water, and by soil which clings to farm implements, the feet of men, and the hoofs of animals. In heavily infested districts, therefore, the farmer must be on the lookout to close all these avenues of infection. Seed potatoes should always be selected from fields where a critical inspection shows no evidence of the disease and no parts of diseased roots should be permitted to be mixed in the manure that is to be placed on uninfested land.

Greenhouse conditions are almost ideal for the development of nematodes. The most efficient method of exterminating them is to steam the soil by passing steam into perforated pipes laid at a depth of one foot below the surface of the soil. Where this is impossible the infested soil must be removed, the benches whitewashed with boiling-hot whitewash and then refilled with fresh, clean soil. Land that is flooded for a period of from two to six months each year is practically certain to be free from the pest.

Orchards also suffer frequently from root-knot. Unfortunately, however, the eradication of the disease here is more difficult since the extermination of the nematodes by a rotation of immune plants is obviously impossible. Where only two or three trees are found to be infested, they should be removed and destroyed, and the surrounding soil treated with a solution of formaldehyde at the rate of about two to three gallons per square yard. Occasionally a lavish use of fertilizers and thorough cultivation of the field will aid the plants to outgrow the trouble. The only really safe way, however, is to make certain that the land is not infested before the trees are planted and then to be equally certain to use only uninfested nursery stock. It is far better in the end to take the time to free the land from the pest than to have the trees remain several years without any appreciable growth, as is too often the case where nematodes are abundant. It is also most unwise to plant a very susceptible crop, such as melons, cucumbers, or tomatoes in a field that is to be turned into an orchard later.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

The second March meeting of this society was held in the County building, Hartford, on the evening of March 26. President Mason was in the chair. This meeting had been advertised as "ladies' night," and many of our members took the opportunity to bring their wives. The exhibit of roses by President Mason was very attractive. The four varieties of amaryllis, exhibited by Louis Chauvy, were fine specimens, and Alfred Cebelius' Cineraria stellata created quite a sensation on account of their size and beauty. President Mason named W. W. Hunt, George B. Baker, and G. H. Hollister judges, and they awarded the roses a cultural certificate, and to each of the other exhibits a first-class certificate.

The feature of the evening was a demonstration of the science of pruning by Messrs. Mason and Hollister. The former took a young peach tree and trimmed it back to about three feet. He advised trimming off the lower branches at the end of the first year, and cutting back the upper branches, leaving them about six inches long, and that should give a tree about five feet high. Mr. Hollister pruned a number of apple trees and ornamental shrubs. The demonstration was very instructive. At the close of the meeting President Mason gave each lady a bouquet of roses. The meeting was well attended.

Bixby, the Florist, has a great display of lilies and azaleas in the best condition. The yellow marguerites and Buxton silver pink snapdragons are some of the specialties of this firm.

Indications are for the best Easter ever. The hardware and department stores have put in lilies and Easter plants. The popular price seems to be 20 cents per bud and bloom.

Herman C. Stache has a good supply of lilies and pot plants. A good business is looked for. Herman is out with a new delivery auto this spring.

The Bay Brook Garden Co. has been busy with funeral work the past week. They have several houses full of Easter plants.

Ingram & Co. are reported as very much pleased with business this spring.

Kirby Bros. are making extensive preparations for their Easter trade.

THE date of Easter next year is April 23, nearly three weeks later than in 1915.

IN Detroit, Minneapolis and other cities, the retail florists have found it advantageous to combine in their local advertising for special occasions. A reproduction of the fine local advertisement of the Detroit trade will be found elsewhere in this issue.

MEXICO CITY, MEX., March 2.—The following is taken from a recent letter of the American Fruit & Produce Co.: "Condition of affairs extremely bad here. Nearly every one has lost heart. One day it is the 'Carranzistas' that over-run the country, robbing and plundering. Then the 'Villistas' or 'Zepatistas.' No one knows where it will end."

Personal.

Uncle Nick Hallock, Milton-on-Hudson, N. Y., brother of the late V. H. Hallock and uncle of the late E. V. Hallock, passed through Chicago, March 25, enroute to California. Mr. Hallock will be 88 years of age May 11, next.

WHEN growers or dealers have anything to offer the trade it is a good thing to tell the trade about it through our advertising columns, or, as C. H. Frey, of Lincoln, Neb., says, "If you want business, go after it."

Illinois at Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Chairman Karpen, of the Illinois Commission to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, writes as follows, March 23:

"It is the earnest desire of the Illinois Commission that Illinois exhibitors at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition make themselves at home at all times in the Illinois state building. May we hope that you will regard this splendid pavilion as a real clubhouse in which you and your friends will find many comforts and a meeting place which radiates an atmosphere distinctive of our own home state?

"Please understand that you are cordially welcome, as are your representatives, to all official functions in the building which shall mark Illinois' representation throughout the exposition year. We shall be most happy, too, to receive from you the names of your representatives here, also we shall esteem it a great favor if you will advise us when officials or members of your organization visit San Francisco, together with their local addresses, so that we may be enabled to extend to them such special courtesies as may be possible."

Armory in Chicago Park Protested.

The suggestion, as announced in a recent issue of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, that the erection of an armory in Lincoln Park, Chicago, was under consideration, brought forth a storm of well-merited protest. In the subjoined communication addressed to Governor Dunne of Illinois a number of most excellent reasons why the parks should be preserved for rest and recreation of the people are advanced:

March 22, 1915.

His Excellency, Gov. Edward F. Dunne, Springfield, Illinois.

Dear Sir:

The writer wishes to most emphatically protest against the project of establishing an armory in Lincoln park for the following reasons:

1. It will establish a precedent for all kinds of raids upon the public playgrounds in the future.

2. Of all buildings not properly belonging in a park, there is no one type of building which would be so unsightly and objectionable as the ordinary type of armory. The structures are so large that it is impossible to conceal or minimize their ugliness by the planting of trees and shrubs, as may sometimes be done in the case of smaller buildings.

3. Lincoln park was purchased to be developed as a place of rest and recreation for the people. It has been so developed and maintained through a long period of years and there certainly exists no moral right by which any part of this park should be withdrawn from the uses for which it was purchased, developed and maintained, and devoted to other uses entirely foreign to the ones named and detrimental to them.

4. It is the settled and recorded opinion of the large majority of the competent park men and of the real landscape architects that any building or architectural structure in the ordinary park is an evil, and that no building of any kind not definitely required for the proper administration of the park, or for the undoubted convenience, comfort or pleasure of the public visiting the park, should ever be erected, and that where buildings are necessary in the park, they should in general be kept as small, especially as regards height, and as inconspicuous as possible. The theory of the use, especially of the large parks in a city, is that the city is strictly architectural and formal in all its lines; that invariably finer and better specimens of architecture are scattered through the city than can possibly be erected in any park and that the visit to the park acquires its greatest value to the resident of the crowded city by his getting completely away from the architectural formality of the city and into something approximating as near as circumstances will permit to the free, open country.

Trees, shrubs, plants, vines and green turf, together with water scenery, make a park, not formal architecture and above all—not armories.

Respectfully yours,
W. N. RUDD.

OBITUARY.

Louis B. Schulte.

Louis B. Schulte, president of the firm of Reichardt & Schulte, Inc., seedsmen, Houston, Tex., died at his home in that city, Saturday, March 19, after an illness of six weeks. He was in his forty-fifth year. He had been a resident of Houston since his birth and became a member of the firm of Reichardt & Schulte in 1899, and through his able management the business grew to large proportions. He was a member of the Houston Turnverein, being for several years a director. He was also a member of the Elks, the Knights of Pythias, Travelers' Protective Association and of the American Seed Trade Association. He was active in business as well as social affairs.

Surviving him are two sisters, Mrs. W. A. Reichardt and Mrs. Anna Wisenfield, and two brothers, Gus and Ed H. Schulte. The funeral was held from the home of the sister with whom he resided, Mrs. W. A. Reichardt, March 22, Rev. Father Walsh of the Church of the Annunciation officiating. Interment was in Glenwood cemetery.

Mrs. Martha Berning.

Mrs. Martha Berning, wife of H. G. Berning, the well known wholesale florists of St. Louis, Mo., died Sunday, March 28, after a lingering illness of three years. For many years Mrs. Berning assisted in the building up of her husband's business and was well known and highly esteemed by the trade of St. Louis and vicinity. The funeral took place March 30, with interment at the new St. Marcus cemetery. The floral offerings were numerous and elaborate, representing the trade from all sections of the country. The sympathy of the trade and a large circle of friends is extended to Mr. Berning and family in their bereavement.

Henry Murphy.

Henry Murphy, a well-known florist, of 5205 Fifth avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., died March 24 of pneumonia at his residence, 511 Fifty-third street. He is survived by his wife, Mary; three daughters, Ellen, Mary and Agnes, and two sisters, Mrs. Thomas O'Rourke and Mrs. William Moore. He was a member of St. Agatha's R. C. church, Seventh avenue and Forty-ninth street, where a requiem mass was offered, followed by interment in Holy Cross cemetery.

H. J. Beer.

After an illness of more than a year H. J. Beer, florist and market gardener, died of tuberculosis at his home on the Richfield road, Marshfield, Wis., March 18, aged 54 years. Besides his wife, he is survived by two children, Miss Martha Beer of Marshfield and John C. Beer of Minneapolis, one grandchild, four sisters and two brothers.

St. Louis.

GOOD STOCK IN SIGHT FOR EASTER.

The market during the past week was crowded and trade was slow. Sweet peas were especially plentiful. At this time of writing, March 29, carnations are stiffening. The prospects for Easter appear to be plenty of everything. The only thing the wholesalers want is customers, and they will be able to take care of them. Violets are getting poorer and smaller every day. Lilies will be plentiful. The plantmen seem to be ready, so a happy and prosperous Easter to all.

NOTES.

Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney have opened up a garden display at 917 Locust street, opposite the main store. The features displayed are shade trees, fruit trees, shrubs and a big exhibit of hardy roses. A miniature lake, fountain and rustic bridge are the decorative features on the east side of the store and attract much attention. This work was designed and put up by Moskopf & Irish Co., landscape architects. Some of the most gorgeous plants, consisting of genistas, heather, azaleas and 10,000 lilies, were unpacked while the writer was there.

Wm. Ellison, formerly of this city, returned from St. Paul, Minn. His son Arthur is now employed in the downtown store of the Mullanphy Florists. Mr. Ellison will take care of Arthur's farm in the country while he works in town.

H. G. Berning and family have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his wife, one of the most popular ladies in the trade, whose death is recorded in our obituary column this week.

The Late Mrs. H. G. Berning, St. Louis, Mo.

Mrs. Hattie Frow has the sympathy of the trade in the death of her husband, G. R. Frow, who was a member of the local florists' club. The funeral took place Monday, March 29.

Otto J. Koenig has a good chance to be elected as alderman of the twenty-seventh ward, April 6, on the republican ticket.

Shaw's Garden will be open to the public Easter Sunday afternoon, and with good weather should draw a crowd.

Geo. H. Angermueller has a splendid supply of Easter novelties. His shipping trade the past week was very good.

Miss Augusta Koeppen, representing the Koeppen Floral Co., of Columbia, was in the city to buy Easter stock.

Henry C. Moskopf is out for park commissioner and is endorsed by the local florists.

Frank Gorley had a collision with his car last week while making a business trip.

All the West End stores are well stocked with Easter plants. W. F.

LACROSSE, WIS.—All the florists here are well supplied with flowers and plants for Easter. More Easter lilies than usual. The weather continues cold so that no outdoor work has been done, but as there has been clear weather the houses are full of bloom.

Boston.

TRADE QUIET AND PRICES LOW.

Although the supply of flowers coming to Boston still remains below average, there has been a perceptible falling off of trade during the whole week. Prices on nearly every line of goods have fallen off a trifle, but a good Easter trade is expected. Roses did not move as readily as the previous week, and consequently there was a drop in prices. Carnations are scarce, but the demand is light, $3 per 100 being an average price for good flowers. Sweet peas are moving very well, bringing from 75 cents to $2 per 100. Snapdragons now occupy a prominent place in the market and some very good spikes are seen. They are selling better, as the quality has improved, bringing from $1 to $2 per dozen. Yellow marguerites are more plentiful, and are not selling as well as at this time last year, but orders for large quantities are coming in for the Easter trade. The orders for Easter plants are coming in fast, many growers having their entire stock sold out at good figures.

NOTES.

E. J. Ahern, Wellesley Hills, Mass., will have a fair crop of yellow marguerites and yellow primroses for the holiday trade. He was late in planting his stock this year on account of an auto accident in which he was injured last fall, but notwithstanding the delay, his stock is doing remarkably well and in a few weeks he will be in heavy crop.

John Barr, So. Natick, Mass., is cutting extra fine carnations at present. His Benora are some of the finest seen for some time. Matchless, Pink Delight, Fenn, Ward, White Wonder and Yellow Prince, are also very fine flowers. He has over 100,000 cuttings boxed at present and his entire propogating space filled.

Penn, the Florist, advertised a sale of specimen plants from the flower show, and consequently had a good demand for them the first part of the week. He is placing large orders for Easter, as he expects a record breaking year.

P. & W. O. Jahn, East Bridgewater, Mass., are cutting a good crop of carnations. They have a good supply of Philadelphia, which does very well with them. They also have a crop of calla lilies for the Easter trade.

James Miller, of Lynn, Mass., has resumed his duties at his store after his honeymoon, spent in New York. His many friends among the trade all unite in wishing him happiness and prosperity.

F. L. W.

Washington.

GOOD DEMAND AND SATISFACTORY PRICES.

Business for the past week has been exceptionally good, and prices have just been as good as could be expected. Roses could be bought from $2 to $15 per hundred, such as White Killarney, Pink Killarney, Radiance, Wards, Richmond, Killarney Queen, Sunburst, etc. White carnations brought from $1.50 to $3 per hundred, sweet peas, Spencer type, from $1 to $1.50 per hundred, while the common varieties are offered at 50 cents and 75 cents per hundred. Single violets have started to be a little scarce, and also a little poor in this vicinity. Gardenias and orchids are not only plentiful, but are bringing fair prices. Pot plants, such as azaleas, hydrangeas, wistarias, hyacinths, tulips, ramblers of all kinds, bougainvilleas, and any flowering plants are in demand for Easter. The retail florist does not have to go outside of the city to buy stock.

NOTES.

There seems to be a general movement for employes to seek other positions. W. J. Gordon has accepted a position with the Washington Florist Co., while Geo. Gouldman, formerly with that concern, has accepted a position with Geo. C. Shaffer. Geo. Sutton, one of Geo. H. Cooke's assistants, is now with Marche, and Dan Blackistone is back with Z. D.

Otto Bauer, manager of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. branch in this city, is laid up with the grippe, but we hope that he will be on the job soon.

Gude Bros. have one of the largest stocks of Easter plants this side of New York, and have had no trouble disposing of everything.

Fred Kramer has been cutting some extra fine tulips and other bulbous stock, which always finds a ready sale.

G. C. D.

Baltimore.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club held its March meeting in the Florists' Exchange building, Franklin and St. Paul streets, Monday, March 22, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: James Hamilton, president; John Rider, vice-president; N. F. Flitton, secretary; F. G. Burger, treasurer; C. M. Wagner, librarian. The last four named were re-elected, and have held their respective offices for a number of years. The meeting was very well attended and the question box proved more interesting than usual, with more than the average number of queries, which elicited a fund of information. One of the questions, "What Can Be Done to Make the Meetings More Interesting?" is doubtless one that occurs to boards of directors of florists' clubs generally. The question was fully discussed from every point, and every phase of the subject considered without, however, arriving at any definite solution, except that there was a unanimity of opinion that the question box is one of the most useful adjuncts of the club meeting.

Greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill.

The approach of Easter is clearly indicated in the appearance of the store windows and on the flower stalls in the markets. Business is quiet, the supply being quite equal, perhaps somewhat in excess of the demand. N. F. F.

NEW LONDON, WIS.—It is reported that the Ketchum property on the Shawano road has been sold and the new owner will erect a greenhouse.

AUGUSTA, GA.—H. W. Balk says the large tourists' hotels are almost as busy as last year, but that there is little call for flowers. There is practically no business except funeral work and little of that.

SHERMAN, TEX.—The window of the flower shop of the Texas Nursery Company is the subject of much admiration and complimentary comment, occasioned by attractive floral displays. Mrs. Lizzie Gardenshire, who has charge, and her assistants, are kept busy, and report a good trade.

FORT WORTH, TEX.—Committees to solicit prizes for the annual Fort Worth flower garden contest were appointed March 17 at a meeting of the general committee in charge of the contest. Two hundred dollars are given annually by the Fort Worth park board, which goes toward the prizes and the committee will solicit additional funds.

TRADE MUCH BETTER.

Trade is much better at this writing and there seems to be plenty of stock in almost all lines with the exception of white carnations, which have brought good prices the past week. Everything so far points to a good Easter trade, especially as far as the out-of-town demand is concerned, and there is no question but what the local trade will also be brisk if the weather is at all favorable. American Beauty roses are in good supply and quite a number of flowers from young stock are now arriving. The receipts of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are still very heavy, but clean up well each day owing to the fine quality of the stock offered. Roses in general are in good supply but are selling well. Sweet peas are arriving in much larger quantities and magnificent stock is obtainable at very reasonable prices. Freesia is about done and only a limited supply of stock in this line is seen. Lilies are arriving in large quantities but are in good demand, and while there appears to be more than enough stock to fill all orders, the supply is not as large as last year. Good callas are none too plentiful but gardenias are seen in larger numbers. Single violets are none too plentiful but the New York doubles are in good supply. Spanish iris, pink and yellow snapdragons and Ten Weeks stock are in good supply and choice lupines are now among the offerings. Lily of the valley is plentiful and is selling much better this week. Bulbous stock in general seems to be shortening up, but there is plenty on hand to fill all orders. Southern jonquils are arriving in large quantities but the quality is nothing to speak of. The weather up to March 28 was very favorable for growing conditions but a light snow storm set in about noon that day, but taken all in all the quality of the stock offered is all that can be desired and no complaints are being heard on this score. The local plantsmen are pretty well sold out in all lines for Easter and while there still appears to be plenty of pot lilies on hand, a cleanup in this line would not be at all surprising.

Wednesday, March 31.—The weather today is cold and bright and predictions indicate no serious change for the Easter holidays.

NOTES.

The Cook County Florists' Association met at the Tavern, West Washington street, last Thursday evening, March 25, when the members decided to join the Chicago Florists' Club in a body, according to a plan that no doubt will be agreeable to all concerned. A special meeting of the association will be held at the Hotel Bismarck next Thursday evening, April 8, at 8 p. m.

E. C. Pruner and A. F. Longren, traveling representatives of Poehlmann Bros. Co., have both returned from out-of-town trips and will spend Easter at home this year with their families.

W. H. Amling and wife will celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary at their home in Maywood on Friday, April 9.

The firm of W. L. Palinsky has invested in a new Ford delivery car.

The Retail Florists' Co., which is a part of the Retail Florists' Association, has opened an office in room 510 in the Fairbanks building, with H. H. Wilkerson in charge. The Retail Florist Co. has banded together for the purpose of buying in a co-operative way and will deal with the home markets as much as possible. At a meeting held on March 22 the following members were elected to the board of directors: George Stollery, Louis Wittbold, H. R. Hughes, A. Vanderpoel and George Walthers. A meeting of both the Retail Florist Co. and the retail Florists' Association will be held next Monday evening, April 5, at 8 o'clock.

Wietor Bros. will have a splendid Easter trade this year, for shipping orders have been numerous and stock has cleaned up exceptionally well so far. Carnations and roses are both arriving in good supply, but find ready buyers. This firm is offering some fine rose stock in 2-inch and 2½-inch pots, including a good number of the popular Killarney Brilliant.

At Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store trade is very good and everything so far points to a good Easter business. March 27 and March 28 were both very good days and among the best since the present management assumed charge.

Erne & Klingel are having such a heavy demand for smilax that it is almost impossible to fill all the orders. First come, first served, is the motto at this house.

August Poehlmann says the demand for Easter stock, as far as blooming plants is concerned at Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s greenhouses, was very brisk and resulted in a clean-up in practically all lines. At the store the demand for cut flowers is also brisk and the supply department never had a better business. The demand in this department was very heavy for baskets both for cut flowers and plants. Some of the finest Mrs. Chas. Russell roses of the season are now being offered in quantity at this store.

Humboldt, Garfield, and Douglas parks are to have farms this summer, according to President William F. Grower of the West park board. He said lots 100 feet square will be set aside for raising vegetables. Gardeners at the different parks will have supervision of the farms. It is an experiment to show the public what can be raised.

Sinner Bros., in looking over their last year's records, find that they sold more carnation cuttings the latter part of April and the first week in May than at any other time. This year will very likely be an exception, for their advertisement in the Ready Reference department of this paper is bringing in the orders like hot cakes.

H. Van Gelder and his hustling store force are busy as bees at Percy Jones' establishment this week, getting out Easter orders, and the indications are that it will be the best Easter ever. Carnations and tulips are in large supply at this house this week, but are cleaning up quickly.

A. W. Larson, who is filling the position of shipping clerk at Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s greenhouses at Morton Grove, is all smiles over the arrival of a baby boy. It is understood that he has accepted a position as foreman of the Holm & Olson greenhouses at St. Paul, Minn.

The next regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club will be held at the Hotel Bismarck, West Randolph street, next Thursday evening, April 8, at 8 o'clock. This meeting promises to be a most interesting one, so as large an attendance as possible is desired.

J. A. Budlong is busy filling shipping orders for Easter this week and is pleasing his customers with a fine grade of roses and carnations. The local trade is also good at this store and taken all in all everything points to a good Easter trade.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is handling a large quantity of boxwood in addition to its regular offerings of cut flowers and other green goods. The Easter trade is very good so far at this house and the outlook for the week is very bright.

Victor J. Nygren, a landscape gardener, was killed at Burlington station in Berwyn last Sunday evening, March 28, when he was struck by a train as he was crossing the tracks. He was 63 years old and lived at 1431 Elmwood avenue, Evanston.

O. A. Tonner is having such a good call for snapdragons that she hardly ever has any surplus when the day's business is done. Some fine sweet peas are now being received from the Wiffin greenhouses at Des Plaines.

Zalinger & Hirsch have been unusually busy with funeral work at their stand in the Insurance Exchange building and among the many pieces delivered were six beautiful Elk designs.

Miller & Musser are busy getting things in shape at their wholesale store at North Wabash avenue and Lake street, and will be ready soon to fill all orders for cut flowers and greens.

One of the department stores offered lily plants with two to four blooms last week at 15 cents per plant. This stock, however, was quite stunted.

Lester E. Partridge, of Sharp, Partridge & Co., is back on duty after being confined to his home for nearly a month with quinsy and tonsilitis.

Fred J. Colterjohn is helping out Ronsley, the Florist, at his South Dearborn street store during the Easter rush.

Prices As Low As Others.

Chas. W. McKellar and wife have returned from a delightful visit in California, where they attended the Panama-Pacific and the San Diego expositions. Mr. McKellar says that the horticultural exhibits at the San Diego exposition at present are magnificent, and that the exhibits at the San Francisco exposition should be at their best next August, when the S. A. F. convention will be held there. A short stop was made at Denver, Colo., where they had a pleasant visit with Miss Marie Olmert and her sister, who are now residing there. Miss Olmert is well known here, for she kept the McKellar books for several years.

Mrs. Horton of the Bassett & Washburn office force is back from a most enjoyable visit in California, where she took in the sights at both the San Diego and San Francisco expositions. She is very favorably impressed with the beauty and climate of the "Golden State" and speaks as if she would like to make her home there. She reports a pleasant visit with O. P. Bassett and wife and E. B. Washburn and family at Pasadena, who are all in the best of health, especially Mr. Bassett, who celebrated his eightieth birthday on March 30.

Peter Reinberg is cutting heavily in My Maryland roses this week, and while they are in good supply at this house, they are none too plentiful in this market, for very few florists are growing this variety any more. The receipts of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are quite large now also, but stock in general is cleaning up quickly each day owing to the heavy Easter demand. Rose Mrs. George Shawyer has been discarded altogether at the greenhouses.

Allie Zech and Gale Fanning, of the Zech & Mann store force, visited the firm's growers at Maywood last Sunday, March 28, and returned with the report that the outlook for a heavy supply of sweet peas for the Easter trade was excellent. They evidently sized the situation up right, for the receipts at the store now never were larger than this season, nor was the quality ever better.

John Kruchten is having a brisk demand for pot lilies and cut lilies, which he is handling in large quantities and expects to dispose of before the Easter rush is over. Gardenias are having a good call at this store also, and fortunately his growers are in crop right now, which enables him to fill all orders.

C. L. Washburn reports that the shipping trade at Bassett & Washburn's store is unusually heavy this week and that a large number of Easter orders were refused for carnations and yellow roses. Lilies cleaned up in grand style with them this year at good prices.

A. L. Vaughan says that A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s Easter business will be fully as good, if not better, than last year as far as the shipping trade is concerned, and is inclined to believe that the local demand will also show a considerable increase.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are having their share of the Easter business and report that the shipping trade is unusually brisk. Roses and carnations are the principal offerings and clean up nicely each day.

A. E. Hunt & Co., of Evanston, are planning on adding another house to their already large range. They are now offering a good supply of lupines at their stand in the local market.

H. C. Blewitt, of Des Plaines, is cutting quite heavily in sweet peas now. His daily cut is into the thousands, which is considered very good, as only three houses are devoted to this flower.

Frank McCabe, of the A. L. Randall Co., is back from a successful western business trip, and is giving the boys a hand in the cut flower department during the Easter rush.

The E. C. Amling Co. and the A. L. Randall Co. are now located in their new quarters in the Le Moyne building, North Wabash avenue and Lake street.

Gus Raasch, of Kankakee, was in the city, March 29, on business connected with the new house that he will add to his range in the near future.

John Schoepfle and wife celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary with a party at their home, Sunday, March 28.

Miss Wenonah L. Butterworth of Muskegon, Mich., was a visitor at the Peter Reinberg establishment this week.

MARKET SHOWS SUDDEN IMPROVEMENT.

Conditions of the market for the past week have been rather slow, nothing moving very briskly until Saturday, March 27, when it improved suddenly and everything cleaned up at good prices. Roses 4 to 10 and carnations 2½ to 4 cents. Green goods of all kinds are in good supply. There has been a falling off of cheap sales, and more advertising is being done without any prices stated. Most of the trade seem to think it is a good idea not to mention cheap prices, as it is hard to make the public see why they can buy bulbous stock at 12 cents a dozen on one day and have to pay 75 cents or $1 the next, and it takes them a week or two to establish the right price on the stock sold at these sales.

The Donaldson Co. had its greenhouses turned to show houses on Palm Sunday and gave the general public an invitation through the daily papers to inspect their large stock of Easter plants, which were very nicely arranged in banks and on the benches. It also had an old mill scene, with mill running and a waterfall. The visitors numbered 1,500, not as many as would have been the case if the weather had been warm.

Ralph A. Latham has a very fine display of hydrangeas in French varieties.

The attendance at the bowling alleys Friday evening, March 26, was about 15 and some good scores were made.

C. R. Rudlinger has his men out pruning trees and shrubs and reports inquiries for trees and shrubs about the same as last year.

BIG EASTER SUPPLY AT HAND.

The weather for the past two weeks has been ideal, bringing everything in without any forcing, so that there will be almost a record stock in point of quality and quantity. A number of the growers say that in some lines they are sold out at prices satisfactory to them, which sounds very good for these hard (?) times. The cut flower market is full of good stock, which moves very slowly. Several of the stores have advertising campaigns started to boost business, with more or less success. Offerings of low prices on roses and daffodils have brought good results, while another featured tausendschon roses in pots, and sold over 300 of them in seven-inch pots in one week, which is pretty good business at this season. About the only flowers held firmly are carnations, and these may go higher for Easter, but everything else will be offered at the prices of the past two weeks. Easter lilies are said to be in full supply, with lower prices threatening; the stock, nearly all giganteum, is fine. Spencer sweet peas will be a great feature of the market; nothing like them has ever been seen in this market before—the quality is superb.

NOTES.

At the New York and Boston shows, Jos. Heacock Co. won first in six entries, a gold medal and one second in two others, and this right in the rose country, amongst the experts. August Gontram, of Holmesburg, won in New York with his superb sweet peas, getting five firsts and one second in six entries. W. Atlee Burpee & Co., also made a fine display. Wm. Kleinheinz won in the carnation classes over all competitors, so that Philadelphia is continually kept to the front by her skillful growers. Let everybody get in line for next year and make our show the greatest ever.

The crowd at the Wm. Harris nurseries, Palm Sunday, was a record-breaker. The large shed was lined on both sides of its full length, 300 feet, with orders selected to go out, starting at midnight on Sunday. These masses of color from 8 to 10 feet in width on both sides of this long passageway, was a charming sight, bewildering in its variety of form and color. It is estimated that 10,000 persons visited the greenhouses during the day.

The M. Rice Co., having had a great run on its Easter baskets, are making great preparations for Decoration day. Made-up wreaths of magnolia, with artificial roses and porcelain flowers, are being made in large quantities.

The Leo Niessen Co. expect a wonderful business, having a great many orders booked ahead. Their stock of American Beauty roses will be seen in quantity. Splendid Spencer peas are also a feature.

Chas. Zimmer, of Collinwood, N. J., has added an auto to his delivery service. He is much pleased with its great efficiency.

MARKET SUFFERS FROM OVERSUPPLY.

The supply in the market is large and comprises heavy cuts of practically every seasonable flower. Business, however, while fair, is not too good, and low prices have been the result. Last week the demand for stock was active only in spots. The cut of roses continues heavy, and among others includes some excellent American Beauties. Carnations clean up pretty well as the supply is not up to normal. Easter lilies are fine and are plentiful. Some very fine tulips, jonquils and daffodils are coming into the market. Sweet peas continue very plentiful. Their selling price is generally very low. Lily of the valley has a very indifferent call, while violets and orchids move slowly. Other offerings include callas, rubrums, snapdragons, forget-me-nots, Dutch hyacinths, primroses and poeticus. Green goods are plentiful.

NOTES.

The funeral of Miss Norma Walke, daughter of Otto Walke, was held Monday, March 29. Mr. and Mrs. Walke have the sympathy of the trade in their bereavement.

C. E. Critchell reports that up to the first of this week his orders for Easter were ahead of the corresponding period last year.

INDICATIONS POINT TO GOOD EASTER TRADE.

It looks as though March is going out "like a lion," after a week of fairly good weather, which ended Sunday, March 28, in a snowstorm, rain and slush. There has been a slight increase over last week's sales, with advance Easter orders, which promises good business. Stock remains plentiful and quality uniformly good, with the exception of the keeping qualities of carnations which for several weeks have been poor, especially with some varieties, due perhaps to the sudden changes of the weather, both in temperature and cloudiness. Easter prices will be approximately the same as last year in most grades, and plenty of nearly every line and variety will be on the market, both in cut flowers and plants. Easter business is being advertised quite extensively both by individual firms, as well as by the advertising club, and Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson's writings in the Sunday papers. Wholesale houses have been busy the past week filling orders for supplies, such as baskets, mats, crepe paper, etc., for the decoration of Easter plants and flowers. The windows of all the downtown retailers are filled with choice Easter plants and cut flowers, attracting the passersby.

NOTES.

One nursery company and one retail florist's establishment went into bankruptcy during the past week. The Cassell Nursery Co. of Lakewood, O., filed a petition for discharge in bankruptcy and the hearing will take place before Judge John C. Clark, of the district court, at 9:30 a. m., April 24. The Clifton Floral Co. also went into bankruptcy. This store was located in Lake avenue, near Detroit street, and was owned jointly by Thos. Swinton and Harvey Vick, who have listed liabilities amounting to $1,446.84; assets not given.

The Smith & Fetters Co. had their large front and side show windows broken this week, due to the settling of the building on account of rebuilding, which has been going on for some time.

TRADE CONDITIONS NOT ENCOURAGING.

The next feature will be Easter business and everybody is wondering what it will bring forth. The past week was not at all encouraging. If business had been good stock would have been scarce, but there was a surplus. Special American Beauty roses dropped to $20 per 100 and nearly every other stock in like proportion. The writer has at various times been requested to say something about the effect of flower shows on business in this city, and will say it now. The flower shows may be a great benefit to posterity, and to a few people who exhibit, but so far as we are advised, they do not benefit the wholesalers or retailers and we are very certain that they do not benefit the trade press, except that part of it that does the printing of their literature. We go on from week to week, getting the news as best we can. Just at a time when we expect some special business, one man tells us that he is spending $500 or $800 for space in the show and cannot afford to advertise; another says he has to buy 100 or 150 tickets to give to his customers, and cannot afford to advertise, and so it goes. As we have stated, these shows may be a great benefit to posterity, but the benefit to the live men in the trade of New York is not yet apparent. While stating the facts so far as we can get them, relating to flower shows, we have no prejudice. We have elsewhere noted the success of the late show. Secretary John Young states that already $10,000 worth of space has been ordered for the show of 1916. The date has not yet been fixed, but it seems certain that there will be a show and that it will be better than ever.

NOTES.

Several of the wholesalers have stocked up with Easter plants. J. K. Allen has a variety of fine plants. James Coyle has fine pot roses and other stocks. J. J. Coan, manager for the Growers' Cut Flower Co., has stocked up with a fine lot of plants.

George Bradshaw, of William Kessler's cut flower department, says that William Kessler is now the "lily king" of West 28th street. He certainly has some very fine stock, which is grown by Gerard Dryer of Elmhurst and Dreyer Bros. of Whitestone, N. Y.

P. H. Ditzenberger, foreman for H. E. Froment, has the sympathy of the trade in the death of his mother, which occurred March 26. Mrs. Ditzenberger was about 65 years old and is survived by a husband and several children.

J. K. Allen's new store is now about ready to be occupied. Carpenters, painters and steam-fitters have been busy for some time.

M. C. Ford continues to receive very fine carnations as well as American Beauty roses and much other fine stock.

The scores of the New York Florists' Bowling Club, March 25, were as follows:

C. W. Scott	156	176	164

EASTER STOCK PLENTIFUL.

Trade and weather have been varied, stock equal to all demands, with the tendency of all growers to send a smaller amount and hold back for Easter. Indications point to a fine lot of stock by nearly all the growers. Lilies, hydrangeas, tulips, daffodils, hyacinths, lilacs and the roses, ramblers, hybrids and climbers look very promising, and Buffalo has no fear of not being able to supply all calls. There seems to have been a lull in the business from all points and only the funeral orders kept the salesmen busy, but all are awaiting the rush for Easter, which all employed in the business, from the errand boy up, enjoy. The easter trade, it seems, brings a new life into all; perhaps weather and the flowers on sale give the inspiration, but nevertheless it exists.

NOTES.

Palm Sunday has got to be one day looked forward to by flower lovers who live anywhere near a greenhouse, where they can go and enjoy what will be offered to the people at Easter. S. A. Anderson for several years has made Palm Sunday a feast day for flower lovers, and before any plants are removed from his greenhouses, an invitation is extended to everyone to visit his place. Invitations are sent out, and also extended through the daily papers. This year the day was perfect and the number that visited his place, and the number was in the thousands, showed beyond any question of a doubt that the public appreciated his doing as he did. A rose was given to each of the visitors as they departed, grown persons and children alike. The latter, all should try and please, for their impressions are almost always lasting. It certainly behooves the man who has a greenhouse in the city to so arrange his place for Palm Sunday. Visitors, and those who cannot buy, can enjoy one of the most beautiful, attractive and instructive exhibits without cost to the grower, but a joy to the visitor that money cannot buy.

Visitors: Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich., who looks forward to a big Easter trade.

BISON.

Low Plant Prices.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co. is advertising at 60 cents per line in the New York Examiner for the retail trade on the following basis: Hyacinths, 10 cents each, azaleas at 60 cents, and they show illustrations of these in bloom.

FAIRMOUNT, ILL.—W. L. Leeka was stricken with paralysis, March 6.

SANTA ROSA, CALIF.—May 7-9 have been selected as the dates for the annual rose carnival to be held in this city. Walter M. Nagle is secretary of the organization having the affair in charge.

EXCELLENT EASTER SUPPLY.

At no time within several years has the Easter season seen such an ample supply of flowers. This applies to practically everything that enters into the trade. There is no scarcity in sight in any article. Further, stock is of excellent quality. A concern which makes a specialty of Easter lilies believes it has the finest yield in its history. The largest firm of general growers in central Ohio lays particular stress on the abundance and beauty of its American Beauty roses. Sweet peas are in perfection. Bulbous stock is shown in the greatest profusion. The effect of this heavy supply has been to lower prices slightly, but this appears to be made up for by increased sales. Recent addition of several new retail concerns is stimulating everyone to force their goods upon the public in more attractive form. The florist business of the city has come into greater importance.

NOTES.

The formal opening of T. J. Ludwig's new flower store, designated as the "Flower Shop Beautiful," occurred March 25. The wealth of display and the elegance of appointments made it a notable event. A large crowd of people came in response to the printed invitations that had been sent out.

Mayor Karb has ordered that hanging baskets containing flowers shall be suspended from the cluster light stands in front of the twenty-acre space in which the state capitol building is located. If the result proves as attractive as expected the plan will be extended to other parts of the downtown district.

The Columbus Floral Company, the big wholesale growers south of the city, has a new manager in the person of Edmund Rudensdorf, who is believed to be just the right man for this modern plant. He comes from St. Louis, where he had a high reputation as a thorough florist.

A local shoe store gave away 2,000 carnations as an Easter greeting, mostly through distribution to female help in the office buildings and stores.

John Konig, a vegetable grower at Valley Crossing, a short distance below this city, is making an addition to his glass space.

WICHITA, KAN.—Chas. P. Mueller has received the nomination for member of the school board.

CEDAR RAPIDS, IA.—Bain Brothers, who are largely interested in the Pollard Floral Co., with greenhouses in Twenty-seventh street, have leased a store in the Montrose hotel and have opened an artistic, up-to-date flower shop, with Miss Marjorie Dodge in charge.

BALLINGER, TEX.—The Nussbaumer Floral Co., of San Angelo, Tex., held a flower show in this city March 19-20, under the auspices of the ladies' society of the First Presbyterian church.

TIFFIN, O.—The Ullrich Greenhouses were sold at administrator's sale March 20 to Frank M. Schramm, well-known florist of Toledo, O., the consideration being $13,000. The transfer includes all of the real estate, but does not include growing stock.

THE SEFTON MFG. CO., 1333 W. 35th Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

Providence, R. I.

Everyone in the trade the past week has been working at top speed getting read for the Easter business, which it is hoped will be good this year. It was a surprise the way the St. Valentine business was this year; it was fine, and it is hoped that the Easter trade will be as good, and from all indications it will be. All stock is at its best now, and from all appearances the bulbous stock never was better. Violets will be the only flowers this year that we will not be sure of, as the weather will have a great deal to do with them. The stores are arranging the interiors to handle the stock of plants that they will carry. Sweet peas will be fine, as will lily of the valley and roses. Bulbous stock will not advance much in price, and will be excellent. The department stores and markets will be stocked up as usual with the cheaper line of stock, and cutting prices as much as ever.

NOTES.

Phillip Lavery is now in charge of J. B. Canning's greenhouse on Smith street. Mrs. Canning will continue the business on account of her husband illness.

The Westminster Greenhouses have a new delivery auto that makes a fine appearance. Their Easter stock will be among the finest in town this year.

The seed stores have had their hands full of work for the past few weeks. Their busy season has now started.

The street fakirs have been in evidence for the past few weeks, selling violets and daffodills at 10 cents a bunch.

The florist club held its meeting March 22, in their rooms on Westminster street.

The stock of Fred Hoffman, Pawtucket, is among the finest to be seen anywhere.

Henry Patrie, formerly with Johnson Brothers, is now with Smith, the Florist.

Miss O'Connor has opened her new store on Thayer and Cushing streets.

Newport, R. I.

The writer saw in a recent issue of THE AMERICAN FLORIST that the Chicago Horticultural Society had adopted resolutions denouncing the erection of a state armory in Lincoln Park, some of the members claiming that public grounds should be held for all the people and not for classes or sections. This seems to be a stand well taken, and the writer would suggest following in the same line to protest against allowing people to donate band stands, drinking fountains and all other fixtures connected with parks as a memorial to themselves or others' memory, not of national prominence, as is a case with us in Newport, where like memorial donations have been erected in the parks, and seem to give to the parks an aspect of a cemetery.

The Newport Garden Club and the Newport Horticultural Society will hold an outdoor show August 12-14, on a vacant lot on Bellevue Avenue. The schedules are now in the hands of the printer. This makes four shows to be held in Newport the coming summer, the other three being the Newport Horticultural Society's rose show in June, the American Sweet Pea Society's exhibition, July 8-9, and that of the American Gladiolus Society, August 18-19. The two latter shows are held under the auspices of the garden club and the horticultural society.

The shop keepers of Newport, March 26, held what was called the "dollar day." Prizes for best window exhibits were awarded, and in many stores articles were sold for one dollar that were worth more. All the local florists arranged handsome window displays for the occasion, but no florist seemed to grasp the chance to advertise by selling some kind of flowers or plants at a bargain.

Charles D. Stark, a gardener here on one place for 28 years, was selected by the park commission as park superintendent, from several applicants for the position. In past years the work of caring for the parks has been done by a contractor, but the commissioners now figure that they can do the work better, and at less expense, with a superintendent, hence the change.

The proverbial saying of "March coming in like a lion and going out like a lamb," got a twist in this locality to read that it "came in as a lamb and went out as a lion."

WICHITA, KAN.—Indirectly the city of Wichita will lay $100 worth of flowers and decorations on the graves of civil war veterans on Decoration day, May 30. It has been an annual custom of the city, the gift being provided for by state law. The state has made it possible for civil war veterans to receive material aid in memorial observances.

The Seed Trade

Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif., President; J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., First Vice-President; E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer; S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O., Assistant Secretary.

Thirty-Third annual meeting, San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, 1915.

CARTERS SEEDS are being liberally exploited in American advertising mediums, golf journals and the like.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade March 31 were as follows: Timothy, $5.00 to $6.50 per 100 pounds.

SANTA ANA, CALIF.—The Haven Seed Co. says the tomato acreage will be normal and the plants are now looking well. This firm anticipates a good season.

HOUSTON, TEX.—Louis B. Schulte, president of Reichardt & Schulte, Inc., seedsmen, of this city, died here, March 19, as recorded in our obituary column in this issue.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—L. L. May & Co. report inquiries very brisk and that some stocks are running low. The mail order business has been retarted by cold weather.

BRANDON, MAN.—The A. E. McKenzie Co. says ever since the distribution of the annual seed catalogue in January last it has been favored with a good line of business.

THERE has been a drop of 25 per cent in the price of medium red clover seed since the high point of last fall, the present price ranging from $12 to $14 per 100 pounds.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—James Vick's Sons are much pleased with the way the mail trade is running at the present time. In spite of the severe weather this firm reports being ahead of last year.

ONION SETS.—The general market of onion sets is on the decline, verifying the article printed in these columns a few weeks ago. The demand continues good at about $1 per bushel all around, reds, if anything, being a trifle the lowest.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—The St. Louis Seed Co. says mail orders are two weeks ahead of last year and in general they run better. Counter trade, up to the present time, has been very heavy even with the cool weather experienced during the past two weeks.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE says its mail orders at Chicago for the past three months of 1915 are averaging a good percentage heavier than in previous years, with less advertising, while at the New York house this business is running about even with its previous year's trade.

N. B. KEENEY & SON, of LeRoy, N. Y., are inviting seedsmen returning from the San Francisco convention to stop off at Hamilton, Mont., to inspect their pea seed trials, routing them over the Northern Pacific or the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound railroads on the homeward trip, adding that it will be necessary to specify the route in purchasing transportation.

THE standard barrel of the United States should contain 7,056 cubic inches, with 28½ inch staves and 17⅛-inch heads, head material not thicker than 2-5 of an inch.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—Damage estimated at about $2,000 was caused by fire, March 18, in the McVay Seed Company's store, 2018 First avenue. The fire destroyed a quantity of imported seeds, but did little damage to the building itself. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

OWING to the prevalence of a malignant disease in Indian corn from Java and India the secretary of agriculture, under the plant quarantine act, has forbidden the importation of corn from Java, India or Oceania, except Australia and New Zealand, effective March 8, and until further notice.

ATLANTA, GA.—The Georgia Products Co., recently organized for the purpose of handling exclusively Georgia grown food products, announces the opening of a seed store next to its present quarters on Forsyth street. The seed department will not be confined strictly to Georgia products.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—W. Atlee Burpee & Co. say: "Although there were several days during the early part of March when it looked as if the mail order business would not be up to a year ago, yet the past couple of weeks have brought in a number of orders which compare very favorably with the volume of business we did a year ago. Our applications for catalogues show a decided increase and up to date we have a great many more copies of the catalogue out than had been distributed at this time in 1914. On the whole it now looks as if the mail order seed business is going to be fully equal to, if not better, than 1914."

American Seed Trade Association.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, March 30.—Mushrooms, 50 to 55 cents per pound; lettuce, 20 cents per box; radishes, 25 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches; asparagus, $1.00 per dozen bunches; celery, 12 stalks, 15 cents to 25 cents; cucumbers, $1.00 to $1.30 per dozen.

New York, March 30.—Cucumbers, 90 cents to $1.25 per dozen; mushrooms, 65 cents to $1.50 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 20 cents to 25 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50. Lettuce, per dozen, 10 cents to 40 cents.

Fertilizers.

The embargo on potash has embarrassed our fertilizer formulas. Most manufacturers refuse the high-grade formulas, limiting potash to two or three per cent in mixed goods, furnishing no raw potash. This knocks out home mixing. Some agricultural writers claim that large percentages of potash are entirely unnecessary; in fact, forced upon us by the potash syndicate. Our experience is not in line with these opinions. With us, potash has been the determining element, which we believe covers the trucking business generally. Other writers advise the use of lime as a help in liberating existing potash in our soils. To this we can subscribe most heartily as we have had remarkable returns from the use of lime on limestone soils, old and worn out. Of course, we have used manure liberally for five and six years past, which greatly changes the composition. Lime in some form is not friendly to some fertilizers, hence we should arrange to separate the two as much as possible. One way is to broadcast the lime and harrow it in and then plant the crops, applying the fertilizers later in the season between the rows and cultivating them under. While the opposite method can also be employed, broadcast the fertilizer in the spring, harrow it in and apply the lime in the summer between the rows. We used this latter method in the celery fields with excellent results. Raw, pulverized limestone is less objectionable than hydrated, air-slacked, or caustic lime; in fact, we would not be afraid to use raw lime and fertilizers together. Twice as much raw lime should be used as of the other forms, as its action is milder and slower and chances for harm are very small indeed. From 1,000 to 2,000 pounds per acre is a good application of the caustic limes, and two tons can be used of the raw lime—natural pulverized rock. Unleached wood ashes supply both lime and potash.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—A section on the main floor of the Cossitt library has been set apart for books and prints on flower gardens. Open shelves are filled with volumes of modern works on all phases of flower culture.

Two Serious Bean Diseases.

The blight and anthracnose of garden and field beans caused a loss in Michigan alone estimated at $2,000,000 or 20 per cent of the crop of 1913. This state does not stand alone, for similar conditions obtain in other bean-growing sections. It is becoming more difficult each year to secure bean seed free from one or both of these diseases. In view of these facts, it is highly important that the diseases be more thoroughly recognized and that the best available methods of control, some of which must be begun in the early cultivation of the plants, be understood and put into practice.

Bean anthracnose is caused by a fungus which attacks the stems, leaves, pods and seeds of the plants. On the stems and leaf veins it causes elongated, sunken, dark-red cankers, sometimes killing young plants and often producing deformed and yellowed leaves. Rounded or irregular sunken spots with a slightly raised rim are produced on the pods. The spots usually have pink centers surrounded by a darker reddish border. In severe cases the pods may be entirely covered by the sores and produce no seed. In other cases the fungus penetrates the pods and enters the seed, causing dark, sunken specks or spots. In these diseased seed, as well as in the refuse from diseased plants, the fungus is propagated from season to season.

The bean blight differs from anthracnose in several ways. It is caused by a bacterial organism. On the leaves it produces irregular, diseased areas which at first have a water-soaked appearance, later dry out and become brown and brittle. The entire margin or half of a leaflet is often affected. On the pods the disease starts as slightly raised and watery pustules, which later enlarge, become of irregular shape and amber color with yellow centers. Infected seed show yellow diseased blotches or are entirely yellowed and shriveled.

Both diseases cause serious losses in the snap bean trade. Diseased pods are unmarketable and must be sorted out. If but a few slightly spotted pods are packed in a basket, the disease may spread during shipment, causing additional loss and necessitating extra sorting before the beans can be sold to the consumer. In the seed bean trade all beans must be hand-picked to get out the discolored diseased seeds. From 15 to 30 per cent of diseased beans are frequently sorted out, involving heavy loss of beans as well as the cost of sorting. Diseased beans used for seed usually give a poor stand and result in the production of a badly diseased crop.

It has been conclusively demonstrated that anthracnose can be avoided by a careful system of seed selection. Save seed from perfectly healthy pods, selected with great care for entire absence of spotting. Carefully keep them away from diseased pods, shell by hand to avoid reinfection, and plant on clean land. Pull and burn any plants showing disease. By planting the seed thus secured enough disease-free seed can be secured to plant the whole crop.

In the absence of such disease-free seed (1) secure for planting, seed having the least possible amount of disease, as shown by actual examination; (2) all seed should be hand-picked and no seed showing the slightest discoloration should be planted; (3) practice crop rotation, never plant beans on land where the same crop grew the previous season; (4) do not cultivate or walk through the bean field, or pick beans while wet with dew or rain. If the disease is present, it is then easily spread from one part of the field to another. The bean blight is more difficult to control than anthracnose, but the same methods will give the best results at present available.

Plant Disease Control Progressing.

In its investigation of various plant diseases, the bureau of plant industry of the United States department of agriculture has found a practical method of controlling apple powdery mildew by pruning and spraying. It has also studied the peach leaf curl, which is a serious source of loss; the possibility of preventing cranberry diseases, the citrus canker and sugar beet and sweet potato diseases. Successful methods of controlling the latter have already been demonstrated to growers, and a bulletin on the subject issued. Promising methods of overcoming the potato powdery scab have also been developed. This disease, while confined to Maine and a small portion of New York, appears to be more virulent in this country than abroad. Progress in the development of a variety of cotton suitable to boll weevil conditions has also been encouraging.

BIG EASTER BUSINESS ANTICIPATED.

From present indications the Easter trade this year is going to attain very large proportions; all the store men say that orders have been coming in very freely. They also say that stock of all kinds will be plentiful and every order can be taken care of. Extra delivery automobiles have been requisitioned to take care of the rush, for it is a rush here, as the people generally object to having deliveries made on the Saturday evening previous and insist on the Sunday morning delivery.

NOTES.

Florists that are handling hardy stock report a splendid demand for shrubbry stock in general, and an almost unlimited call for roses. The variety Lady Hillingdon has proved a wonderful success in this climate, and is a great favorite for outdoor planting. Milady, also, does very well here.

The missionary work being done by various civic associations is helping to increase the demand very materially for all kinds of nursery stock.

We had quite a fall of snow March 22; something quite rare here so late in the season. S. S. B.

Ft. Wayne, Ind.

EASTER TRADE OUTLOOK BRIGHT.

Business has been good during the past two weeks, the bulk of the demand being funeral work and decorations. Palm Sunday occasioned elaborate decorations in many of the churches. The supply of stock has been shortened somewhat by the sudden cold weather of the past week, and the dark days which ensued. The rose supply was cut off considerably, and the cloudy weather has shortened the cut of carnations and cause the calyxes to split. Bulbous stock continues good on the market, but is not overplentiful. Pansies, forget-me-nots, tulips, hyacinths, narcissi, jonquils, Watson daffodils, Narcissus poeticus and mignonette constitute the variety in cut flowers. Orchids are scarce at present. American Beauty roses are good, even in the shorter lengths. Easter lilies are coming in well, and although they are not as tall as they have been other seasons, yet they look splendid. Cut lilies have been scarce during the past two weeks. The outlook for Easter business is good, with moderate prices in the ascendency.

NOTES.

Among the many downtown flower shops, the Flick Floral Company's conservatory attracts unusual attention with its huge showing of Easter plants. Pink pearl rhododendrons, crimson ramblers, acacias, deutzias, spireas and lilacs are all shown with much effectiveness.

The Bradley Flower Shop is now located in its new quarters in the Jefferson Theatre building. An opening to the public was held March 29. This new shop is most attractive with its mirrored walls, white and green finish, terazzi floor and birch-bark railing.

F. J. Knecht & Co. have purchased a new delivery auto. The company's greenhouses are making a fine showing in their Easter stock, especially their roses, of which they make a specialty.

The greenhouses of W. J. and M. S. Vesey, wholesale florists, have been yielding enormous cuts of roses. Their stock for Easter looks splendid.

What They Say:

Jan. 20, 1915
Willens Construction Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: The greenhouses you built for me last summer and with which I am so well pleased, received several severe tests within the last few days. During one cold spell of 30 degrees below, I easily maintained the desired temperature in the greenhouses.

I am well pleased with the material and also your pleasant business methods and am convinced that I have the finest greenhouses in Nebraska.

Yours very truly,
L. Buckendorf,
Norfolk, Neb.

MARCH BUSINESS NORMAL.

The volume of business for March has been about the same as March, 1914, in total, with excess of nearly all stocks, except good cut roses. Carnations are going to waste at several greenhouses. They are of most excellent quality. Calla lilies are more than plentiful and outside bulbous stock is blooming everywhere, with practically no sale for cut flowers of like kinds. Pot hyacinths and Murillo tulips are selling fairly well. The stores are grand in displays of everything at present, but all complain of poor trade during the earlier part of the month, with greatly improved conditions coming on rapidly. Exceptionally bright warm weather for the past week has brought a rush call for early bedding plants of the hardier sorts, and no doubt a great demand will develop, because every Tacoma citizen will try to aid in having our city the most beautiful on the coast for the coming tourists. Plans are being made to give every tourist vistor an abundance of cut flowers, and especial pride will bring out quantities of our beautiful roses to commercial club rooms. No doubt many people will go back east with enthusiasm and filled with wonder when they see so many beautiful roses of so many sorts. All local florists are expecting better business from now on, and Easter no doubt will help many to even up the winter income that seems to have been less than expenses for a few months past. No doubt carnations will be less plentiful soon after Easter, for several are going to plant tomatoes in, as soon as the Easter cut is over. Easter lilies are abundant, and better than for several seasons past. Pot plants are having good demand, especially medium and smaller sizes.

NOTES.

Some talk is going the rounds that one public-spirited improvement club is boosting the idea of street flower boxes, similar to enlarged window boxes, being placed along each side of Pacific avenue through the main business section. The idea is to place them on substantial raised framework on the edge of the sidewalk at frequent intervals. The same to be filled with plants and vines similar to a window box. We approve of it as a new and worthy idea, for climatic conditions are favorable enough to make it a success here.

than ever before to supply the demand, although they are having to buy. Trade in the store calls for almost everything, so they have to use space for variety's sake, and buy some carnations, greens and other stock.

Tacoma public officials and the Metropolitan park board are debating the plan of parking or improving the bluffs along the edge of our water front. Such a plan would be somewhat difficult of accomplishment, but would make a great showing for all boats coming in, and the trains over the new railroad would run alongside of it for several miles as they come in.

Van Slyke & Seamons have better demand for shipping, with plenty of excellent stock to fill all orders. One noteworthy order received was from Massachusetts, with payment enclosed for 250 Nutt geraniums. The money was returned because they are short of supply of that sort, and counted it too long a trip to be a satisfactory shipment.

California Rose Co. of Pomona, Calif., sold all the roses they could to florists, nurserymen and department stores, then came in with a good supply themselves afterward, cut the prices and advertised considerably. Some business that—but next year—what?

With the Hayden-Watson Co. an improvement all along the line is noted.

Since last December local bankers, society women, representatives of organizations, architects, city officials and rosarians have been talking "city beautiful," and as a result this year will see 100 miles of rose bushes added to the floral display. The dates of the rose carnival have been set for June 9-11, and in the decorated automobile parade, one of the features, between five and six million roses will be used. During the festival a delegation of women will meet all incoming trains and red and white roses will be given to all visitors to the city.

One of the great floral features this city has to offer this year is a rose garden covering four acres, in which more than one million roses will be in bloom at one time. More than 700 varieties are represented. Local business men through various organizations now plan to have every residence block in the city decorated with rose bushes, and in 1915 it is hoped to plant more than 250,000 bushes.

The Sweet o' the Year.

Come thou slowly, slowly, Spring,
Trail thy green robe down the hills;
Still thy tones, and softly sing
Dreams of music to the rills.

Come thou slowly, slowly, Spring,
Sift thy sunshine o'er the land;
Not to riotously fling
All dear gifts at thy command.

Come thou slowly, slowly, Spring,
Stint thy bird-song, stay thy flower;
Ah, be wise and gracious; bring
Lingering bliss to each brief hour.

Diseases of the Peony.*

The Immunity Fable.

It is an old fable, passed down from catalogue to catalogue that "The peony is free from diseases." Yet one has only to observe carefully for one season the peony plants in gardens, lawns and nurseries to lose his childish faith in the story. Not less than seven distinct diseases of this beautiful perennial are now commonly to be met with in eastern United States Doubtless there are others not yet recognized or reported. I now have these seven slated for further study and observation, and expect to add others to my list this season. The less we know of the diseases of a plant, the fewer and less important they appear. The reverse is equally true. Yet it is only through greater familiarity and more knowledge of them that we may hope to save our plants from their ravages. The first step in our study of the diseases of the peony is to learn to recognize them, to distinguish them, the one from the other, to name them. This we may accomplish only by learning the characteristic symptoms of each. This will be my chief object in the present paper. The next step is to discover the cause of each different malady, to uncover the nature of the pathogen, be it fungus, bacterium, or what not, that is chiefly responsible for the diseased condition. In this direction but little progress has as yet been made. This is largely the problem of the plant doctors, and I hope to be able to have shortly many more facts on this phase of the subject than we now possess. Of the control of these different diseases least is naturally known, and only with fuller knowledge of the pathogens and their life habits will we be able to intelligently undertake experiments on control. What I may have to offer on this part of the subject must of necessity be only suggestions.

Diseases of the Root.

THE ROOT GALL.—The root gall disease appears to be rather widely distributed in eastern United States and is well known to the growers who make a specialty of this plant. Specimens have come to my hands from time to time during the last eight years. No special investigations on this disease appear to have been made and it appears to have been rarely written about. Whether it was first imported from Europe or is of American origin is not known. Certain imported French varieties are often very severely affected. It is regarded by peony specialists as a troublesome and by some as a dangerous malady.

Symptoms. The above ground symptoms are many weak, spindling shoots which remain short and give no blooms. The shoots often grow fewer and shorter from season to season, the plants gradually dying out. In other cases the plants appear to gradually recover, the shoots growing stronger from year to year, and finally blooming. The latter appears to be the case when the roots are frequently divided and reset. The affected roots are short, stubby and irregularly knotted or swollen. The crown on which the bud sets is often much swollen. The fine rootlets are often covered with galls. The lower ends of the galled roots seem to rot away.

Cause. The nematode worm, Heterodera radicicola, is probably responsible for most galls on peony roots. Bessey* reports it as very injurious to the roots of the peony. This microscopic worm affects the roots of no less than 480 different species of plants. It is most common and destructive in the south, but is frequent on greenhouse plants in northern

United States, and on the roots of certain perennials like ginseng and peony, easily survives the winter outside.

Control. Until a fuller investigation of the disease has been made, suggestions as to control cannot be very definite. In general it will probably be most profitable to dig up and destroy all diseased plants. The experience of some growers indicates that with rare or expensive varieties it may be profitable to help the plant "outgrow" the trouble by frequently dividing and transplanting the roots. Where nematodes are the cause of the swellings, diseased roots should never be planted on land along with the healthy or on which it is expected to grow peonies continuously. Land on which galled plants have been grown should not be used again for peonies for three or four years. The worms will usually die out, especially here in the north, for want of a suitable host in which to survive.

ROOT ROTS.—Rotting roots of normal size and shape have several times been sent to me by growers. What appears to have been similar root rot has been reported by the botanists of the Connecticut and Massachusetts experiment stations. Some growers have reported it as very destructive.

Symptoms. The rotting away of the crown and the larger roots seems to be a rather constant symptom. The top of the plants either fail to appear in the spring or wilt and die during the summer.

Cause. The cause of root rot is apparently unknown. Nothing more than a casual examination appears to have been made by those plant pathologists who have reported on the disease. It is very probable that we have under the name of root rot several different diseases. They are very likely due to fungi or bacteria, though winter injury may sometimes be responsible.

Control. Removal and destruction of diseased roots and the planting of peonies on other land, are the only suggestions to be made with our present knowledge of root rots.

Diseases of the Stem, Leaves and Flowers.

THE MOSAIC DISEASE.—So far as I am aware this is the first record of this very peculiar and interesting malady of the peony leaf. I have observed this disease now for several seasons in the peony plantation at Cornell University. It has doubtless been observed by others and is probably of wide distribution. It does not appear to be a serious malady.

Symptoms. The symptoms are very striking. Usually only one or two stalks in a cluster are affected. The leaves show rings of concentric bands of alternating dark and light green color. The spots are sometimes large, with broad bands; in other cases small with narrow bands, the spots densely crowded over the leaf. I have observed no evidence of dwarfing or injury other than the peculiar markings above described.

Cause. So far as I am aware no investigation of the cause of this disease has been undertaken. It looks much like the well known mosaic disease of tobacco and other plants, the cause of which has long been sought but never certainly discovered. The mosaic disease of tobacco is known to be very infectious. Whether this of the peony is also capable of being transmitted from diseased to healthy plants, I have not determined as yet.

Control. Nothing with respect to control can be suggested except destruction of diseased plants, until we know more of the nature and cause of the trouble.

THE ANTHRACNOSE.—This is a name I am giving to a disease affecting the stems and leaves of the peony. So far as I can find this has never been recorded before, at least in this country. It appears, from my observations in the Cornell University peony plantation, to be a rather dangerous malady and deserving of the attention of peony growers and plant pathologists.

Symptoms. The disease shows first in the early summer as dark reddish bordered spots with almost white centers. Later the centers become a bit sunken and show minute black pimples under the dead epidermis, presumably the beginnings of the fungous fruit bodies. During the latter part of the summer the spotting of the stems becomes very severe, and the leaves are often severely affected with what appears to be the same disease.

Cause. This anthracnose is quite certainly a fungous disease, but up to the present I have not been able to discover mature fruit bodies of a fungus in the lesions and have not had the time to undertake a careful investigation of the malady.

Control. Probably sanitary measures, involving removal and pruning of diseased tops early in the autumn would be effective in getting rid of the pathogen which probably winters in the diseased stems and leaves.

THE LEAF BLOTCH.—This disease appears to be one of the best and longest known diseases of peonies. It was first described from Europe, where it is to be observed in almost every peony planting today. It is also very common in America. It does not appear to be a serious disease, as it affects only the leaves, and does not appear until the latter part of the season after the leaves have apparently begun to mature for autumn.

Symptoms. The symptoms are distinct and striking, large purple blotches on the upper surface, often an inch to two or three inches in diameter. The tissue does not become dead and dry as in the case of the Botrytis blight spots to be described later. The blotch on the underside of the leaf is a peculiar dull brown, as though the epidermis of the leaf had been scorched. In moist weather the center of the spot below becomes covered with an olive green felt, the stalks and spores of the pathogen.

Cause. The disease is doubtless due to a fungus which goes by the name of Cladosporium paeoniae.

Control. Where this disease gives trouble, early removal and destruction of all diseased tops will doubtless be found most satisfactory in preventing its appearance another season. The fungus most probably passes the winter in the diseased and fallen leaves from which in the spring a new crop of spores find their way to the next crop of leaves.

THE SCLEROTINIA STEM ROT.—This disease is probably more common than is suspected, but because its symptoms are so like those of the Botrytis disease, has probably seldom been recognized. I have had diseased specimens from but one grower some years ago, but recent inoculation experiments which I have made with the pathogens show it capable of rapid destruction of young peony shoots.

Symptoms. A sudden wilting of young or even nearly mature stalks, due to a rotting off at the base near the ground, is the first evidence of this disease. At this stage it cannot usually be distinguished from the more common Botrytis disease which affects the plants in the same way. Later the dead stalks on being split open will often show large black bodies, sclerotia, in the pith. These are never present in stalks killed by Botrytis.

Cause. The disease is caused by a fungus, Sclerotinia libertiana, which is a most omnipresent parasite amongst cultivated plants, especially greenhouse and garden plants. It is not particular as to the host plants it attacks, so it is not surprising that the peony, too, sometimes falls a victim to it. Wet weather greatly favors its destructiveness.

Control. Prompt removal and destruction of wilting stalks, cutting close to the crown and the removal of the soil all about the crown is important. The fungous threads spread from stalk to stalk through the soil. Removed soil should be replaced with fresh clean soil, preferably sand. Keep manure away from the crowns. The sclerotia carry the fungus through the winter and therefore the burning of all diseased stalks is desirable.

THE BOTRYTIS BLIGHT.—This is by far the most common and destructive disease of the peony so far as known at present. This disease is frequently epidemic, especially during wet springs. It occurs wherever peonies are grown, apparently the world over. It is well known in Europe, especially in Holland and England. Much in the way of scattered notes and records of its occurrence have appeared in florists' papers and experiment station reports for the past twenty years. I published a short article on the symptoms and destructiveness of this disease in the trade press in September, 1912.

Symptoms. The disease affects stems, buds and leaves, appearing on these organs in the spring and summer in the order given. The first appearance of the malady is almost always early in the spring as the stalks are coming up. Shoots 4 to 8 inches tall, their leaves not yet expanded, will suddenly wilt and fall over. Examination shows them to be rotted at the base at or below the surface of the soil. The lesions begin usually at the base of the first leaf sheath and spread down to the crown and up often an inch or more above ground. The rotted portion soon becomes covered with a felty brown coat of spores and spore stalks of the fungus, thus distinguishing it from the similar stem rot caused by Sclerotinia. While it is generally the young stems that are affected, I have seen stalks with blossoms opening, suddenly wilt and fall over from Botrytis stem rot at the base.

The buds are the next to show injury from this disease. Sometimes the very small young buds are attacked, turn black and dry up. This is often spoken of as bud blast. Larger buds are later affected, turn brown and fail to open; the stalk for several inches below the bud is usually killed, turns brown and frequently shows alternating stripes or bands of dark and light brown color. When broken open, such buds present a dark brown rotten mass. This is the "bud rot" stage of the disease. In a wet season as high as 80 or 90 per cent of the buds may thus be rotted before they can open. Opened flowers are also often affected, becoming discolored and rotten. The rotted buds and flowers soon become covered with the brown felt of the spore stalks and spores of the pathogen.

The leaves are usually the last to show symptoms of this disease, in the form of large irregular spots which spread rapidly usually from the apex or sinuses of the leaves. The tissue is killed, becoming brown and dry so that it crumples readily. The underside of the spot is soon covered with the spore stalks of the fungus. The blighting of the leaves gives the plants a most untidy appearance. The leaf blight form is very common on peony plants everywhere during the latter part of the summer, becoming very bad during rainy weather. In dry seasons the disease is but little in evidence.

Cause. The cause of this disease has long been attributed to the fungus, Botrytis, found constantly associated with the lesions on stem, bud and leaf. There are many described species of Botrytis, some of which are very common on greenhouse and garden crops. The Botrytis forms found on peony have been referred usually to Botrytis vulgaris or Botrytis cinerea, and Botrytis paeoniae, the last described by a Hollander as the cause of the disease in that country. My own studies indicate that there are at least two distinct species of Botrytis attacking and causing identical symptoms in the peonies both in this country and in Europe. The species while quite distinct in structure are very similar in their life habits and effects on the peony. One forms large sclerotia (resting bodies), while the other forms very minute ones. I have never seen the sclerotia of the large form except in my cultures, but the small ones are commonly formed in the diseased stalks just beneath the epidermis and appear as black pimples the size of a pin head. Presumably they serve to carry the fungus through the winter on the old stubble left by cutting away the tops. There in the spring they probably give rise to a new crop of spores, in just the best position to infect the new shoots when they come up. I have not yet determined whether these pathogens ever attack crowns and roots or not.

Control. The control of this disease is very difficult for several reasons. It is destructive only in wet seasons. The pathogens, at least the large sclerotial form, are so common, so widely distributed and apparently have a wide range of hosts which they can attack, so that if one is not present another is sure to be. Spores are produced in great quantities and carried both by wind and insects. Ants seem to carry the spores from the base of diseased stalks to the buds of healthy plants. Here in the exuded sugary solution, so abundant upon unopened peony buds, the spores find both food and moisture and germinate much more promptly and vigorously than in water. The peony is very susceptible, there being apparently little difference in susceptibility of the different varieties. Spraying is in the first place undesirable as it discolors foliage and buds, and in the second place our experiments indicate that the sugary exudate of the buds effectively neutralizes the copper in Bordeaux so that the spores germinate and infect sprayed buds just as readily as unsprayed. Sulphur in its various forms appears to be equally ineffective in preventing the bud rot form of the malady.

Eradication measures offer the most promise of success in the control of the Botrytis blight. To be effective, however, they must begin with the careful removal of the old stubs in the autumn or very early in the spring and be prosecuted persistently throughout the season. To remove the old stubble carefully, remove the soil from the crown, so as not to injure the buds. Cut away the old stalks close to the crown and burn. These old stalks harbor the fungus. Replace the soil removed with fresh clean soil, preferably sand, or at least top coat with sand. When the shoots begin to appear, inspect them daily and remove by cutting close to the crown any that show wilting. These should be burned. By promptly removing these wilting shoots, you prevent the crop of spores that always appears if the dead shoots are left and so greatly reduce the chance of infection of buds and leaves. The daily inspection must now include the young growing buds and any that begin to turn brown or black and die must be removed and destroyed. As the buds grow older and approach the blooming time, the infection will usually be first evident at the base of the bud on one side as a brown lesion, which will gradually spread up, involving the entire bud, turning it brown. Spreading downward it gradually involves the entire circumference of the stem. It will be very important to detect these lesions in the early stages and remove the diseased buds for spores are produced most abundantly on rotted buds and are also in the most favorable position for distribution by wind and insects to healthy buds. Spotted leaves should also be promptly picked off. However, if the early spring inspection and eradication operations have been thorough and there are no diseased peonies near by, the foliage will probably suffer but little. In wet seasons these inspections should be made daily. In dry weather less often will suffice. For the nurserymen or the grower of large numbers of peonies, this method of control may not be profitable, but for the small grower or in the private garden where a relatively small number of clusters are planted, it will be found entirely practicable and profitable. Even in a large area I believe the eradication measures I have outlined are worthy a thorough trial.

Conclusions. The ultimate end and object of all plant disease investigations is control. It must be evident from what has preceeded that our knowledge of the diseases of the peony is limited indeed, that most of it is yet to be discovered. Naturally, then, our suggestions as to control cannot be specific. They must be general and they cannot be taken as positive recommendations, only suggestions based on limited knowledge as to the most likely lines along which success is to be expected. Spraying cannot of course get at the root troubles and our past experience and the ornamental character of the plant both discourage this as a means of protecting the parts of the plant above ground. Sanitary measures involving the prompt eradication of the diseased parts, as I have already suggested for the most of the diseases described, offer the most practicable and satisfactory methods for the control of the various maladies to which this beautiful ornamental is subject.

A New Chrysanthemum Pest.

The latter part of March, a chrysanthemum plant showing a serious infestation by a small gall midge, was received from a Michigan grower through the courtesy of Prof. R. H. Pettit of the Michigan Agricultural College. The sending was accompanied by the statement that the insect was causing serious injury in the houses of a large commercial grower. The plant submitted for examination has the stem from a point at about the surface of the ground to where the leaves start, a distance of three-fourths of an inch, enlarged to practically twice the normal diameter and similar masses of tissue occur in and near the midribs of the developing leaves, arresting the growth and producing a close, ill-shaped head and probably ruining the plant for commercial purposes. These swellings are made up of a series of approximately oval cells, each with a length of about one-twelfth of an inch and some projecting as small cones at almost right angles from the plant tissues. This peculiar condition is produced by a small fly, which we have identified as the chrysanthemum midge, an European insect known to attack a number of species of chrysanthemum, and one probably introduced into this country by the importation of plants or cuttings. One variety, mistletoe, seems to be particularly susceptible.

Several gall midges related to this species are already known as serious local pests in greenhouses and attack violets, roses and cactus. Experience with these three indicate great practical difficulties in controlling them, and it is feared that the same may be true of the chrysanthemum midge, consequently we are calling attention to it at once and suggesting a careful examination of stock for abnormal conditions such as those described above. We would be pleased to identify any material and advise further in case it seems desirable.

THE EASTER TRADE

Easter trade generally throughout the country, according to reports received from nearly all sections, was at least satisfactory, with the exception of some of the larger cities along the Atlantic coast, this section being swept by a heavy snow-storm, which commenced on the day preceding, and continued through Easter Sunday, seriously affecting trade and deliveries. While in some instances prices and volume of sales went above or below the averages of other years, in the majority of cases reported there was little difference in the total sales in money. The size of the orders given was also smaller than in former years, but the number of orders filled was larger, and this helped in many cases to make the usual sales volume.

As in former years, plants met with heavy demand, the supply was generally ample, the quality good and prices reasonable, with the result that greater numbers in pots and made up arrangements were sold than is usually the case. Lilies, as usual, led in popular favor, but hydrangeas, rambler roses, azaleas, spireas, tulips, and in fact, good quality plant stock of any kind, at a reasonable price, was ready money. In cut blooms, lilies, carnations and tulips sold well, and an excellent call was noted in all sections for anything suitable for corsages, which were in good demand, as the weather was in most cases all that could be desired for the Easter promenade.

LINCOLN, NEB.—According to C. H. Frey, the Easter trade for 1915 showed an increased volume of 25 per cent over last year's business during the same period. The Lenten sale of plants was very good, and all stock cleaned up well. The cut flower demand was good and the supply sufficient to meet all requirements. Lilies, all bulbous stock, hydrangeas, azaleas, spireas, deutzias, Primula obconica and cyclamens sold well, but there was a good call for any good blooming plant. All cut flowers sold well, but one or two growers had an over supply of daffodils.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Easter trade this year was about 10 per cent better than a year ago, with prices about the same, is the report of Henry Smith. Stocks of all seasonable varieties, in both plant and cut flowers, were plentiful, and all sold well, plants especially finding ready call, with lilies in best demand. In cut flowers, violets and roses sold best, with bulbous stock least sought. There was an increased demand for larger and better plants over previous years. The call for cut flowers seems to be on the decrease.

SEDALIA, MO.—The Archias Floral Co. reports an increase of 25 per cent in Easter sales this year over the corresponding period in 1914. There was practically no change in prices, except in carnations. The supply of plants was sufficient to meet all requirements, but a shortage existed in the cut flower supply. Popular priced plants had the call, very little high priced stock being sold. Made up stock sold very well. In the cut flower class all varieties sold well. Florist Telegraph Delivery orders increased 100 per cent.

DISEASES OF THE PEONY.

Fig. 5—A Healthy Bud and Two Rotted by the Botrytis Blight.

OMAHA, NEB.—Hess & Swoboda report the 1915 Easter sales as being a trifle less than business during the corresponding period last year, with practically no change in prices. While plenty of lily plants were on hand, the supply for good flowering plants of other varieties was not equal to the demand. Cut flower stock was of good quality and plentiful, and violets, lily of the valley and sweet peas were among the best sellers. High-priced plant baskets had little call. Fine weather prevailed.

KOKOMO, IND.—The volume of Easter business was about equal to that of a year ago, prices being about the same, according to W. W. Coles. The supply, both in plants and cut flowers, was equal to all demands. In the former class lilies were most called for, and spireas also sold well. Tulips were least in demand. In cut flower sales roses were easily first, with carnations second in popularity. Sweet peas also sold well, and there was a large call for jonquils and double daffodils. There was small demand for bulbous stock.

CANAL DOVER, O.—With prices about the same as last year, the Easter trade this year was about double that of a year ago, according to C. Betscher. Both plants and cut flowers were in plentiful supply. Hyacinths, daffodils and tulips in pans enjoyed an excellent call, and in the cut blooms, carnations, daffodils and roses sold best and in the order named. Business locally has been ahead of last year; in fact, several previous years. Collections have been good. A good Decoration day business is looked forward to.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Prices for the Easter trade this year were 20 per cent less than a year ago and total sales showed a falling off of about 10 per cent, according to S. A. Anderson. Ample stock to meet all requirements was at hand. Lily plants and made up arrangements had a good call, and in cut flowers anything suitable for corsages was in good demand. Roses were least saleable. Orders were 20 per cent smaller than previous years, but customers were more numerous.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.—Fred E. Avery reports the Easter business this year as showing a sales increase of about 15 per cent over that of a year ago. Prices were about the same, there was just about enough stock in plants to supply the demand but the call for cut flowers exceeded anticipations and there was a shortage in many varieties. Sweet peas and violets were most in demand and favorable weather conditions were responsible for early buying.

TERRE HAUTE, IND. — With fine weather, making sales and deliveries easy, a plentiful supply of all lines of stock, and no increase in prices over a year ago, Heinl & Son advise that the 1915 Easter business was about the same in volume as for the corresponding period in 1914. Hydrangeas in the plant stock sold best.

BRAMPTON, ONT.—W. G. Peacock, of the Dale estate, reports Easter sales for 1915 as unprecedented—nothing short of extraordinary. There was a plentiful supply of stock of all kinds, good in quality, with prices the same as last year. In the plant division, lilies and orchids had a wonderful demand. Trade was much better than last year, and it is difficult to account for such a busy Easter, considering existing conditions in Canada at present. Lenten business was good from the start.

BANGOR, ME.—Prices for large plants were better than a year ago, and the volume of sales in total was about equal to the Easter business in 1914, reports Adam Sekinger. The supply of everything, both plants and cut flowers, was ample. Lilies sold out completely and rambler roses went well. Genistas were hard to move. In cut blooms, roses were in least demand, while all bulbous stock sold fast. The weather was good and trade began early in the week.

ROCKVILLE, IND.—With a shortage in some varieties, both in cut flower and plant divisions, and prices better than a year ago, the sales for the Easter period this year exceeded those of a year ago by about 50 per cent, is the report of H. B. Brubeck. Roses sold best among the cut flower lovers, carnations and daffodils not being called for to any great extent. Bulbous stock sold well. Business in general is better, showing an improvement over last fall.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Gust. Rusch & Co. report that prices on the majority of stock was higher than a year ago, and that the Easter sales for the 1915 season were about 25 per cent better. Stock of all kinds was plentiful, and all florists were well satisfied with quality and volume of business. Lilies and rambler roses sold best in the plant section. In cut flowers, bulbous stock moved slowly. There was a heavy demand for sweet peas.

PUEBLO, COLO.—C. Fletcher reports no difference in prices between the Easter trade of this year and that of a year ago, but a bank failure a few days before this year's event, caused a decrease in sales of nearly 25 per cent. Tulips and carnations were most popular in the cut flower class. Plant stock was plentiful, but anything over $4 was not wanted. The 10 cents stores sold cheap plants and hurt business to a certain extent.

FORT SMITH, ARK.—"Better business, prices about the same as last year, and plants and cut flowers in good supply, with the exception of carnations," writes Geo. Rye. Roses and tulips sold best in the plant division, with spireas least popular. In cut flowers there seem to be about an average call for all seasonable varieties. The weather conditions have not been conducive to good trade, only three sunny days in the month of March.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Abele Bros., in summing up the Easter sales this year report that the volume of business was about equal to that of the same period in 1914, prices being practically the same as at that time. Stock was plentiful, both in plants and cut flowers. In the former class, lilies and hydrangeas were most in demand, while lilies, carnations and sweet peas found most favor with the cut flower buyers.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—With prices a trifle higher than a year ago, the Easter trade for 1915 was about up to the usual average, according to Arthur J. Todd. Plants and cut flowers were in good supply, and blooming plants sold exceptionally well. In cut flowers lilies and violets were most popular, with carnations least in demand. Wholesale florists report business on a par with that of 1914, with good sales in bedding plants and ferns.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Hoyt Bros. report Easter business this year better than that of the 1914 period, with no change in prices. The supply of stock, both in flowering plants and cut blooms, was ample to take care of all orders. Easter lilies, hydrangeas and tulips sold best in the plant class, with roses and carnations vying with each other in the call for cut flowers. General business conditions seem to indicate better times coming.

DES MOINES, IA.—Mrs. N. B. Ashby reports trade during the Easter season this year as follows: "We are chiefly growers of gladiolus, and were badly hurt by dry weather with hot winds. Due to damage to the blossoms, prices were about 25 per cent below the average, and sales were consequently less. We had a market, however, for all salable flowers."

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—At least 50 per cent increase in sales over the 1914 Easter season, prices better, and practically a clean up in all stocks, is reported by Furrow & Company. Easter lily plants, hydrangeas and plant baskets were in great demand. In cut flowers, all varieties sold well, with lilies and carnations leading in favor. They report the best Easter business in the history of this city.

MONTREAL, CAN.—Business about the same as last year, with prices slightly lower, reports Julius Luck. Stock was plentiful. Among the plant varieties, spireas were least in demand, with a good call for lilies, hydrangeas and roses. All kinds of cut flowers sold well, with violets leading in popularity.

Easter in the Chicago Stores.

The Easter trade this year was very satisfactory, and, as usual, plants sold best, but cut flowers also had a good call, especially on Saturday, and cleaned up nicely. Plants and cut flowers in nearly all instances were of exceptionally fine quality, and the only complaint heard on this score was that stock in the larger sizes of rambler roses was none too plentiful. Several of the down town florists did not handle any pot lilies this year, because of the fact that a few of the department stores were having special sales on them at greatly reduced prices. Azaleas, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, rambler roses, lilies, spireas, genistas and deutzias, neatly arranged in baskets and boxes, were featured heavily everywhere. Bulbous stock in pots and pans, neatly done up, were also seen in large supply, but not so much as last year. In cut flowers sweet peas, violets and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses had the call, but other roses and carnations sold well, and, taken all in all, the weather was ideal for Easter, and business was very satisfactory, considering the unusually quiet season that has been experienced.

W. J. Smyth, 3101 South Michigan avenue, had a splendid display of rambler roses, azaleas and lilies artistically arranged in baskets, and one item in particular that attracted considerable attention this year was a box with a trellis back that greatly resembled a basket and which was filled with small rambler roses and was neatly arranged with ribbons and had an artificial butterfly set here and there. Mr. Smyth says the gross sales would have been a great deal better this Easter if the prices were as high as they were last year, but that on the whole, he was well satisfied with the amount of business done. A large electric cross, arranged with galax leaves and lilies, designed by Arthur Weatherwax, helped considerably to make the window display the most attractive and best ever.

DISEASES OF THE PEONY.

Fig. 6—Blighted Leaves. The Lower Surface of the Spot Covered with Spores of the Botrytis.

J. F. Kidwell Co., 3530 Michigan avenue, featured blooming plants on a large scale, and some of the finest hydrangeas and rhododendrons of the season were on display at this store. Lilies, genistas and bulbous stock in pots and pans were also offered freely, as was Scotch heather, which sold well. Practically all the plants that were sold at Easter came from the firm's own greenhouses at Downers Grove, and compared most favorably in quality to stocks offered anywhere else. American Beauty roses of unusually fine quality were only one of the many choice offerings in cut flowers. The new Hendricks auto truck came in very handy in making deliveries and was kept on the go all the time.

Chas. A. Samuelson and his able store force was busy as could be at his establishment at 2134 South Michigan avenue. Rambler roses, azaleas, spireas, bougainvilleas, lilies and other Easter blooming plants were the principal offerings, but bulbous stock in pots and pans was also handled in quantity and was on display in the window and conservatory early in the week, and many orders were booked on this account before the real demand set in. The trellis basket was used almost exclusively, as far as the rambler roses were concerned, and made quite a hit with the customers. Mr. Samuelson was somewhat disappointed because he could not get some of the larger sizes of rambler roses, as he figured on, for this is always a big leader with him.

At Oscar J. Friedman's store, 522 South Michigan avenue, a better line of novelties was never seen at any one establishment at Easter before, and it is pleasing to note that the customers like something different, for all the offerings in this line were quickly disposed of. In plants, azaleas, bougainvilleas, rambler roses and hydrangeas were the chief offerings, but straw vases were used almost exclusively instead of baskets, which attracted considerable attention. These straw vases were picked up by Victor Bergmann while he was east recently, and he evidently knew what he was doing when he bought a great number of them, for they add greatly to the beauty of the plant, after they are worked into shape, and are artistically decorated with ribbons in the pleasing Friedman style.

The Alpha Floral Co. had its usual large display of plants and cut flowers at its splendidly located store at the corner of Adams street and North Wabash avenue, and it was a pleasure to stop and inspect the window, for George Economopolus believes in both quantity and quality, and a great variety of stock was shown. Rambler roses, lilies, azaleas and bulbous stock were the principal offerings in plants, and in cut flowers everything reasonable was handled on a large scale, with choice butterfly sweet peas the leader. Trade was very good at this store, although it started in much later in the week than usual.

John Mangel, the Palmer House Florist, featured artistically arranged baskets of lilies, azaleas, rambler roses and hydrangeas in plants, and carried practically everything in cut flowers, especially roses, with Mrs. Chas. Russell as a headliner. A pretty window display attracted the attention of the public the entire week, and the report at this place is that business was fine and compared favorably with that of last Easter. Nick Lempres, who has charge of the deliveries, kept things moving in such grand style that all orders were delivered on time.

The Pansy Florist, 4044 West Madison street, had its usual magnificent showing of Easter plants, neatly dressed up in baskets, and also a fine window display that attracted considerable attention. Miss Anna Grace Sawyer was so busy filling orders that she hardly had time to eat, much less to speak to anyone during the rush.

W. W. Adams, Bellevue place, had a beautiful display of rhododendrons, azaleas and rambler roses artistically arranged in baskets, and a magnificent supply of bulbous stock in pots, pans and boxes. Lilies were also among the offerings, and while plants were the leader, cut flowers were handled extensively also, and everything pointed to a good Easter trade at the time of this visit, but the demand did not start in as early in the week as it should have.

Diseases of the Peony.

Fig. 7—A Dead Stock Covered With the Minute Sclerotia of the Botrytis.

The Ernst Wienhoeber Co. made a big showing of blooming plants of all kinds, arranged in grand style, with rambler roses and azaleas the chief offerings. Bulbous stock was offered in large quantities in pots, baskets and pans, and especially choice tulips were noted at this establishment. Mr. Wienhoeber's son, William, is a valuable assistant to him now at the store, and is a chip of the old block as far as waiting on the trade is concerned. Trade was good, and Baby Tausendshoen roses were the first item to sell out on the entire list of offerings. The conservatory came in handy for display purposes, and an up-to-date store in the residential district is hardly complete without a show house of this kind.

At C. Frauenfelder's store, 3343 Madison street, a big stock of pot lilies, azaleas, rambler roses, hydrangeas and bulbous stock was sold and trade was so brisk that the force, including Mrs. Frauenfelder and Miss Edna, had about all they could do to handle the orders. Chas. Werner, who has been with Mr. Frauenfelder for the past 14 years, had a nice supply of tulips and roman hyacinths as usual this Easter and practically everything in this line and in blooming plants cleaned up quickly. Wednesday, March 31, was a good day, for church orders were numerous and resembled a small Easter in itself. Prices according to Mr. Frauenfelder were not as high as last Easter, but the total sales will compare favorably with those of last year.

The Bohannon Floral Co., 57 East Monroe street, surprised the trade when it opened another place for Easter in the store building at State and Monroe streets formerly occupied by Bauman & Co. as a retail jewelry store. While trade was surprisingly good at this store it was also so at the main establishment on Monroe street near Wabash avenue and the other branch store adjoining the temporary location. but flowers were handled on an extensive scale and so were plants, especially azaleas, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, heather, rambler roses and other blooming plants in baskets, which were very handsomely decorated with ribbons, etc. Live canaries in small wooden cages were suspended from the rambler roses and made even a better hit than they did last Easter.

George Wienhoeber, 41 South Wabash avenue, had a very nice assortment of plants at his new store, and particularly noticeable were the splendid specimens of rambler roses in baskets made up with fancy leaved caladiums. Azaleas, hydrangeas and deutzias were handled on a large scale, but no lily plants or rhododendrons were offered at this store. Cut flowers were handled in large quantities, especially roses, cut lilies and sweet peas and one of the prettiest corsage boxes that one ever had the pleasure to look upon were the best offerings of the year. A beautiful corsage in this magnificent box was sold at a special introductory price of $5.00 and the demand was very heavy for them. Business was exceptionally good and the proprietor has no complaint whatever to make.

August Lange, 25 East Madison street, was busy all week, and his window displays attracted much attention. Practically everything in the line of plants and cut flowers was featured to meet the needs of rich and poor alike, and the store was completely filled with customers at all times. The dollar box as usual was in brisk demand, and taken all in all, everything sold well and extra trips to the market were necessary to replenish the stock and additional help, including Joe Bieber, was engaged to serve the customers. Sweet peas were handled in quantity at this store and were in brisk demand, as were violets, orchids and gardenias. Business at this establishment during Easter week compares favorably with that of last year with a slight increase in the total amount of business done.

mus and his clerks had all they could do to handle the trade, but succeeded in getting out all the orders on time because of the splendid system Mr. Asmus has of doing things. Lily plants were handled on a mammoth scale at this establishment, as were azaleas, rambler roses, spireas, hydrangeas and rhododendrons, artistically arranged in baskets and beautifully decorated with ribbon. A pretty narrow purple ribbon, edged with white, which bore the words "Easter Greetings," caught the eye of the buyers and made a big hit with them. To tell the truth, the display at this store resembled a flower show more than it did a show at a retail establishment, but everything on exhibit was salable and gave one a little idea how carefully the stock was selected to make as large a showing as possible and yet sell before the Easter demand was over. Spring stock was a big offering at this store, and the conservatories where Rheinold Schiller was in charge came in handy for dressing up the stock before it was sent into the store. Schiller's north side store, where Herman Schiller presides, also had a splendid showing of stock and enjoyed a splendid Easter business.

The Fleischman Floral Co., 84 East Jackson boulevard, featured blooming plants on an extensive scale especially azaleas, rhododendrons, hydrangeas, lilies and rambler roses and an enormous supply of cut flowers of every description and of the best quality obtainable. Some of the finest specimens of azaleas ever seen in this city were among the offerings at this place and the stock in general presented a most inviting appearance the way it was arranged in the pleasing Fleischman style. A large Easter egg of white cloth decorated here and there with yellow jonquils was something out of the ordinary in the way of a window display, but was most appropriate for Easter.

H. N. Bruns, 3034 West Madison street, was pleased with his Easter business and the display at his magnificent store and conservatories was a dandy one and he could not help but do business with the splendid facilities he has for showing his stock off to good advantage and being a man that believes in advertising he used every bit of space to good advantage, but was careful to avoid crowding so as not to spoil the effect, and looking over the baskets it seems as if somebody in his employ can trim baskets almost as well as he can grow lily of the valley. Hyacinths, tulips and other stock was a big item at this store, but a special feature was made of $3 baskets, which sold like hot cakes. Cut flowers were handled on a large scale at this store, and some fine lily of the valley in pots and pans attracted considerable attention.

John T. Muir had a splendid Easter trade at his store on Grand boulevard and featured plants on a large scale, including a good supply of bougainvilleas. Azaleas, rambler roses and all blooming plants sold well, as did cut flowers, and it was pleasing to note that everything cleaned up well.

The George Wittbold Co. had the best Easter trade that it ever experienced at both the Buckingham place and North Clark street stores as the result of the heavy advertising done in the daily papers. Prices were not as high as last year, but the sales early made up the difference and the demand was principally for made-up baskets of palms, bulbous stock, foliage plants, azaleas, spireas and rambler roses, at prices ranging from $3 to $8 each; but flowers also sold well, with everything in good demand, especially roses, a good portion of which came from the firm's own greenhouses at Edgebrook. There was a good demand for corsages and the increased store force had all it could do to handle the orders that kept constantly coming in over telephone and through other sources. Many telegraph orders were filled also, and after everything was checked up it was found that the Easter business this year was considerably larger than that of 1914.

Pacific Coast Horticultural Society.

SPRING FLOWER SHOW.

With the best display and the largest attendance it has ever had, according to Managers Platt and Fotheringham, the spring flower show of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, in the Palace of Horticulture at the exposition grounds closed Sunday, March 21. The society took advantage of California's space in the palace, which is still vacant, to mass a great display of spring flowers and plants. There were bulbous stock of all kinds in the greatest profusion, also flowering plants in great variety. Golden Gate park made a most worthy showing of begonias, calceolarias and cinerarias with a background of ornamental foliage plants, and also a fine collection of flowering shrubs. Ferrari Bros, San Francisco, Calif., captured nearly everything in the bulbous line. For the gold medal display they were hard presed by the San Mateo County exhibit, and A. McDonald, of the latter exhibit, received many encomiums for his splendid exhibit. George Nunn, of Menlo Park, Calif, showed a remarkable exhibit of flowering shrubs for such an early date and easily carried off the silver medal. He showed over sixty-seven varieties of flowering shrubs from the Sterns' estate, of which he is head gardener. Tom Breen, superintendent of the I. W. Hellman estate, won many firsts and received many congratulations for the splendid stock he showed, as did Martin Cass, of the Hillsborough Nurseries, for his splendidly grown lilies and Primula obconica. E. James and H. Plath had their usual fine show of Easter plants.

The following were prominent among the successful contestants for awards in the plant and cut flower classes: Ferrari Bros., San Francisco, Calif.; San Mateo County commission; Pelicano, Rossi Co., San Francisco, Calif; Domato Bros., San Francisco, Calif.; Schwerin Bros., E. E. James, Mrs. J. A. Scannavins, H. Plath, I. W. Hellman, Jr., George Nunn, Hillsborough Nurseries, Mrs. R. A. Darbie, and the United Floral Supply Co.

The judges were Frank Pelicano, J. Baldocchi, Chas. Mitchell, A. O. Stein, Otto Stein and Sidney Clack.

BISMARCK, N. D.—Hundreds of citizens of this city took advantage of the delightful weather and the invitation extended by the Hoskins Floral Company and visited the Hoskins greenhouses March 30. The Easter trade this year was a record breaker.

OGDEN, UTAH.—In reporting 1915 Easter business, F. J. Hendershot & Son write as follows: "With no increase in prices, business showed an increase of 100 per cent over the corresponding period last year. Easter lilies were first choice among the plants, and in cut flowers, azaleas, hyacinths and tulips were in best demand.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—The Saltford Flower Shop has the following to say regarding the Easter business for 1915: "A very good Easter except the day previous when an old-fashioned blizzard struck us and raised 'old Hooo' with both customers and deliveries, but practically everything sold out, and take it all in all, Easter, 1915, was satisfactory to us."

PLANT NOTES.

Hydrangeas.

There are very few plants that are generally grown that show more variance in their culture or in the returns to the grower than the hydrangeas, especially those that are grown for summer blooming. In looking over the stocks in the several markets one will often see the extremes of these plants grown in the same sized pot; one with eight to ten heads of bloom, short and stocky with fine foliage, an ornament on any porch or in any yard; and the other tall and long jointed, with two or three heads of bloom and five or six branches with no flowers and the foliage thin and small; the former bringing the grower $2.00 to $2.50 and the latter hardly averaging 75 cents. Yet these two plants have practically cost the grower the same amount of labor. These plants grow rapidly and must have plenty of room, an abundance of sun and lots of nourishment. It is useless to try to grow a good plant when they are crowded together. Many growers finish these plants by raising the pots over the benches of bedding plants that do not now require the full amount of sun, placing the hydrangeas about four feet apart in the center of the bench and standing the pot on a stand two feet above the other plants. This gives the hydrangeas a fine location. When the plants have set their buds the pots will probably be full of roots and a watering of liquid manure once or twice a week will greatly assist them in finishing up the flower and keep the foliage in good color. To grow good hydrangeas they must have plenty of food, room enough to grow shapely and for the air to circulate all around the plant and a light, well ventilated location. Under these conditions they are easily grown and are remunerative to the grower.

Lilium Longiflorum.

Among the best flowers for greenhouse culture during the summer months is the Lilium lancifolium, of varieties rubrum, roseum album and Melpomene. While these varieties can all be grown outside, yet under those conditions they rarely give perfect flowers and they also tarnish quickly in the direct rays of the sun or under heavy rains and to have flowers that can be used for decorative work or designs it is far better to grow them under glass. Those that are to bloom in July should have been started in March, but for August blooming they can be planted now. One of the easiest ways to grow these bulbs is to plant them in boxes from four to six inches deep, not too large, but of a size that one man can handle when filled with soil. Do not fill the boxes too full when planting the bulbs, for like all lilies they throw out roots at the surface, so it is well to leave room for top dressing later. Grow them in a cool, shady location and after the spikes begin to grow give them plenty of water and keep them tied erect to stakes. Constant fumigation will be necessary to keep the green fly in check. This is in no way forcing these bulbs, and if properly dried off after blooming the bulbs may be grown year after year and a good crop of flowers obtained.

Freesias.

Although the freesias are a cheap bulb they should not be thrown away, for it takes but little attention to ripen them off after they are through blooming and as good bulbs can be procured as those that are purchased. The freesia is a native of southern Africa, so they are blooming at the natural season when flowered in midwinter in the north. But the bulbs must be allowed to mature their growth and then dried off gradually. The pots or boxes in which they are grown can then be placed in full sunlight and allowed to become very dry. A shelf near the glass makes an admirable place on which to place them after the growth has finished and no more watering is required, but they must not stand where any drip from the roof on a stormy day is liable to keep them moist. They can be shaken out in June and the bulbs started, as it is comparatively easy to select the flowering bulbs and store in a dry place until wanted for planting. For Christmas blooming the bulbs should be started early in July and a succession of plantings until September will give the grower flowers until the following spring.

Gypsophila Paniculata.

There are few summer flowers that are of more use to the florist having a local trade than the gypsophila, for it lightens up work beautifully and greatly aids in softening the appearance of the summer flowers, many of which have a coarse look in floral work, and in bouquets, sprays and basket work the sprays are particularly useful. The grower not possessing a good bed of this should procure stock at once and plant them in a good, sunny position, and after once becoming established they require no further attention than to keep the bed free from weeds and occasionally cultivated. Seed can be now sown and as soon as large enough transplanted in rows outside where they can remain until another spring, when they can be again transplanted to permanent quarters, but to have plants that will bloom this year it will be necessary to procure older stock. The double form of this plant is even more beautiful than the single for some purposes, and its lasting qualities make it more valuable for a cut flower than the older variety.

Celosia Plumosa.

The plants of Celosia plumosa or the ostrich plume celosia are of very easy culture and make very showy plants for either the garden or the greenhouse. They form pyramidal bushes and the yellow and red plumes which resemble ostrich feathers stand gracefully above the foliage. While they make showy plants for the garden, finer specimens are grown under glass, and they make very showy plants in the late summer and fall. Seed sown in April will make fine plants for culture during the summer, but like all the celosias the young seedlings damp off easily. As soon as large enough they should be potted in good light soil in 2½-inch pots and later shifted to 4-inch, and to grow large plants to 6-inch pots. They should be grown in a good, strong light, for if shaded the plants will become drawn and the dwarf compact plants are more desirable. C. plumosa aurea, the orange ostrich plume, and C. plumosa coccinea, the crimson ostrich plume, are the two best of the older varieties, and Pride of Castle Gould, a new introduction of the last few years, is the best of all the ostrich plume varieties and can be obtained in many colors.

San Francisco.

MARKET CANNOT ABSORB HEAVY SUPPLY.

Business has improved a little since last report but at that it is not very much to brag about. The extremely and unseasonably hot spell, which was experienced last week forced all outdoor stock into bloom with such a rush that the market was unable to absorb the supply. Lilacs of the different varieties are now to be had in abundance. Peonies are also seen in some of the stores. Cattleyas have passed the stage where they seemed to be a glut and the limited amount arriving in this market is meeting with a brisk demand. There are all kinds of roses to be had, with the possible exception of long stemmed American Beauties. With the slackening up of the shipping trade in this flower, all varieties are overly plentiful. There is hardly any demand for carnations, Gorgeous excepted. The warm weather has taken the color out of most of the colored varieties, but notwithstanding this, some grand stock is being handled. All bulbous stock is very much in evidence and moving slowly at low figures. Violets are of poor quality and we do not expect to see much more of them this season. From present indications there will be plenty of lilies for Easter. It is a late one and most of the growers have their stock ready. Valley is plentiful, and sweet peas getting more so daily, although none of the grandiflora or Spencer type have appeared as yet. All the stores are featuring splendid exhibits of pot plants and are ready for Easter business, pot roses, azaleas and rhododendrons being the chief ones used. There is a large supply of smilax, ferns and greens, all of which is in demand just now.

NOTES.

Sidney Clack, of Mayfield, has been appointed on the international jury of awards by the department of horticulture of the exposition. There is no man in the trade who is more eminently fitted for this honor than Mr. Clack, and the exposition authorities are to be congratulated upon being able to secure his consent to act. Mr. Clack's services have always been eagerly sought by every show of importance held in this city and vicinity for a great many years, and he is looked upon as an authority on every subject pretaining to plants and flowers. We congratulate Geo. Dennison on his wise selection.

W. A. Phillips of Haarlem, Holland, has arrived in this city as the exposition representative of the Holland Bulb Growers' Association. He will superintend the Netherlands exhibit of hyacinths and tulips, which will portray on a small scale the multi-colored fields of flowers stretching all the way from Alkmaor, in Northern Holland, to the Hook of Holland. The Netherlands exhibit is one of the most elaborate at the exposition, and is always the center of admiring throngs.

The next regular meeting of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society will be held Thursday evening, April 8. A very interesting feature of the evening will be a lecture on sweet peas by Frank G. Cuthbertson, assistant secretary of the American Sweet Pea Society. Mr. Cuthbertson is a noted authority on this flower. He is also manager of the show to be held in the Palace of Horticulture, June 4, and a record attendance is expected to hear him.

M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, accompanied by his charming wife, were visitors during the week, getting a line on the supply for Easter. He reports business as very fair in the capital city.

The Lynch Nursery Company is sending some splendid Silver Pink snapdragon to this market. This is somewhat of a novelty in this city and is meeting with ready sale.

Henry Maier, of the Hillsborough Nurseries, has been awarded the contract for the planting of the new park at San Mateo. Mr. Maier reports a very busy season.

Louis Copuro, who recently closed his store on O'Farrell street, has departed for Sacramento, where he has accepted a position with M. H. Ebel.

Dan Mac Rorie, vice-president of the Society of American Florists, who has been taking in the New York show, is expected home shortly. G. N.

GOOD EASTER BUSINESS.

Business for Easter was very good and fully up to expectations. The wholesale demand was regular and steady throughout last week, but the flower buying public did not begin to order or buy heavily until Saturday morning. By evening the retailers were calling for stock that they had passed up earlier in the day. Prices were fair. The market was tight on Monday of this week but by the end of the week everything will undoubtedly be plentiful again. Roses with the exception of the choice American Beauties sold nicely. All good carnations cleaned up readily. They were not quite as plentiful as usual on Easter. Enough Easter lilies came in to meet every demand. Callas sold readily. Sweet peas were in demand for Easter and all good receipts found a ready sale. Jonquils and daffodils, tulips and hyacinths all sold well. More lily of the valley could have been used had they been forthcoming. Neither orchids nor antirrhinums sold very well. Other offerings were rubrum lilies, primroses and forget-me-nots. Green goods were plentiful and sold well.

NOTES.

Thos. Burnett, the Price Hill florist, died on Sunday, April 4. His family have the sympathy of his friends in their bereavement.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in some very fine roses from Newman & Thomas, Richmond, Ind.

The Cincinnati Florists' Society will hold its regular meeting next Monday evening, April 12.

BIG BUSINESS PLEASES.

Easter, 1915, from all reports was one of the best on record. Growers, wholesalers and retailers appear to be satisfied. Flowers in all varieties brought good prices. Sweet peas were in demand and cleaned out with ease. Good violets were scare, the bulk coming in being small blooms hard to sell, and their keeping qualities were very poor. Lilies were good, callas a little scarce. Yellow jonquils in southern stock were good and sold well at reasonable prices. Narcissus poeticus also was in and sold at $1 per 100. There were quite a few long stem American Beauty roses, but short and medium stems were scarce. The plantsmen cleaned out. Miscellaneous stock, tulips, hyacinths and cinerarias sold well. Fancy ferns were scarce and brought $3 per 1,000. Other greens were in demand and sold well.

NOTES.

Dominic Bova has opened a flower counter in conjunction with a fruit store on Locust street, opposite the Railway Exchange building. He also has a large stock of blooming plants and ferns.

H. G. Berning had a fine supply of cut lilies, carnations, long stem American Beauty roses and all varieties of flowers in season.

EASTER TRADE BEST IN YEARS.

Good weather, good stocks and good business was a combination that kept Wichita florists working and smiling through the Easter rush, although the smile was likely to be a little thin by midnight Saturday, for the florist who had worked straight through the day and night since early Friday morning. While exact figures are not yet available the volume of business is estimated at close to 20 per cent better than last Easter, with prices about as usual for Easter. The plant supply was the heaviest ever and sold accordingly. The supply of lilies was adequate, but sold up close. There was good sale for hydrangeas, rambler roses, azaleas, marguerites, etc. Pelargonium Easter Greeting sold to justify its name. The earliness of Easter was favorable for bulbous stock, which was in heavy supply and sold well as plants, but was not in heavy demand as cut flowers, although daffodils and Murillo tulips sold fairly well. The supply of cut flowers was augmented by shipments of roses and carnations from the wholesale markets, and was generally of good quality and adequate supply although a thinness developed Saturday evening in most lines. Sweet peas and violets were in good crop and cleaned up closely.

NOTES.

The month of March just past was one of the coldest on record, with less than six days of sunny weather and an average temperature of 5 degrees lower than that of February preceding it. It surely kept the florist hustling and guessing to strike right with the Easter stocks.

Easter decorations for churches seem to be growing less elaborate—and less generally in demand. So far, no florist has been heard to complain, for such work takes time and labor that can be more profitably engaged elsewhere during the rush.

BEST EASTER TRADE IN YEARS.

One of the very best Easter trades ever known was enjoyed by the florists in this city. The weather was very satisfactory, with just enough frost in the air to be pleasant. One of the finest stocks ever produced was on sale and there was an abundant supply of every seasonable flower. The demand was heavy, began early, and continued vigorous to the end. If there was one thing more noticeable than another it was rather in the superabundance of the supply over the demand, but there was a great quantity of stock sold. There was such a tremenduous supply that the growers realized the importance of reaching out from the stores and entered the market house with heavily laden wagons from which sales were made and with good results. There was no diminution in the call for flowers, but rather the reverse, but there is no doubt about it many more were grown than sold, and there was almost a glut of flowers. Plants seemed to meet with especial favor, but there was also a good call for cut flowers.

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Co., while exhibiting a most superb stock, attracted attention to its store by an unique conceit composed of its telegraphic orders. A telegraphic instrument was installed in one of his windows with baby ribbon for wires leading up to the different towns and cities from which he had received orders, filling a panel on one side. Beautiful flowers in the window gave emphasis to the idea and the numbers of telegrams—genuine ones—told what a large out of town business the firm had done.

Geny Bros. never had on sale more magnificent stock, nor enjoyed a better trade. Prices too had been very good and they were more than satisfied with the season's business. Their Killarney, both white and pink, and American Beauty roses were very fine, and they sold their entire supply.

McIntyre Bros. grew a tremendous stock and in order to move the greater part of it, had no less than fourteen different selling places and did a very large business. The West End store of this firm has been a great success and they have a never ending stream of trade.

In addition to the regular established floral stores, and their market house contingents, the 5 and 10 cent stores joined in the floral trade. These sales served to help move some of the surplus stock.

Louis H. Haury & Sons had especially fine rhododendrons and hydrangeas in addition to all the other blooming plants. Their business was very satisfactory and their flowers very good.

OBITUARY.

William Weil.

The trade in Chicago was startled to hear on Monday morning, April 5, of the murder of William Weil, a well-known florist, who has conducted a store at 421 West Sixty-third street for a great number of years. The murder was committed early Monday morning and the indications are that the crime was the work of robbers. His body, still warm, was found about 3 o'clock that morning, and that he had fought fiercely for his life and screamed for help before being choked into insensibility, was established by neighbors. When the police reached the scene he was found stretched out on the floor dead, with his hands and feet bound with a hemp rope. A piece of rope had been stuffed into his mouth and down into his throat, but no bullet wound was found, and the police concluded death had been due partly to strangling and partly to shock and fright. The body was fully dressed, which puzzled the police, for they could not explain why the man had been in street or office clothes at the hour of 3 a. m. Indications in the shop, however, pointed clearly to robbery as the motive for the crime. His trunks had been ransacked and his dresser drawers had been searched and left upset. The bedding had been toussled, indicating the supposed robbers hunted for hidden treasures between the mattresses. The cash register in the office had been broken into and rifled and the robbers probably got a good amount of money, the proceeds from heavy Easter sales of flowers. No clue to the guilty party or parties has been discovered, although a neighbor and his family, who notified the police, were arrested on suspicion, but later released. The late Mr. Weil was 55 years of age and was favorably known in Chicago, where by dint of hard work he had built up a well paying business. He was a bachelor and as far as anyone knows had no relatives in this city. What disposition will be made of the property has not been decided on. The authorities are trying to locate his people as early as possible.

Charles Scallen.

Charles Scallen, who eight years ago owned a florist shop in Broadway, New York, killed himself in that city, April 4, by inhaling gas. His suicide was the termination of seven and a half years of misfortune, during which time he met with financial reverses and loss of health. For many years he did a large business, supplying New York hotels and theaters with flowers, and was well known to many prominent actors and actresses and others in that city, but failed. Recently he had been employed as a clerk in a flower shop in Broadway, New York.

Elias G. Stockman.

Elias G. Stockman, 74 years of age, well-known nurseryman and florist, died of ulceration of the stomach at his home, a short distance north of Prospect, O., March 31. He had been in failing health for two years, but had been confined to his bed but a few weeks.

MARTINS FERRY, W. VA.—Davidson Bros. will open a flower shop in the Cropper building, Fifth and Hanover streets.

LAKE HAMILTON, FLA.—H. R. Mosnat is operating 10,000 feet of lath houses here, growing mostly asparagus, violets, carnations, chrysanthemums and roses.

ENGLISH railroads are suspending shipment of nursery stock because of the pressure of government business.

WE are in receipt of the proceedings of the twenty-fourth annual convention of the American Carnation Society, held at Buffalo, N. Y., January 27-28, 1915.

EASTER business for 1915 is said to be about on a level with that of last year, except at Atlantic sea-board points, affected by the snow storm, where there was a considerable falling off. Snow at some eastern points during the holiday period is reported to have reached a depth of 19 inches.

Personal.

Edwin Lonsdale in a recent letter says his health is slowly but gradually improving and feels certain he will eventually be himself again, although it will probably take considerable time. He expects to go to a Los Angeles sanitarium for treatment this month.

C. W. Johnson, of the staff of contributors of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, and well known chrysanthemum and carnation specialist, has been appointed a juror of the Panama-Pacific exposition.

San Diego Celestial.

San Diego, Calif., March 23.—The spring is without question the time to see this beautiful country at its best. The exposition here is an architectural gem in a setting of semi-tropical verdure that could not be duplicated anywhere else in this country. I overheard a lady say the other day at the exposition she was beginning to lose interest in heaven since coming here.

R. J. HAIGHT.

When to Plant.

Inexperienced amateurs are often anxious to plant the first mild day of spring, regardless of cold weather risks, and the florist who sells them the stock serves his own best interest by advising such buyers of the safe dates for the outdoor planting of tender subjects in his locality. Further, it is a good plan to offer for such purpose only stock that has been properly hardened-off, the idea being to make the customer a constant advertiser of his dealer by keeping him pleased with the purchase throughout the season.

Glass Market

The glass market has firmed up a little and the indications are that it will remain so through the spring and summer. At present there is quite a large proportion of the factories manufacturing glass closed down on account of business being below normal, but there is no likelihood of any of them cutting prices during the present fire and the quotations are what may be termed half-way high. Considerable glass has been sold by American manufacturers for export, due principally to the fact that the large factories in Belgium were practically destroyed during the present European conflict.

American Gladiolus Society.

DEPARTMENT OF REGISTRATION.

The nomenclature committee of the American Gladiolus Society has approved the application of John H. Umpleby, Lake View, N. Y., to register Gladiolus Mrs. A. C. Beal.

Mrs. A. C. Beal (Umpleby's 385). Color rosy white, blotched Lincoln red, and with the median line shading to old carmine red. A fine color and an attractive blotch. The buds are quite salmony when they first open. Stamen filaments pinkish. Anthers light lavender. The flowers are well arranged. Bloom large, tube curved medium slender, medium long. Segments unequal, connivent, the upper horizontal and broad, the lower reflexed and narrower. Season early. Spike tall, erect, often curved; two or three to a corm, and producing a good number of flowers. Growth vigorous, well furnished with medium broad leaves. Corms large. Originated by John H. Umpleby, Lake View, N. Y.

Nature's Guide for Garden Planting.

Nature furnishes guides for garden planting which are even more reliable than the calendar, according to the department's garden specialist. The old residents of the soil such as the maple, dogwood, and white oak are the best interpreters of nature's moods in spring, and quickly reflect them, so that the gardener who follows their silent suggestions may arrange the planting of his vegetables accordingly.

When the silver maples begin to put forth their leaves and the "catkins" appear on the willows and poplars, nature is indicating that the season is right for the planting of such vegetables as lettuce, mustard, onion seeds and onion sets, parsley, the round-seeded peas, early Irish potatoes, radishes, spinach, and turnips. This, of course, is provided that the soil is in good order, which can be determined by taking a handful at a depth of 3 or 4 inches from the surface, compact it in the hand by closing the fingers, and if, upon opening them, the ball of earth gradually falls apart, it is ready to be spaded. Manure should then be buried a full spade depth below the surface and the soil should be made fine and compact with an even surface.

Not until about 10 days after nature has set the date for the above-mentioned vegetables should such garden truck as beets, carrots, and kohl-rabi be planted. A second sowing of peas can also be made at this time.

The dogwood and the white oak begin to show signs of awakening at a time when other vegetables may be planted. These include bush and pole beans, sweet corn, cucumbers, muskmelons, watermelons, and various kinds of squash. The gardener and housewife will rarely plant too early if they but wait for nature to tell them what to do.—Dep't of Agri. News-letter.

J. F. Ammann, Mayoralty Candidate.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., vice-president of the American Carnation Society, secretary of the Illinois State Florists' Association, and a leader in civic affairs, has announced he will be a candidate for mayor of Edwardsville on the People's ticket at the election, April 20. Mr. Ammann is a bank director, member of the board of education, and was formerly an alderman in that city.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

I have nearly or complete files of THE AMERICAN FLORIST and other publications for many years back. These are getting so bulky that I have to file them away in such shape that they are not available for reference. I shall be glad to give these to some educational institution or library if sure they will be made available for reference.

Panama-Pacific Exposition Notes.

A good feature for the Sacramento Valley display in the California building would be a number of camellia trees in bloom. The trees could be taken bodily from Sacramento gardens, with sufficient earth about the roots and well boxed, to maintain a succession of flowers for weeks to come. There could be nothing more striking for visitors from the East, or, for that matter, any part of the world.

According to the San Francisco newspapers the attendance in the first twelve days was just a trifle short of 900,000, with receipts of one-half that many dollars. This is a record showing and the situation is the more unique because when the gates opened everything was ready, all debts were paid and there was a surplus in the treasury.

It is anticipated that the attendance from Eastern points will be heaviest in September.

EASTER TRADE A DISAPPOINTMENT.

The Easter business was far from that which was expected. The prospects of a record breaking year were good until Saturday, April 3, when New England was swept with a typical mid-winter blizzard, which tied up traffic and caused Easter shopping to be nearly impossible. Friday, April 2, was a very good day for the growers who brought their goods to the market, but nearly all of those who waited until Saturday had stock left on their hands. The plant trade during the week was very good, nearly every grower being completely sold out. Easter lilies fell off in prices from last year's reciepts, and rambler roses took the lead. Roses were abundant and brought low prices; in fact, many were left over and found no market at all. Carnations were in short crop, nearly every grower having less flowers than in previous years, consequently prices were very good in comparison with the general run of business. Violets were in demand and brought $1 per 100. Sweet peas also sold well at $1.50 and $2 per 100 on the Spencer types. Bulbous stock went very slowly, quantities finding no market whatever. Callas and lily of the valley brought good figures. The retail stores which were fortunate enough to have in a large quantity of orders, aside from difficulties in delivery, did a very good business, but most of the temporary stores, depending almost entirely on transient trade, considered themselves fortunate if they even got their money back on goods purchased. It is generally believed, that if it had not been for the unseasonable weather, that we would have had a record breaking Easter.

NOTES.

One of the few stores reporting an extra good Easter trade is that of Caplen the Florist, on Massachusetts avenue. He stocked heavily and closed out on nearly every line of stock. A. Roper, Jr., of Tewkesbury, acted as manager during the rush days and proved that he thoroughly understands the retail, as well as the wholesale end of the business. Hyman Caplen, Jr. member of this firm will join the ranks of the benedicts, Tuesday, April 13. His many friends in the trade join in wishing him every happiness.

Caroline Ball, of Southboro, Mass., had a fine crop of carnations during Easter week. She has a salmon-pink sport of Beacon that sold very well, as well as a quantity of Enchantress Supreme, which she considers a very profitable flower. Snapdragons Virginia and Phelps White are also grown.

John McFarland, of North Easton, Mass., is very well satisfied with the results of his Easter trade. He had 7,000 pots of Easter lilies, their fine quality making for them a ready market. He also had a good cut of gardenias and disposed of 15,000 lily of the valley.

One of the few carnation growers fortunate to be in full crop for the Easter trade was A. Roper, of Tewkesbury, Mass. Friday and Saturday, April 2-3, he disposed of 17,000 carnations. His new dark pink seedling, Alice Coombs, was by far the best selling variety he had.

Thos. Roland, of Nahant, Mass., sold completely out of his large crop of Easter plants. Rambler roses, French hydrangeas, bougainvilleas, genistas and heaths were his leaders. He had 17,000 roses during the week, Richmond, Ward and Killarney Queen being his best selling varieties.

R. E. Wadsworth, of Northboro, Mass., had a good Easter crop of cut flowers, included in which were carnations, mignonette, sweet peas, snapdragons and callas, all of which were of exceptionally fine quality.

The Budlong Rose Co., of Auburn, R. I., had a very good Easter cut. During the week they disposed of 75,000 roses. Their American Beauties were the best seen in the city, about 500 per day being cut.

Wm. Tailby, of Wellesley, Mass., reports a good Easter trade. He had some very fine spirea plants at his stall at the Boston Co-operative Market, as well as some well grown white snapdragon spikes. F. L. W.

SUPPLY NOT EQUAL TO DEMAND.

Easter this year was a surprise to many florists. Owing to present conditions, no increase in business was prepared for, and none expected over previous years. Consequently the heavy Easter trade was wholly unlooked for. The consensus of opinion, at this writing, is that the Easter trade of 1915 equaled if not far surpassed the Easter business of a year previous. The flowering plants were in fine condition and there were quantities of them, but most florists were either completely sold out, or could have sold almost as many more plants as they had handled. The cut flowers were all of splendid quality, and many more could have been sold had they been available. The variety in blooming plants comprised everything from the huge showy rhododendrons in the pink-pearl varieties to the modest pansy plants. All bulbous stock sold well and brought good returns. Double-tulips were great favorites, and hyacinths did not nearly go round. Easter lilies were notably good this year. They were also plentiful. Madame Shawyer, Russell, Killarney, Sunburst and Ward roses were fine sellers. Carnations were of good quality and antirrhinums were excellent. There was no end to the variety of flowers in demand for corsages. Violets were all sold out Saturday morning and pansies were used effectively in corsage work.

NOTES.

Plant baskets and the new geranium, Easter Greeting, which is darker than the Martha Washington and of the pelargonium variety, were features of the Easter business at the Bradley Flower Shop.

W. J. and M. S. Vesey report the wholesale trade unusually heavy, surpassing that of last Easter in volume in cut flowers. Their orchids, gardenias and roses were especially good.

The retail florists' reports concerning the Easter trade are all very favorable. The majority report a fine plant business and a heavy demand for cut flowers and for corsage work.

At the Flick Floral Company's store, the force worked all night filling cut flower orders. Their sale of the large stock of select plants was exceedingly heavy.

Miss Catherine Vesey has returned to Oxford college, Glendale, O., after spending the spring holidays with her father, Judge W. J. Vesey, and family.

Miss Doswell, of the Doswell Floral Co., says their lilies were finer than ever before. They disposed of 500 of these in two days' time.

The Anger Flower Shop had a good sale on large plants, and their trade demanded the finer flowers for corsages.

Floral Publicity

We Specialize In High Grade Effective Direct Advertising

Increasing Florists' Sales

Up to within the last few years a great majority of florists did very little advertising. At best they used newspaper space for special occasions or printed circulars and dodgers, such as are used by butchers and grocers and the general run of small retail stores.

But conditions have changed in the retail floral business just as in every other line. Progressive florists are creating an ever-growing demand for flowers through judicious advertising. People in your city or in your community will buy flowers more often if the thought of flowers is kept constantly in their minds.

Realizing that the florist is selling a product that appeals to the love for the beautiful in every one, we determined to make our Florist folders the most beautiful and artistic advertisements possible to produce—make them fully in keeping with the high character of the business they represent and at the same time to give them the strongest possible advertising and selling punch.

We change the reading matter on all folder issues to meet your particular requirements. In this way you can quote prices or list stock that you have in large quantities and that you are anxious to dispose of.

The proper way to use these folders is to make a list of your present customers and then take your telephone book or city directory, or other sources of information you have at hand, and make a list of those people who should be your customers. Mail to each one of them one of these folders under 1 cent postage.

Your use of our Folder Service will bring you larger orders from your old customers, create new customers and more firmly establish your prestige in your city. You go right into the homes of those you want to reach.

GOOD EASTER TRADE.

The Easter trade this year was fairly good, everything considered, but was not quite up to that of last year, and the general report of the wholesalers is that the total sales were about 10 to 15 per cent less. Stock was not as plentiful as last year by about one-third, but prices were much better and held quite firm at the figures advertised. The shipping trade was very good, but the local demand was not as heavy as it might have been. Roses of all kinds sold well at good prices, especially in the longer grades, but carnations took a slump on Friday, April 2, which was due not to the fact that they were in oversupply, but because a large quantity of pickled stock was dumped in the market then, which met the same fate that it did in former years, and it is surprising that the grower should hold this stock back when it could have been sold early in the week, when it was in good condition, at good prices. As it was, this stock was sold at very low prices, but good, fresh carnations cleaned up nicely at very satisfactory figures. American Beauty roses were scarce, as the writer predicted they would be in the market report the past few weeks, and lilies also cleaned up nicely at good prices, considering the large supply offered. Violets did not sell as well as they might, although home-grown singles were in good demand and brought fair prices. Sweet peas were very plentiful and sold well, but prices might have been somewhat better. Orchids sold well and cleaned up at an early hour, and the same holds good for gardenias. Bulbous stock was in good supply and sold well, especially tulips and jonquils. Southern jonquils were seen in large supply everywhere, but did not sell any too well. The retail florists report a good Easter trade, but in most cases nearly all of them missed their best customers this year and attribute this to the fact that nearly all of them are attending the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco, Calif. As an example one florist says: "Mrs. ——— is usually good every Easter for $300 or $400 worth of cut flowers and plants, but this year she is at the exposition and consequently no one got her order." This year prices were cut practically in half and a plant that usually sold for $10 and $15 brought only $5 and $8; but taken all in all the retail florists enjoyed about the same amount of business as they did last year, but had to handle twice the amount of stock to do so. The wholesale plantsmen sold out completely in all lines, and the fact that all the local florists dealt heavily in plants and because the demand did not set in until late in the week, none of them bought many cut flowers, but pushed plants instead; otherwise the market would have cleaned up completely. But taken all in all, everyone should be well satisfied, considering the unusually dull season experienced.

NOTES.

A. E. Turner of Rosin & Turner, Mosinee, Wis., is in the city booking orders for ferns known as snow birds, which they will start picking soon.

Miller & Musser are now prepared to fill all orders for cut flowers and greens at their new store at 179 North Wabash avenue, where they opened for business last week. Nicholas P. Miller needs no introduction to the trade, for he has been employed in the local market for a great number of years, and his partner, D. T. Musser, has conducted several retail shoe stores in the past. The new firm has a nice line of stock to offer, and some very choice sweet peas from the Frank Felke range at Gross Point is the leader this week.

Mrs. Irene Williams used inexperienced help at the Atlas Floral Co.'s store as far as the salesladies were concerned, and was pleased with the result, for they handled the trade nicely and her Easter business was very satisfactory. Herbert Stone's window displays are as big a drawing card at this store as ever and he evidently is a firm believer in the old saying that "variety is the spice of life," for he arranges them accordingly.

The John C. Moninger Co. has received several nice orders through its office at Cincinnati, O., one of which calls for two semi-iron frame houses, 35x200 feet, for Marion Bros., of Circleville, O.

Wm. F. Schofield, the North State street florist, had a large decoration at Righeimer's buffet last week, in which he used quite a good supply of cut flowers and many pot lilies. The Easter trade at his store was good and the principal offerings were lilies, azaleas and spireas in plants, and practically everything in cut flowers. Henry Dunn, who is the proprietor's right hand assistant, looks after the store, which is always kept as clean as "spotless town."

The Chicago Florists' Club will meet at the Hotel Bismarck Thursday, April 8, at 8 p. m., when the committee on affiliation will submit an important report to be acted upon at this meeting. Chairman Fink, of the good-of-the-club committee, announces that arrangements have been made for an illustrated lecture on a "Trip to San Francisco and the Exposition." Lunch and refreshments will be served enroute.

The McNeff-Swenson Co., 220 South Michigan avenue, is having a brisk demand for their Spring Planting, Mothers' Day and Memorial Day folders, which are becoming more and more in favor each day with the retail florists. Many of the customers have increased their orders to nearly double the original number because the returns have been so splendid.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. had a good Easter business and the sales on Thursday, April 1, were $1 larger than they were for Thursday of Easter week last year. Friday was a better day by far, but the sales on Saturday were not as good as last year, but on the whole Mr. Vaughan is more than satisfied with last week's business.

Erne & Klingel were so busy last week filling Easter orders that Fred Klingel, who looks after affairs in the office, was called upon to lend Chas. Erne a hand in the shipping department. "Our Easter trade was very good," is the way Mr. Erne expressed himself when he was asked how business was.

At a meeting of the Retail Florist Co. held on Monday, April 5, the following officers were elected: George Stollery, president; George Walther, vice-president; and H. H. Wilkerson, secretary and treasurer. The company now has a permanent office in room 510 in the Fairbanks building.

The E. C. Amling Co. is located at 174-176 North Wabash avenue, instead of the numbers previously given. The firm was so busy moving into its handsome new quarters that it selected the numbers that looked best, but really should be those given above.

The Garland Mfg. Co. of Des Plaines is turning out an attachment for printing presses for the Queen City Ink Co., in addition to sash weights for another concern, which it has been manufacturing in large quantities the past few months.

Zech & Mann are still handling fancy sweet peas in large quantities, but are finding a ready market for all that they have to offer. The Easter trade at this house was very brisk and the demand for sweet peas was exceptionally heavy.

Tim Matchen had a splendid Easter trade at both his stores in Indiana Harbor and East Chicago. Mrs. Matchen likes the florist business first-rate and manages one of the stores.

Edwin Mullinson, with Chas. Samuelson, recently visited his friend Archie McDonald, at Milwaukee, Wis., where he is in charge of the flower stand at Gimbel Bros.' department store.

John Kruchten disposed of all his lily plants as well as all the cut lilies that he had to offer for Easter, which is doing fine, considering the large quantity of both that he handled.

George Perdikas is well pleased with his Easter business at all of his three loop stores and has every reason to be, for he sold out completely in plants as well as cut flowers.

Wm. Lubliner says his Easter trade at his South Wabash avenue store was splendid and that he had about all the orders that he could conveniently handle.

The Cook County Florists' Association will hold a special meeting at the Hotel Bismarck, West Randolph street, on Thursday, April 8, at 8 p. m.

M. C. Gunterberg disposed of all of her violets at Easter at good prices and could have sold much more stock if it was available.

ANNOUNCEMENT

IT is with pleasure that we announce the opening of our new wholesale store at 179 181-183 North Wabash Avenue, where we are now ready with a complete line of seasonable Cut Flowers and Green Goods to fill all the orders that may be entrusted to our care. Mr. Nicholas P. Miller, senior member of the firm needs no introduction to the trade, for he has been identified with the wholesale cut flower business in the Chicago Market for a great number of years, which alone is a sufficient guarantee that all orders will be given prompt attention and filled in such a way that will merit your future patronage. A cordial invitation is extended to everyone to visit our establishment and inspect our stock, which you will find compares favorably in price and quality to what the Chicago Market usually affords. A trial order is all that we ask. Why not give it to us now?

NOTICE TO GROWERS

While we are receiving a good supply of stock in general we can use still more to good advantage and invite you to consign a portion or all of your output to us. Roses and Carnations are particularly desired, but everything seasonable is needed, so if you feel inclined to give us a show send in a shipment immediately. Louis Wittbold says that the George Wittbold Co. has another large job at the Federal League baseball park, which is now being enlarged and will call for considerable grading and sodding. The Wittbold Co. had the original order for laying out the grounds and did the work so well that Charlie Weeghman and his associates did not hesitate a moment in giving them the second order when it was decided upon that the present grounds were far too small. Mr. Emitslof of their firm left this week for Huntington, Ind., to superintend some work along the same line for a large corporation located there.

Ant. C. Zvolanek, of Lompoc, Calif., called on several of the leading sweet pea growers in this vicinity, leaving for Denver, Colo., on Friday, April 2. He has come to the conclusion that a dozen good varieties of sweet peas are all that are necessary and will select the best ones, and his visit here was more on a tour of inspection than anything else. His exhibit at the San Diego, Calif., exposition is a big advertisement and is well worth a visit.

Prices As Low As Others.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. enjoyed a splendid Easter trade in all departments of its business this year and are pretty well satisfied with the outcome. At the greenhouses Tony Gabel and his men are busy potting up 200,000 carnations and the report is that the variety Philadelphia has made good and will be grown on a larger scale than ever this season. Enchantress will not be grown as heavily, but Wm. Akehurst will be given considerable bench space. In the plant department orders are now being booked for American Beauty rose plants in 5 and 6 inch pots, which will be in full bloom the latter part of this month. There has been such a big call for these in former years that several thousand have been potted up to accommodate their customers.

H. Van Gelder, president of the firm of Percy Jones, is a member of the Chicago Business Men's Prosperity Club, which has a membership of about 150 and which is quite large when one considers that each line of business can only be represented by one member. The club meets at luncheon every week at the new Morrison Hotel, where many a pleasant hour is spent. In speaking of the Easter trade the report at Percy Jones' store is that business was good and compared most favorably with last year.

H. R. Hughes has made arrangements with Poehlmann Bros. Co. to handle the Hughes' Mothers' day box exclusively in the future. T. E. Waters, who has charge of Poehlmann's supply department, will be pleased to furnish the supply houses with stock along lines that will be agreable to both. As Mothers' day is rapidly approaching no time should be lost if one intends to feature this article this year.

Wietor Bros. had a good Easter business and N. J. Wietor was pretty well satisfied with the sales the past week and states that roses in general sold better than they did at Christmas. Carnations of fine quality are arriving in large quantities at this store and clean up nicely each day. The demand for young rose stock is very brisk and shipments are going out each day.

Felix Reichling celebrated his first anniversary as manager at Peter Reinberg's store with one of the best Easter records that his firm has ever enjoyed. He has successfully passed through all the holidays and likes his position better and better each day. The firm he represents is cutting from a large crop of My Maryland roses of fine quality.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. celebrated their first Easter as wholesale florists with a fine business, both local and shipping. Roses and carnations are the principal offerings at this store now and fine stock in both lines is to be seen. H. E. Philpott, who is president of the firm, expects to leave for his home in Winnipeg, Can., the latter part of this week.

Bassett & Washburn had a very heavy shipping trade Easter week and a nice large supply of stock to supply their customers with. Mr. Washburn was satisfied with the amount of business done and remarks that all their own roses and carnations cleaned up at an early hour at good prices.

The two leading morning daily newspapers on Friday, April 2, carried large display advertisements for the Fleischman Floral Co., George Wittbold Co., George Wienhoeber, Ernst Wienhoeber Co., Mangel the Palmer House Florist, August Lange and Schiller the Florist.

Phil. Schupp says that J. A. Budlong's Easter trade was much better than last year and attributes this to the heavy crop of roses that his firm cut last week. The shipping trade was unusually brisk at this establishment and the local trade was also quite good.

The trade was greatly startled to read in the Monday morning papers of the murder of William Weil, the well-known florist, at 421 West Sixty-third street, an account of which will be found in the obituary column.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association cleaned up quickly in American Beauty roses last week at good prices. The stock they are offering is unusually fine, as are the Killarney and White Killarney roses.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is having a new sidewalk built in front of their store, which will give more light to the basement underneath and which gives more space for its cut flower department.

Kyle & Foerster report a good Easter business which was fully as good as that of last year. Sweet peas are still being offered in large supply at this store.

Mrs. Frank Calvert, formerly of Lake Forest, died at Riverside, Calif., March 31, upwards of 80 years of age.

EASTER TRADE SURPASSES PREVIOUS YEARS.

Easter trade was by unanimous consent the greatest in volume, and most satisfactory in all respects, ever before enjoyed by the local trade. The entire week, up to Saturday, April 3, was unseasonably cold, and indicated unfavorably for the great event; but the clouds passed and the sun became strong by shopping time on Saturday, even though the air was still cold. All other conditions, too, were right for a big trade, and when Sunday noon approached everyone could say the trade was great and the people had been served with greater promptness and with a greater variety of flowers, selected from the largest stock ever displayed by Detroit florists. It was unquestionably a plant Easter, and little is the wonder for that, as the pot plants were never before seen in such splendid condition. The cool weather enabled the growers to properly time bulbous stock to the hour and no soft and overripe stock was to be seen. Everywhere it was manifest that the lily was in the lead in popularity, closely followed by azaleas in the higher-priced plants, while roses, spireas and hydrangeas completed the list of the ever popular plants. The threatened shortage of azaleas did not at the last hour develop, as many were brought in from distant points to add to the local growers' stock, and the result was an over-stock seen in some stores. In cut flowers those varieties used and most suitable for corsages sold best. Violets that were in good condition sold well, as did lily of the valley and sweet peas. High-grade roses moved rather slowly, but the stock of these was fortunately limited and no surplus was evident. Bulbous stock sold well, except perhaps the one item of daffodils, though great quantities were disposed of. American Beauty roses were not in great demand, nor was the stock on hand very heavy. Basket effects were, as heretofore, popular, but some dealers had too many for the demand. There was no distinct call for Boston ferns, though quite a few were sold. In closely analyzing the result of the big trade it might be said that the call was for moderately priced articles as compared with the same event a year ago, when prices ruled a few degrees higher.

NOTES.

The L. Bemb Floral Co. showed some beautiful bougainvilleas, and they sold readily, as did some magnificent hydrangeas, the latter grown by Aug. Von Boeselager, Mt. Clemens, Mich.

E. A. Fetters experienced his first Easter in his large Woodward avenue store, and its advantages were keenly appreciated in the unprecedented rush.

The Schroeter-Stahelin Co. is highly pleased with their first Easter business, which put their forces and delivery facilities to a severe test.

B. Schroeter had a splendid stock of rhodendrons and lilacs and his plant basket effects were strikingly beautiful and sold well.

John Breitmeyers Son's new Park store opened in time for the Easter trade and did a big business in high-grade goods.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange reports having done the largest Easter business in its history covering a similar period.

BLIZZARD KILLS EASTER BUSINESS.

The feature of the Easter business was the fierce blizzard that struck the city with tremendous force on Saturday, April 3. The weather during the entire week had been cool, but bright, splendid for holding stock and there had been good and increasing business as the time drew near. The store men, the street dealers and the cemetery florists were all stocked up and in every way prepared for the grand rush. Then on Saturday morning came the knockout blow. The day opened cloudy, the temperature began to fall and all at once the air seemed full of snow. "Oh, its just a flurry, it will soon be over," was the wish and remark of many, but it grew steadily worse, developing into a veritable blizzard of thick, sticky snow that covered the ground to a depth of one foot on the level, and in some places drifted into piles three feet high and over. It was not safe to be on the streets; the air was so full of snow, one could scarcely see across the way. The street car and automobile service was quickly tied up and horses were soon exhausted. Such a storm was never before experienced here at this time of year and the effect on business was disastrous. The stores in the center of the city, with their regular clientele, while being greatly handicapped, managed with their resources to get along, and in summing up afterwards are fairly well satisfied with their business. The other classes of trade, the street dealers, the extra store men and those who depend on the cemetery visitors, suffered almost a total loss, as there was little or no business after the storm set in. In the center of the city, the wide pavements of the city hall held immense stocks of plants, which the dealers quickly rushed into the corridors, which afforded a sort of protection, but most of the stock was ruined. This was the case all over the city — everywhere the loss was great. If protected in stores, stock stood waiting for customers and is there yet, if not thrown out, as Easter stock is very hard to sell after the day is past. Towards noon on Sunday it cleared off, the sun came out and helped a little. A few sought the cemeteries, but with a foot of snow on the ground, the task was too great for most of them, so the dealers there lost out. It is a serious blow to the men of small capital, and felt to a greater or less extent by the entire trade. But for the storm, it is the opinion of good judges that this would have been a record breaking Easter in the volume of business. A more detailed account of the features of the trade will be given next week when the outlying districts are heard from. K.

WASHINGTON, PA.—McCallum & Co. of Pittsburgh, have filed a suit against B. W. Spragg, florist, of Washington, to recover the sum of $698.34, with interest upon $400 from October 22, 1913, and upon $298.34, from October 23, 1913. This sum is alleged due on a certain promissory note, given as security for certain merchandise sold and delivered to the defendant.

EASTER BUSINESS EXCELLENT.

The local florists, both retail and wholesale, were more than pleased with the Easter trade, and there was plenty of stock to fill all orders, with the exception of red roses, which were rather scarce. All stock sold fine and brought good prices. Lilies were scarce on Thursday and Friday, but Saturday there were plenty to fill all orders, short stock being a drug on the market, owing to late arrival.

NOTES.

Gust. Rusch & Co. received heavy consignments from the Cudahy Floral Co., in all varieties of roses, and were right on crop with long American Beauties, which find ready sale. This firm reports business excellent, showing a great increase in sales over all previous years.

Harry Mann, with Gust Rusch & Co., has the sympathy of the entire trade, in the loss of his wife, which occurred Thursday, March 25, after an illness of three months. The floral pieces were many and beautiful.

C. C. Pollworth Co.'s greenhouses looked rather desolate after filling their large plant orders, and were practically all cleaned out. This firm also reports a fine cut flower trade.

Mrs. Baumgarten became very ill during the Easter rush with a very severe attack of appendicitis and will have to undergo an operation in the near future.

One of the most unique bodies for a delivery auto is being shown by A. Dettman & Son, and is certainly a fine looking affair.

EASTER STOCK CLEANS UP EARLY.

The Easter business was splendid; everything sold out clean, and every florist is extremely well satisfied. We were favored with exceptionally fine weather, and stock arrived in fine shape as a rule. Previous experience has made buyers careful, so purchase of cut flowers from northern wholesale centers was done conservatively, consequently cut flowers were cleaned out quite early in the game and many more could have been sold had they been obtainable, particularly was this noticed in the call for carnations. Prices varied very little, if any, from those of former years. It is encouraging to report the growing demand for flowering plants; there was a big demand for all available kinds. Lilies perhaps, were the most in favor, and of these an unusual quantity had been grown by local men. Roses of medium grades were good sellers, as also were hydrangeas, tulips, hyacinths and the various types of narcissi. Spireas are losing favor as an Easter plant and have to be considered now as among the very cheapest, and yet well grown pelargoniums and primroses in five inch pots moved much better than the spireas.

NOTES.

Lon Foster, of Furrow & Company, said: "We had a splendid trade. It far exceeded our expectations. We bought rather carefully and sold everything out early."

George Stiles, of the Stiles Co., said: "We certainly had a great trade; everything gone except a few odds and ends in plants, not a cut flower left."

Wm. Bofinger, of Barteldes Co., said trade was three times better than expected; everything sold, and could have sold more.

A DISASTROUS SNOW STORM.

A very heavy fall of snow April 3 made Easter business unsatisfactory, particularly to the cut flower men. It was such a day that few people cared to be out unless compelled to be, and it is well known what such weather does for the cut flower markets. Nearly everything in the line of cut flowers went cheap. There were some good orchids that sold up to 75 cents and $1 each. The best lilies did not go above eight cents and there was inferior stock that went much cheaper. On Easter morning it was stated that special American Beauty roses could be bought for $8 and $10 per 100. There was a surplus of all roses. Earlier in the week white carnations sold up to $4 and $5 per 100, but the storm came just at a time when the cut flower men expected business and their hopes were dashed. So far as we can learn the trade in plants was fair, particularly with the larger stores. It was a plant season whatever way you look at it. The plants were never better, in fact we doubt if they were ever before so good. Azaleas, roses in variety, Acacia paradoxa, genistas, the heathers and a variety of other plants were all seen in their perfection. Chas. Thorley is reported as saying, "It is the most peculiar Easter I have known in the business. It was as if a bomb or a siege gun had been fired through buildings and brought ruin. Of course, it appears now, the war and hard times helped, but I attribute a large part of it to the storm."

AT THE RETAIL STORES.

At the store of J. H. Small & Sons we noted a very fine line of plant stock. Particularly noteworthy were pink hydrangeas grown in their own range at Washington, D. C. It was stated by Albert Small that business had been satisfactory.

G. E. M. Stumpp had an exceptionally fine stock of plants and plant combinations and sold out well. At this store we noted rose novelties trained as battleships, aeroplanes, etc.

C. A. Dards had a very fine stock of plants and sold out well. Azaleas, Acacia paradoxa, roses and hydrangeas were very noteworthy at this store.

The old and reliable house of Alexander McConnell, as usual, came to the front with a great stock of fine plants. Business was good at this store.

At the store of Thos. F. Galvin, Inc., there were very fine and well flowered azaleas, bougainvilleas, genistas, roses and much other fine stock.

The clever and industrious Max Schling was as usual on the job with a large force of assistants and a fine stock and sold out well.

John B. Nugent, Jr., of Young & Nugent, who has recently made great improvements in his store, states it was the best Easter business he ever had.

Thorley's House of Flowers, was very gay with the best plants the greenhouses could supply.

NOTES.

Richard Scommadau, who for 34 years has conducted a retail store at Thirty-fourth street and Eighth avenue, has removed to a much better location, 485 Eighth avenue. Mr. Scommadau has an interesting history in the flower trade of this city. A native of Saxony, he was brought to this country by his parents when four years old. His father for many years grew flowers at what is now Union Hill, N. J. In 1859 Richard started in business at the old Hoboken Ferry house on West street and also at Twenty-fifth street and Eighth avenue. Among those who in the past have worked for him were "Big Bill" Devery, later a chief of police of New York, and the late Emil Le Moult. Though now well advanced in years he is yet active. The business is largely conduct by a son, Alexander, and a daughter, Matilda. Herman, the youngest son, holds a responsible position with A. L. Young & Co. of Twenty-eighth street.

Morris Fuld lectured on the "Annual Flower Garden" at the Craftsman building, April 6. His audience was largely ladies, seeking information on gardening. His talk was mainly for the benefit of amateurs, with instructions as to sowing and planting.

Chas. Scallen, well known as a prosperous Broadway florist for many years, ended a long struggle with misfortune and illness, Easter Sunday, by inhaling gas at his room, 300 West Fifty-first street. For further details see obituary.

The Tuxedo park bowling team will roll a match game with the New York Florists' Club team on the Tuxedo park alleys on the night of April 14. A return game will be rolled at Thum's alleys, New York, at a later date.

The Easter flower show at Union Square which usually brings in $20,000 to $40,000, had to be abandoned on account of the snow storm.

Mrs. John B. Nugent, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia, is now believed to be out of danger.

EASTER BUSINESS WAS GOOD.

Easter may be a good plant day, but it certainly was a good cut flower day also. The weather locally was ideal on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, after about three days of more or less snow and slush. Violets, lily of the valley, maidenhair fern, Aaron Ward roses, and other corsage accessories were in big demand, and the usual Easter parade was a procession of hats and flowers. Carnations, especially in the lighter colors, were in good demand. Pink and White Killarney had a good call, but long stock was scarce; plenty of short stemmed stock was on the market, but the week of dark weather left the Killarneys rather pale in color, and not quite up to their usual quality at this season of the year, also the crop was not as big as had been expected. Snapdragon was quite plentiful and in good demand. Sweet peas, although quite plentiful, were far short of the call and pansies too sold up early. Bulbous stock as usual was more than plentiful, and although much was sold, quantities remained unsold. Easter lilies were equal to a big demand. Red roses and American Beauties were scarce, with some wholesalers. Orchids were short of the demand. String smilax met with ready

NOTES.

One of the most beautiful decorations seen in any Catholic church in Cleveland graced St. Joseph's altar in St. John's cathedral, in honor of the Holy Thursday repository services. At the top of the arch, white wistaria was used, emblematic of eternity, while on the sides were white marguerites, symbolic of peace and purity. The inner decorations were composed of pink and white Killarney. The Jones & Russell Co. executed the work.

Miss Francis Graham, daughter of C. J. Graham, 12,349 Euclid avenue, of the firm of Graham & Son, was married on February 24, to Carl Brandes, export sales manager for the Firestone Co., of Akron, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Brandes are making their home in Akron, where Brandes has amassed a fortune in rubber stocks.

"Billy" Merkel, of Merkel & Son, Mentor, Ohio, was the busy boy the past week, Merkel & Son being the largest growers of plants in this section.

Ant. C. Zvolanek, of Lompoc, Calif., originator of the winter flowering sweet peas, was a visitor here, Tuesday, March 30.

Mrs. Geo. W. Smith, president of the Women's Florist Club, has been quite ill for some time, being confined to her bed. J.

BUSINESS HEAVY AND PRICES GOOD.

There has been a good supply of all kinds of cut flowers for the past week. The only shortage noticeable has been in violets, orchids and long-stemmed American Beauties. Everything sold out at good prices, except bulbs, which sold from $2 to $3. Carnations brought $3 to $5, roses $4 to $10, violets 75 cents to $1.50, lilies $6 to $12.50. The retailers had a very nice Easter business. Plants of all kinds sold out at good prices and the demand for cut flowers was also good, but most of the dealers say they did not move the quantity of cut flowers they expected to, as they found most of their customers wanted plants. The weather was fine Saturday, and Easter Sunday was an ideal day, which made the cut-flower trade brisk, and the call for corsage extra good. P. C. H.

The Seed Trade

Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif., President; J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., First Vice-President; E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer; S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O., Assistant Secretary.

Thirty-Third annual meeting, San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, 1915.

VISITED CHICAGO: N. B. Keeney, of N. B. Keeney & Son, LeRoy, N. Y.

BALTIMORE, MD.—W. H. Grenell, Pierrepont Manor, N. Y., called on the trade here last week.

BARRON, WIS.—A potato growers' association has been formed here with twenty-eight members.

ONION SETS at Chicago are selling around $1 per bushel for red and yellow, whites 15 cents higher, demand light.

SALLISAW, OKLA.—L. C. McNabb, C. M. Gay and J. F. Romans have incorporated the Farmers' Grain & Seed Co. The capital stock is $8,000.

FRENCH reports of March 16 indicate that the Syndicate for Defense of the Growers (Producteurs) will meet May 1 for fixing prices on French bulbs.

F. C. HEINNEMAN, of Erfurt, Germany, reports retail seed business excellent, especially vegetables. He says the demand for seed potatoes was 50 times greater than the supply.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Fire completely destroyed the premises of Hardin, Hamilton & Lewman, onion set operators, the night of April 1. The building contained about 2,000 bushels of onion sets.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade April 1 were as follows: Timothy, $5.25 to $6.75 per 100 pounds.—Jas. J. Budlong and wife are visiting the two California expositions.

GERMAN horticultural papers are advocating greatly extended cultivation of vegetables this season, giving considerable space to directions for starting the seeds and sprouting potatoes in hotbeds, etc.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. — Northrup, King & Co. say trade for the month of March compares favorably with other seasons. The weather conditions in the northwest are backward and they anticipate a late season, which will insure a larger business for April.

SPRINGFIELD, MO. — Three thousand packages of garden seeds will be distributed by the Springfield Seed Co., to the poor of this city, who cannot afford to purchase seeds and who have a plot of ground in the rear of their homes that can be converted into a garden.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The fortieth anniversary of the establishment of Currie Bros. Company, seedsmen and florists, occurred April 1. While no formal celebration was planned the anniversary marked the consolidation of the concern's seed and cut flower business at 384 East Water street.

THE annual corn crop of Iowa is said to be worth more than the annual yield of either iron ore, anthracite coal, petroleum products, or the products of all the gold, silver or copper mines of the United States.

BOSTON, MASS.—The Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. reports that business shows a great increase over any previous year, and attribute this largely to the exceptionally pleasant weather they have had all through the month of March, not a single stormy day.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—George P. Pilling & Son Co., of this city, well known manufacturers of poultry and cattle instruments, have taken over the patent of the Unique hedge trimmers, formerly made by the Fountain Cutlery Co. and will engage in their manufacture.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—There is now an unusually heavy demand for all kinds of field seeds, especially seed corn, according to Henry Rankin, of McKay, Reece & Co.—J. R. Peay & Co. report a very heavy demand for seed corn, peas, millet and sorghum, which indicates that farmers are preparing for large crops.

MADISON, WIS.—With the prospective supply of sugar beet seed from Europe, America's chief source of supply, cut off by the war, the University of Wisconsin college of agriculture is trying to provide sufficient seed at least for Wisconsin growers. It will, however, be two years before sufficient can be provided to aid with commercial quantities.

Grass Seed Analyses.

The weekly news letter to crop correspondents, Vol. II, No. 34, of the department of agriculture, dated March 31, contains reports on samples of Kentucky blue grass and orchard grass analyzed by the department during the year just closed. Contrary to the usual custom of the department no record is supplied of the examination by the department of other seeds. Of the 453 samples of Kentucky blue grass examined only 19 were found adulterated or misbranded and of the 404 samples of orchard grass examined only 42 were found to be adulterated or misbranded.

The government reports that the following seed laboratories are maintained through the co-operation of the department, located as follows: Columbus, Mo., Baton Rouge, La., Corvallis, Ore., LaFayette, Ind., and Berkeley, Calif.

Wm. A. Taylor is the present chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry.

Seed Law Bill in West Virginia.

From the many bills for a seed law introduced into the West Virginia legislature the house committee on agriculture has selected that of Delegate Herseman. This provides that all packages of agricultural seeds exceeding one pound weight must be labeled to show the name and variety of seed, name of seedsman, statement of purity and germinating power and locality where grown; that no agricultural seeds shall contain greater proportion of noxious weed than one in 3,000. Enforcement is placed in the hands of the commissioner of agriculture, who must be given access to all places in order to make inspection.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, April 6.—Mushrooms, 55 to 60 cents per pound; lettuce, 12½ cents per box; radishes, 35 cents to 60 cents per dozen bunches; asparagus, $1.00 per dozen bunches; celery, 12 stalks, 25 cents; cucumbers, $1.00 to $1.50 per dozen.

New York, April 6. — Cucumbers, $1.00 to $1.25 per dozen; mushrooms, 75 cents to $1.75 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 20 cents to 25 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $3.00. Lettuce, per dozen, 10 cents to 40 cents.

Strawberries Destroyed by Frost.

Washington, D. C., April 1.—Reports received by the office of markets and rural organization, of the department of agriculture from the Louisiana district, which shipped over 1,300 carloads of strawberries in 1914, indicate that the frost of March 21 destroyed three-fourths of the crop already set and will probably reduce the expected shipments of 2,000 cars by about one-fourth. The plants are setting another crop, but heavy shipments will be delayed for two weeks. Reports from the Carolinas, central Alabama, and Arkansas indicate no damage, but crop two weeks late.

The Seed Situation.

The seed situation is at least not normal. That is certain, and it will be less normal next season, as at the beginning of the war large stocks of seeds existed in Europe and in this country. Production in Europe will be greatly disturbed this season, which will be felt next season. We can commence right now to protect ourselves to some extent. We have purchased more seed than we need this summer for several seasons. In the first place, we expected to get some bad lots, and in the second place, we wish to carry over some of the best stock for next year. We have subjected all seeds received to severe and, in some cases, repeated trials and have run across a very weak lot of Scarlet Globe radishes—germination 25 per cent and very slow. This lot comes from a very prominent firm. As radishes form a great specialty with us, this test avoids a possible loss. On the other hand we received a remarkably vigorous strain of Golden Self-Bleaching celery and we will save most of that for use next year, using a small lot only for field trials. As a further protection, we removed a fine lot of selected Golden Self-Bleaching celery from the fields in November and planted them in a cool greenhouse and will attempt to produce our own seed. At present the plants are running to seed and very promising. Many stocks of seeds are first subjected to field trials and sold the second year by our seedsmen. The gardener can do the same, and thereby avoid much uncertainty. In testing seeds for germination one should remember that most seeds respond much better near to the natural season than in off months; in other words, a better stand is obtained in April than in December. At times several trials are needed to determine exact status; also, a satisfactory temperature must be provided. Such hardy seeds as lettuce, spinach, radish, beets, etc., should be tried in a low temperature corresponding with their nature, while heat-loving subjects must go into a warm place. A soil test is always more reliable than a "wet cloth" test. MARKETMAN.

Seasonable Notes.

It has been said, and most truthfully, that the gardener who could do all his work at exactly the right moment, would be a happy and successful man. There is for all work, a right and a wrong time; however, to hit the right time is quite another story as the obstacles are great. Successful market gardening requires foresight and action to a high degree. There is no surer road to success than to push operations whenever possible, far beyond actual needs at times. The old adage—"Never put off till tomorrow, what you can do today"—applies to our business exactly. Gardening means to operate with the weather and not against it, and what pranks the weather plays, we all know. A good gardener should be a fair judge of the weather, at least for a day or two ahead, and lately the weather service of the government is a decided help. Warned 24 hours ahead often saves us from serious trouble and losses.

We have just passed through an extra ordinary month of March—probably the coldest March on record in many years. With us there has been no snow or rain—plenty of sunshine and cold nights. The average night temperature must have been below 20°. We have never before seen the ground dry off nicer than this year; hence, we pushed the one thing that we could do—the plowing. With no frost underneath, the light crust could be broken readily and plowing was pushed until the first days in April finds the plowing practically done, which is a new record. We fully expect to run into a wet April and may not be able to plow again for a month—we have seen such cases. We have all the hardy seeds, such as onion, beet, carrot, parsley, radish, lettuce, etc., planted and the lands for cabbage, cauliflower and lettuce plants ready the moment the temperature rises. An examination shows most of the seeds sprouted and ready to push through as soon as freezing stops.

Such lands as we do not need for a long time to come, we roll with a heavy two-horse roller immediately after plowing, and in that condition the land can remain for a long time. It is in fine shape to receive rain, we can run over it with a lime spreader, a fertilizer drill, or manure spreader, and when the time is at hand, a cut-away disc harrow speedily reduces it for planting. Unplowed lands in the spring readily lose their subsoil moisture in hot windy weather; hence, rapid plowing is advisable whenever the weather permits. MARKETMAN.

New Orleans Horticultural Society.

The preliminary programme for a spring flower show to be held May 6-9 in Lafayette square, under the auspices of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, was arranged at a special meeting of the members of the society, March 29. President Chopin, who presided at the meeting, said a committee was prepared to report on the expense anticipated.

J. Steckler said Commissioner Lafaye had told the committee the society could have any part of Lafayette square for the show. He added that if there were any profits derived from the show the amount over the expense would be turned over to the women of the civic leagues of the various wards of the city pro rata, to be used in a plan for beautifying the city. The committee discussed the question of housing, requested President Chopin to report on that part of the committee's work. President Chopin said it was proposed to tent in a portion of the square at an expense of $350 to $500. Chas. W. Eichling said that a 10-cent admission would attract the crowds and would cover the expense, and it was suggested that a charge be made for exhibitors' space. One member said he thought in line of the city beautiful movement, the society could get up a creditable show of ferns, palms, hanging baskets and porch boxes and the public would not expect a great display of the rarer plants, in view of the limited time at the command of the society. He said the show should be an educational one to teach the public what their gardens should be.

There will be a special meeting called for Thursday, April 8, when all the leaders and members of the different civic leagues will be invited; also the president and members of the school clubs. This meeting will be held at the Association of Commerce hall.

Henry B. Chase, Chase, Ala., President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.

Fortieth annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June 23-25, 1915.

NAPERVILLE, ILL.—The Naperville Nurseries have been incorporated by Helene, Emma and Frederick W. Von Oven; capital, $12,000.

PROSPECT, O.—Elias G. Stockman, nurseryman, died here March 31, at the age of 74 years. His health had been failing for two years.

GREAT NECK, N. Y.—The Nassau Nurseries have been incorporated by P. M. Polletreau, 2 Rector street, Manhattan, New York; capital $10,000.

KINGSTON, OKLA.—The ladies of the Civic League have just closed a tree-planting campaign that resulted in the planting of nearly a thousand trees in this city this season.

CUMBERLAND, MD.—Professor Bert W. Anspon, of the Maryland agricultural college, will deliver an address on the topic, "Beautifying Home Grounds," at the state normal school in April.

MANHATTAN, KAN.—Prof. M. F. Ahearn, associate professor of horticulture, will co-operate with the city board of education in the general beautification of the grounds of the ward school buildings.

BARTLESVILLE, OKLA.—According to local horticulturists the recent cold weather will do little if any damage to fruit and grain crops in Washington county. The fruit buds have not opened sufficiently to be hurt.

TAMPA, FLA.—Preparations are being made for the entertainment of the twenty-eighth annual convention of the Florida State Horticultural Society, which will meet in this city April 13-16. It is expected that 1,500 growers will attend.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—According to an opinion by the attorney general the state board of agriculture has no authority to issue a certificate to do business in this state to a nursery company domiciled in another state. The inquiry was made by the board of agriculture in the case of the Texas Pecan Nursery Company of Arp, Texas.

Texas Peach Crop Damaged.

Telegraphic advices received by the office of markets and rural organization, United States department of agriculture, March 31, from the commercial peach area in northeastern Texas, estimate a damage of 35 to 80 per cent in the southern and central portions of this area, embracing Jacksonville, Athens, Marshall and Lindale. The northern points appear to have suffered but little. In 1913 shipments from these stations ranged from 5 to 150 carloads. In 1914 the Texas crop was practically a failure. Despite the recent damage estimated shipments from these points will range from 50 to 400 cars. Therefore it is probable that Texas will be a much more important factor in the commercial deal this season than in the last two years.

Damage to Pine Seeds from Disinfectants.

A study of the effects upon seeds and roots, of disinfectants used to prevent the damping off disease, has just been published by the United States department of agriculture, as a professional paper under the title of "Injury by Disinfectants to Seeds and Roots in Sandy Soils." Experiments show that the use of sulphuric, hydrochloric and nitric acids, or of copper sulphate, will not injure dormant pine seed, but in some soils will kill the root tips of germinating seedlings immediately after germination. In consequence these disinfectants can only be employed by persons able to recognize and prevent such injury. Injury to pine seedlings can be prevented by very frequent watering during the germinating period. This watering does not prevent the killing of annual weeds in seed beds treated with these disinfectants. The addition of lime to the soil, shortly after it has been treated with the acid, prevents injury to both pine and weed seedlings. The use of lime is not desirable in the case of pine, but may result in making possible the use of acid as a disinfectant for truck crop seed beds. Formaldehyde and mercuric chloride must be used several days before seed sowing if at all.

BUSINESS PHENOMENAL DESPITE BLIZZARD.

Easter this year was ushered in with a blinding blizzard in which about seven inches of snow fell. The storm started about 10 a. m. Saturday and continued all day and until late Sunday morning. Considering the storm and the financial state of business conditions here, business was phenomenal, with only a decrease of 25 per cent, which was remarkable, considering the weather. Prices this year were a little lower than former years, but the supply of plants and cut flowers was equal to the demand, even more so than usual. All plants sold well except the fancy stock. Large and small azaleas had a good sale. Violets, sweet peas and lily of the valley were the flowers most in demand for corsages this year. Marguerites had a good call, while roses, daffodils, tulips, poeticus, cut lilies, callas and gardenias, all had their buyers, but were not in as heavy demand as the first named flowers. Lillies do not seem to be as popular as in former years. The grocery stores, department stores and other small stores cut the price so much that the florist cannot even sell them at the cut prices. The lilies this year, especially the out-of-town lillies, were perfect—never were better. The local lilies were not up to the standard and although they were good, they were not up to the out-of-town stock. There were a good many of the growers, who could not get their lilies in for the Easter trade, for some reason or other.

NOTES.

Macnair had an exceptionally good business this year, both in plants and cut flowers. The storm did not affect him to any extent, his business being mostly a telephone business. He had four 'phone operators busy all day taking orders, and a large force of men packing and filling orders. On account of the storm, customers in the transient trade were not as large as usual, most of his trade using the telephone to a good advantage.

McAndrews Floral Company, of East Providence, R. I., put a new idea on the market this year, that sold well, in mission wood boxes filled with daffodils, tulips and hyacinths, that could be made and sold cheap. Macnair placed an early order with him for 100 of these boxes.

Fred Hoffman, of Pawtucket, had some lily of the valley this year that was fine. His bulbous stock was exceptionally good, and he reports a clean-up in his stock.

George Fenner, of Cranston, had one of the finest stocks this year that he ever had. It was perfect; all his stock came in just right.

Jesse Tartaglia, of Simmonsville, R. I., had a good supply of bulbous stock this year. His daffodils were immense.

Westminster Greenhouses had a fine stock of all plants this year, fully up to their usual high standard.

T. J. Johnson & Co. had an Easter annex on Union street this year and reported a good business.

T. O'Connor had his usual stock of fancy plants. His baskets this year were certainly fine.

Johnson Brothers, made some fine window displays this year. H. A. T.

TWEMLOW'S

OLD ENGLISH GLAZING PUTTY

For Bedding Glass in Sash or for Filling Cracks or Seams in Roof Joints or Frames of Greenhouses or Hot Beds.

☞It is used in Machine or Bulb. If too thick for bulb thin with a little Pure Linseed Oil, boiled. So thinned, it can be brushed into any crack or leak, making a solid filling. It makes a solid bed, impervious to moisture, and holds glass in its place, and will stop any crevice or fault. When once set on dry wood it does not heave. As regards the goods, the article is no new invention, but simply an article of the very best class, to do thoroughly good work, like old-time gentlemen expected when sashes were made with lead, and small panes of glass used that caught the water and leaked unless set with an elastic putty, which once set by a mechanic was expected to remain, and did remain in good shape. This Twemlow's Old English Glazing Putty does; nothing more, nothing less.

Twemlow's Old English Putty used the country over. Made by HAMMOND'S PAINT AND SLUG SHOT WORKS, BEACON, N. Y.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

The plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, both the young rooted stock and the older plants, will now begin to make active growth. There is still time to propagate much stock; many growers prefer the May rooted plants to those propagated earlier, for the plants start right off into growth at this time while those rooted earlier grow very slowly during the late winter and early spring months. The young shoots that break from the old plants make fine cuttings at this time and if the plants are in good health are just as good as the leaf cuttings made earlier. As soon as rooted they should be potted in a light, fibrous loam in 2¼-inch pots, and placed in a light, well ventilated house, but should be protected from all chilling draughts. They cannot be successfully grown in a stuffy-moist temperature and to have strong, healthy plants should not be forced in too warm a temperature. They will require a house in which the night temperature does not fall below 60° and should be given all the air possible without chilling during pleasant, bright days, carefully avoiding drafts. They will need to be watered carefully, for the roots are very fine and are growing slowly yet, and overwatering quickly shows in the growth of the plant. It is now a good time to procure young stock if the grower is not supplied, for those making a specialty of this plant will have the best of stock at this time.

Asparagus Plumosus and Sprengeri.

Small stock of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are now a necessity with all plantsmen, for they are freely used in fern dishes and in plant baskets, being very satisfactory plants for house culture. Fresh seed can now be obtained and the stock grown on through the summer, which will make fine stock for the next winter. The seed will germinate more readily and evenly if soaked in lukewarm water placed in a warm location for 24 hours before planting. Instead of sowing the seed broadcast it is better to sow them about three-quarters of an inch apart and they can then be allowed to remain in the flats until they are strong enough to transplant. Do not cover the seed too deeply; an eighth of an inch of soil sifted over the seed is ample. The first potting must be carefully done, for they make a long tap root with very few small roots and the soil does not adhere to it. and in the young stage this root is easily broken. A warm house with plenty of moisture and careful watering with a slight shade is all they require after being potted. Overwatering will always cause the fronds to take a yellowish hue.

Gladiolus.

The gladioli that are being forced for spring blooming will soon begin to open their flowers, and to have good clean stock they will require attention. The spikes should first of all be kept erect, for if they get bent and crooked half their value is gone, and this will occur very quickly on the bright sunny days when the plant leans over, so they should be kept tied either to stakes or wires to prevent this. The spike should be cut when the first flower opens and placed in water and the other flowers opened in the office or store room. These flowers spot very quickly if water is sprinkled upon them in the greenhouses and at this season of the year syringing on bright days is a necessity or red spider is sure to obtain a foothold, and if these pests become once well established it is almost impossible to eradicate them. Considerable discussion is often heard as to whether the corms of gladiolus forced are of any value another year. If the plant is not cut too far down on the stem and the corms are given an opportunity to thoroughly ripen there is no doubt but that the bulbs may be grown another year and good results obtained. but if the plant is cut off clear down to the ground the corm has no chance to make its full growth or to ripen and the corms will be practically worthless. Corms that are forced this year, and the spike cut so as to leave three or more leaves, if properly ripened can be planted outside another year and the following year first-class corms will be the result. The Gladiolus Colvillei can be forced year after year if grown properly.

Preparation for Memorial Day.

With the Easter stock out of the way, there will be room available for the plants that have of necessity been crowded more closely together for the last few weeks, and the next great day before the grower is Memorial day. In those sections of the country where the late frosts are passed the bedding stock must be ready for planting out at that time, and the demand will be for plants to flower, for the customers will desire plants that will make a good showing by May 30, and the stock must be grown with that object in view to have a good sale. The geraniums and other blooming plants should be placed in their blooming pots, spaced out and given a good sunny location that they may be full of bloom by the last of May. It is next to impossible to sell plants that are not in flower at Memorial day. The production of flowers for that day must also receive prompt attention. Much of the floral work for Memorial day is what is called "cheap" work, that is, flowers that make a great show and are not expensive. So although there are many roses and carnations used, yet large quantities of the cheaper flowers are employed to fill in and make the sprays and bouquets larger. Early outdoor flowers and blooming shrubbery can be used, but in some sections these cannot be depended upon, so flowers must be grown in the houses. Stocks make a splendid flower for this purpose and should be benched at once. The plants should now be about three or four inches high and growing rapidly. Candytuft is grown in large quantities by some growers for Memorial day. Seedlings can be transplanted in early April and brought into flower the latter part of May. Spiræa, both as a pot plant and for cut flowers, are very useful at this time; six to eight weeks will bring them into flower at this season. There are other annuals that can be raised for Memorial day blooming, but the two mentioned are grown in largest quantities.

DENVER, COLO.—An increased demand for corsage bouquets and a better sale than usual for azalea and lily plants, were features of the 1915 Easter trade, reported by the Park Floral Co. The volume of business was about equal to the corresponding period of 1914.

NEW YORK.—Charles Dards states that low priced plants played an important part this year in the Easter greeting sentiment, many being used in remembrances to friends and relatives. There was little demand for high priced plants or handsome arrangements.

ROCHESTER, MINN.—R. Bragg Co., Inc., reports that while prices were below the 1914 figures, the lower prices seemed to have a stimulating effect on the buying public, as the volume of business done as compared to Easter a year ago was 40 per cent better. In the plant section a heavy business was planned on and an extra large supply of lilies and other pot plants were ready, but cleaned up entirely. Cut stock sold well, but not in comparison to the plant trade. Rambler roses, azaleas, hydrangeas and bulbous stock in pans sold best. Lilacs did not prove popular. Florist Telegraph Delivery orders were heavier this Easter than ever before.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Office Building Flower Club.

A unique phase of the growing use of flowers, and one which has a practical sentiment back of it, is that found in an office building in Columbus, O. The girls employed therein have an informal organization which centers in an arrangement by which any of the number is supplied with flowers in case of illness. There are no regular dues, but each member contributes such amount of money as she cares to for this purpose. Liberality is governed to some extent by the current state of the fund, according to the demands that are being made upon it. No discrimination is made against a girl whose circumstances may prevent her from giving more than a trifle.

The idea was originated by a woman, Miss Florence Strickler, who in herself is a person somewhat out of the ordinary. She has the distinction of being one of the very few, if not the only, woman office building manager in the country. The building of which she has complete charge, even to the employing of elevator men and janitors, and to the overseeing of upkeep and repairs, consists of eleven stories. She has filled the position to the satisfaction of the ownership for the past eight years, and is invested with full authority to make and cancel leases, buy the thousands of dollars' worth of coal and other supplies, and to perform any duty that would devolve upon a man in such a capacity.

It is a tribute to Miss Strickler's efficiency to say that no office building in Columbus is kept filled nearer to its capacity, nor has a better class of tenants than the Wyandotte, over which she presides. Further, it is credited with making fewer changes among its force of janitors and other employes. Lastly, it is said to be the cleanest building in town. While a strict disciplinarian, Miss Strickler is a person of strong human sympathies. This has not only led her to treat her help well, but to take an interest in the girls employed by her tenants. Hence the flower fund. Her offices are its headquarters. The girls have carte blanche to break in on her even at her busiest hours, to report cases of illness, or to confer with her on any personal matter on which they may want sympathy or advice. The flower fund organization is now several years old, and is a recognized fixed institution of the building. It has carried cheer into many homes and into hospitals. In the case of a member who was confined to a hospital for several months, there was no time when her room lacked the presence of fresh cut flowers.

What Others Are Doing.

Theodore Roosevelt's definition of success is, "Do what you have to do, do it at the earliest possible moment, and do it the best you know how." This is certainly an excellent rendering of the word, and if carried out with diligence and vigor, will insure success in any undertaking, its measure depending on the ability of the individual. "Do it the best you know how," when working in competition with others in the same line, may not insure success, from the fact that your competitor knows how, better than you do, has a shorter cut, goes across lots, while you go around by the road. All men have not the same natural ability; some are quick in action, come to conclusions and go ahead, while others are wondering what is best to do. Many men go on working from month to month the same as they did last year and they are satisfied if they make a living and come out clear of debt. They do not seem to care what their competitors are doing and would not visit another man's greenhouses or store for fear that he might think they were trying to steal some of his ideas, and they would not see anything new anyhow.

To the progressive man, what others are doing is of great interest. He is thinking and striving all of the time for the best as he sees it, but when he is beaten out in the race, he is at once alert and visits his competitor to find out if possible how it was done. As an instance, Smith heard from a bulb dealer of the large quantity of Easter lilies that were forced annually by Brown, a successful grower, and his curiosity was aroused. How did he handle such an immense stock? He would go and see for himself. He visited the establishment, was met kindly by the proprietor, who spoke freely of his methods. His plan was to follow his chrysanthemums with lilies planted out in the same soil, in which they made a remarkable growth, easily showing twice as much strength and vigor as when grown in pots. This plan was immediately followed by Smith, who set out all his forcing pot stock in soil on a table, and in two weeks the plants showed a remarkable improvement.

A noted rose grower of Philadelphia, Pa., who has been very successful in his branch of the business, has for years made it a point to visit each season other men in the same line who had achieved success, always taking along his foreman and perhaps another intelligent member of his force, just to see what others were doing and to add to their knowledge, so that their "Best they knew how" would be on a par with their competitors. There are a great many members of the rose growing fraternity that at this time are wondering if they are doing the "best they know how" in forcing this or that variety and considering which will be the favorite next season. The grower who goes about a bit over the field will certainly be in a position to make a better guess than the man who is satisfied that what he has is the best he can do.

GETTING INTO A RUT.

There are many store men who get into a rut and run along year after year in the same channel, failing to see that they are standing still or falling behind in the race. Trade is slow, because of the weather, or it is the dull season, or on account of the reduction of the tariff. The fact that his stock is running down, that the store is becoming dingy, or that his window decorations lack feature, is not apparent to him, because he does not keep posted and does not get about and see what his competitors are doing. Loyalty of ones customers is largely a matter of service. A new customer takes you on trial; if the transaction is satisfactory, the service is good and the flowers keep, other orders are given which must come up to the standard of the first—the least let up and away they go. Of course there are old customers who will put up with disappointments and indifferent treatment, who overlook and are lenient, "old war horses" who stick for old time's sake, but to gain new customers and their confidence, one must be up to date, carry a full stock of a quality suitable for the trade he is catering to. His competitors in the next block are after the same people who are sure to get in there once in a while, and if the first impressions are good they are apt to come back, and a new customer's name gets on the books.

"Do it the best you know how," means being keyed up all the time. With the finishing of the work in hand, there is opportunity for something else that is almost crying for attention, but unless you are alert you will not hear, or even see, the need for the work to be done. Ten minutes' work on the disarranged flowers in the case will make it look 25 per cent better. Stocks of flowers should always be displayed in the most inviting manner; by placing the colors in harmony, jarring contrasts are avoided. A well arranged flower stock, even if it lacks in assortment, makes a good impression and substitution is rendered easier.

A retail florist will find nothing so helpful as to get away once in a while and spend a day in another town or city, visiting the various stores and flower markets, looking out for features that appear to him valuable, and which he can use with profit. Some made up work may give ideas which are new to him. A nicely decorated store suggests improvements at home. The order system, the stylish looking tag, decorations in the store or windows—these and many other features should prove intensely interesting to one who is wide awake and makes comparisons with the home business. The special features should be written down for future reference; in fact in one's everyday routine as new ideas occur, they should be jotted down, and after consideration, adopted or rejected as the case may be. SMITH & FETTERS' EASTER WINDOW, CLEVELAND, O.

HUDSON, N. Y.—The Forest Flower Shop, recently opened by Grover Neibergall, reports a splendid Easter trade.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.—Eleven thousand carnations and a greater number sweet peas were included in the items in the Easter sales of the Springfield Seed Co. Easter business among local florists was better than last year.

CINCINNATI, O.—As reported by the Chas. Hoffmeister Floral Co., Easter trade this year was about on a par with the same period in 1914, prices and volume of sales being about the same. All plants, especially moderately priced ones, enjoyed a good call, and the supply was plentiful. Cut flowers were also on the market in good quantities, but carnations and double violets were poor in quality, having been held back.

OMAHA, NEB.—Easter sales this year were about equal to those of the corresponding season in 1914, with prices a little below the average, is the report of L. Henderson. Lilies were first in demand among the plants, and the supply was plentiful. Hyacinths, tulips and azaleas also sold well. Cut flowers sold well, with the exception of roses, spring flowers, tulips, hyacinths and violets having the best call. The weather was fine, and stock was in splendid condition.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Planting and Propagating.

It is again time to think and talk chrysanthemums, figure out the coming season's planting and start up the work of propagating. It may help some in figuring out their planting, to give a review of the new varieties of 1914 that came under our notice as being worthy additions to the list of commercial and exhibition varieties, and such of those among the novelties being offered for 1915, which we have had the opportunity to base our judgment on. We will first take up the commercial section.

Chieftain — Rose-pink, incurved, somewhat on the color of well-grown Dr. Enguehard, but dwarfed in growth, with strong stiff stems and perfect foliage; one of the best commercial varieties sent out in recent years and will be planted in large quantities. Introduced by the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.

Salomon's Gold—A yellow sport from Alice Salomon, fine in form and color and at its best about October 15. A very profitable variety to grow; also introduced by the E. G. Hill Co.

Oconto—Early white at its best October 10-15; a fine white to follow Smith's advance. You will make no mistake by adding this variety to your list. Introduced by Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich.

Edwin Seidewitz—A fine incurved late pink, extra good; at its best for Thanksgiving and later. Introduced by G. A. Lotze, Glen Burnie, Md.

Mistletoe—Very late blush or white, fine incurved form; can be had in fine shape for Christmas. Introduced by F. Dorner & Sons Co., LaFayette, Ind.

Odessa—Introduced as an exhibition variety; incurved form, deep yellow; equally good either for commercial or exhibition purposes; one of the very best. Introduced by Elmer D. Smith & Co.

Smith's Ideal — Medium size, incurved, commercial white, dwarf grower, can be planted close. Introduced by Elmer D. Smith & Co.

Indian Summer—A good late bronze, sport from Golden Chadwick; very decorative for late work. Introduced by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.

Marigold—Bright, golden yellow maturing October 15. Those who have had the opportunity to see this variety, bear out the claim of the introducers, Elmer D. Smith & Co., that it is one of the best ever offered.

Modello—Novel in color and form, golden bronze, with grooved petals, resembling a decorative dahlia. For decorative work under electric light we do not have anything to compare with this variety. It is being introduced by Elmer D. Smith & Co.

Crystal Gem—As the name indicates, a glistening white, early. Also offered by Elmer D. Smith & Co.

White Chieftain—A white sport from Chieftain; a valuable addition to the commercial list and one of the most promising novelties of the year. It is being introduced by the E. G. Hill Co.

Early Frost—One of the most promising early white varieties being sent out this year; dwarf, short jointed grower. F. Dorner & Sons Co. introducers.

Antigone—A variety that has made a great record throughout the east; purest white, worthy of thorough trial. Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., introducer.

Bob Pulling—Very fine exhibition variety, pure yellow; was shown in fine form. Another of the Wells-Pockett-Totty set.

Earl Kitchener—Amaranth, with reverse silver, as shown at Indianapolis. One of the big varieties suitable for exhibition. It is being introduced by Chas. H. Totty.

Mendon—Reflexed pink, wide petals; a very striking flower for exhibition purposes. Chas. H. Totty, introducer.

Daily Mail, James Fraser, Wm. Vert and Mrs. Ernest Wild are four other Wells-Pockett-Totty varieties that we made note of as being exceptionally good for exhibition.

Calumet—An exhibition variety, incurved, fine formed flower; a favorite color, which is light bronze and is bound to become very popular. Elmer D. Smith & Co., introducers.

Silver King—Another fine Elmer D. Smith & Co. variety; white with long petals, the center coming up solid and full.

MANAGER DESMOND AND HIS LILIES AT DONALDSON'S GREENHOUSES, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., EASTER, 1915.

Tekonsha—A variety thought well of by the C. S. A. examining committee. Golden bronze, at its best for Thanksgiving, when this color is most popular. Another Elmer D. Smith & Co. variety.

Mount Greenwood—Exceptionally fine incurved, pink, full to the center; good grower and will make a good commercial variety; easy to grow. A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., introducers.

We are asked many times which crimson variety is the best to grow. With us, the variety Harvard stands out above any other variety of its color for commercial purposes. It is a good grower, double from any bud and produces flowers that run even and true. For exhibition purposes we favor F. T. Quittenton and Gertrude Peers. Quittenton may be a little rough, but under our treatment it never burns, and is one of the best keepers we know of.

Fatouma—Described as rosy amber color. We selected this variety as one of the best exhibition blooms in the E. G. Hill Co. collection at Chicago in 1913 and again at Indianapolis, 1914. It is a very striking exhibition bloom.

The single varieties have now attained a high degree of popularity, and we have some very beautiful varieties, but many of them are too lacking in substance of petalage to be of commercial value. What is required of this type is that the petals must stand out rigid and not droop down after being cut. The stems must also be stiff enough to hold the flower erect and clothed with good foliage. The variety Mensa measures up as near to the ideal commercial standard as any we have. Golden Mensa is a fit companion for it. Merstham Jewel, bronze and yellow, is one of the very best sellers among the singles.

Miss M. Pope is a lovely shade of pink, and Mrs. Wm. Buckingham is another fine pink variety.

Josephine is a fine yellow; in fact, one of the best.

Polly Duncan is another good yellow.

All of these varieties mentioned are singles that have been well tried out for commercial purposes and have proved their value.

Pompons—During the last four years we have had a large number of new varieties of pompons added to our list and many of them a big advance over any others that we had before. Helen Newberry for late white, and Mary, another white for November 1, should be in every collection; they are both good. Celco, Golden Climax and Golden West are three good yellows. Western Beauty and Leota are grand pinks, and Golden Harvest is one of the very best golden bronze pompons.

The novelties in pompons being introduced this year by Elmer D. Smith & Co. and A. N. Pierson, Inc., have all passed judgment of the C. S. A. committees and are endorsed as worthy additions to the list of pompons.

To increase the stock of the new ones, plant them out in light fresh soil, on a bench where they will get plenty of light and air. In a very short while the tops of these plants can be taken for cuttings, after which with a little encouragement, by keeping the surface of the bed worked over and not overwatering the plants, they will throw out side shoots and cuttings from the bottom. Propagation of these can be carried on for six or eight weeks yet, and thus have a good stock of the novelties at a small expense and be able to give them a good trial.

SPRING WEATHER FORCES IN HEAVY CROP.

Business has been exceptionally quiet during the past week. There was practically no demand for stock on Easter Monday as nearly all the retailers had plently left over and there was little improvement during the week. The spring weather during the week has brought out a large supply of flowers and the markets have rather a glutted appearance. Roses seem to be in about the least demand of any flower, prices running from one cent and less up. Carnations are still in short crop and fair prices were received for them. Violets and sweet peas sold very well also, but bulbous stock found a poor market. Gardenias and orchids are moving fairly well as there is a short crop. Spanish iris is coming in from a few growers who realize a fair price. The plant trade is very poor, nearly every store still having plants left from Easter. Easter lilies are very plentiful and move slowly at $4 per 100. A better market is expected soon, however, as soon as the Easter stock is cleaned up, and general trade becomes adjusted to its regular spring routine.

NOTES.

The crop of carnations from Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, Mass., is improving at every cutting. His Delight and Benora are coming especially fine. He still continues to grow Carnation Queen, as he has not yet found anything to take its place as a prolific white. He purchased 2,000 of Peter Fisher's new pink Carnation Alice, and speaks very highly of it, from what he has seen thus far.

Streiferd & Son, of East Braintree, Mass., are still cutting their colored freesias. They have selected from their seedlings, good yellow, pink and blue freesias, from which they intend to work up a good stock. Their roses, snapdragons and carnations are also looking very well.

One of Andrew Christensen's employes, Edward Gay, has commenced the growing business in Stoneham. He is constructing a house 40x100, made by Stearns & Co. He will devote it entirely to carnations.

Chas. Evans has a large crop of hydrangeas and rambler roses at present. The plants are exceptionally well grown, and the quality of them is bringing him many orders.

Frank Dolansky, of Lynn, Mass., is cutting some very fine gardenias. He also has a good crop of Cattleya Schroederiana and Cattleya citrina.

W. E. Turner, of Billerica, Mass., has a large crop of his own strain of pansies. He is also cutting blue, yellow and white Spanish iris.

Wm. Thurston, manager of the Boston Flower Exchange, has leased an appartment in Watertown, where he will locate May 1. F. L. W.

Los Angeles.

Good stock of all kinds has been scarce here all winter and has sold with very few exceptions at good prices. It seems to be a hard job to get the grower of cut flowers here on the coast to try for quality instead of quantity. Many of the Japanese growers go at the flower business like a truck gardener who sells his produce by the pound, and at times the dealer has a hard job on his hands to keep up the standard of the stock he handles. The flower business here is about as good as any other business, everything having suffered from the general depression all over the country and we particularly, because of our nearness to the Mexican border. This trouble has cut off the florist trade entirely from the American dealers. The general outlook is for an improved business for next year, as on account of the two coast expositions there will be much entertaining and all branches of the trade will profit therefrom.

CLUB MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society was held, Tuesday evening, April 6, at Kruckeberg's hall. Fred H. Howard, of Howard & Smith Nurseries, on behalf of the city beautification committee, extended an invitation to the society to participate in the floral parade in Los Angeles on May 1, with an appropriate float, symbolic of the nursery and florist industry. It was voted that the society accept the invitation and a voluntary contribution of $1 per member be called to cover expense of the float. The special topic of the evening was an address by James Taylor, of Hollywood, on the culture of plants for the florists' uses. In his discussion he covered the begonia, the cyclamen and the cineraria, illustrating his talk with some splendid specimen pot plants of his own growing, and an elegant specimen of cineraria, grown by W. W. Felgate, of Sierra Madre. The firm of Howard & Smith showed some very choice blooms of the giant hybrid amaryllis. Following the reading of Mr. Taylor's address, a running discussion ensued, participated in by Messrs. Hunt, Felgate, Taylor and others. A rising vote of thanks was tendered the speaker at the close of his valuable address. For the next regular meeting, James MacGillivray was chosen to present a paper, the subject to be of his own choosing.

Pasadena is full of winter visitors, and the florists report good business there without exception this year.

LULL FOLLOWS EASTER RUSH.

The week after Easter, like any other big flower day, is usually a little quiet, and the trade is getting a little much needed rest. Surplus and left over Easter stock is being used up in funeral work, wherever and whenever possible; besides the receipts at the wholesale houses are very large, and the market is glutted with roses, Easter lilies and carnations, while sweet peas too are quite plentiful. Violets are not in very big demand, though stock is expectionally good. A few very good American Beauty roses are beginning to arrive and will be with us for the rest of the summer. Russell roses are also good stock and meet with a good demand. Shawyers, Mocks, Richmond, Sunburst, Wards and Milady are plentiful and of excellent quality. Snapdragon has been plentiful. Boxwood still meets with a good demand. Adiantum ferns and asparagus are plentiful. Smilax was in good demand.

NOTES.

At the regular meeting of the local florists' club, Monday, April 5, the attendance was rather small, which was too bad, considering the interesting discussions that took place. Talks on Easter business, the ways and means of delivery, care of plants, etc., were interesting and instructive, several of the more prominent florists telling of their experiences with extra help, and extra automobiles and trucks for delivery, and ways of improving same. Come to the meetings and learn how others are handling the big business.

Thousands of rose bushes were planted in Wade Park, Friday, "Arbor day", by girls from the normal school, under direction of Dr. Jean Dawson. Fifty girls took part in the rose drill, in march formation through the park. Public schools throughout the city planted trees or shrubs in honor of the day.

PLANTS INCREASE IN POPULARITY.

Weather conditions the past week have been almost ideal. Had they prevailed the week previous, much labor would have been saved. Easter has come and gone and all can say they were satisfied. Never before were there so many groceries, news depots, confectionery stores, where the country grower could put his stock outside of an undertaker's shop or the telephone exchange. You could see ramblers, tulips, azaleas and other plants, with quality in keeping with the grower, who will in about a month ask the store man to handle his goods. But why complain? They simply relieve you of the cheap buyer, who wants a 25-cent plant sent to the extreme limit of the city, and then, if broken, you have to replace it. Such is life. Trade in the downtown district was as good as last year, taking all in all. It started late, and the demand for elaborate baskets and artistic arrangement was lacking. The energetic florist anticipated the call, and arranged his plants and boxes accordingly. Pretty plants and baskets from $3 to $5 readily caught the eye of the purchaser, and sales were made accordingly. Corsages of all kinds were as much in demand as ever before, and were executed as best the florist could do with the "proviso"—delivery before church time. It is safe to say that the florists were equal to the occasion and at least fifty automobiles were sent from the downtown stores between 7:30 and 8:30 a. m., with nothing for delivery but corsage bouquets. Plants of all descriptions seemed to sell over cut flowers, and one cannot but think the purchaser was right. A well grown rambler, hydrangea, azalea, rhododondron, tulip or daffodil priced from $1 to $10, prettily arranged, will sell quicker than the dozen roses or carnations at $1 or upwards, no matter how artistically arranged in an ice box when they know that the same flower was on sale the week before at a much lower price. Supply and demand we know rule all things, but there is a happy medium and it must be reached. It is a pleasure to sell cut flowers of all kinds, but you must give the customer something for his money, and when he sees a splendid plant for $2 and 12 roses for the same price he takes the most for the money. Buffalo has not been favored in many years with as fine a stock as was shown in the stores this year. Great credit is given to the growers in all greenhouses for the fine stock produced. S. A. Anderson, W. J. Palmer & Son, Wm. Scott Co., L. H. Neubeck, Stroh's Flower Shop and the east side growers had fine plants, which helped to make trade good.

When "two souls with but a single thought and two hearts that beat as one" are fired by the extreme heat that a greenhouse has to have to produce the lily, it is no wonder that a wedding is budding forth, and ere the Darwin tulips show their pretty heads above the soil, North Tonawanda will have annexed another resident to the city, and the Lockport car will have still one passenger asking for a transfer to the Utica car, and Anderson's will need another lady at the Elmwood store. The "birdies say" June, but look out for school commencements—July is a good, quiet month for the florists.

STOCK IS DRUG ON MARKET.

With business slow, stocks of all kinds are a drug on the market. The best of American Beauties can be had for $12 per hundred, while other roses, such as Radiance, Killarney, both colors, Richmond, Hadley, Sunburst, Hillingdon, Ward, Queen, Mrs. Shawyer and Enchantress could be bought at from $12 to $60 per thousand, while carnations are in the same boat. The commission houses were glad to get rid of these stocks at $10 per thousand. Jonquils could be had at your own price and the same with Easter lilies. The very best lilies could be had at $6 per hundred, while good stock could be had at $4.00 per hundred. Sweet peas are also plentiful. In Spencer varieties the very best can be had at $7.50 per thousand. By the appearance of some of the stores, it looks as if some of them were getting ready for another Easter, as there are just as many flowering plants at present as there were before Easter. Everybody has had time now to look over his Easter trade and all seem satisfied with their holiday business, but it could have been a good deal better. Some of the leading florists were very fortunate to have a few good decorations, which helped them to get some returns for the flowering plants that were left over.

Albany Florists' Club.

At the April meeting of the Albany Florists' Club, Fred A. Danker was appointed chairman of a committee to call upon the commissioner of public safety, to ask him to exercise his authority to cause the removal of fakirs, who sell flowers on the streets. It was pointed out that these men are serious competitors of citizens who pay heavy rents and taxes in the community, and are responsible for the goods they sell. Besides Mr. Danker, President Bilson named on the committee Fred Henkes, Edward P. Tracey, and Louis H. Schaefer.

To an article that appeared in one of the local newspapers, Saturday morning, April 3, the members attributed a pronounced stimulus in the sale of flowers for Easter. The secretary was instructed to write to the managing editor thanking him for the article.

Earl Shaw and Ernest Nelson of this city, and Henry Hansen of Catskill were elected members of the club.

TRADE CONDITIONS IMPROVE.

Trade conditions have been showing improvement for several weeks past, and April started in to keep up the pace with a splendid Easter business. Real spring weather is at hand, stock is plentiful and of good quality and everybody seems happy. Plants in bloom had a strong call for Easter sales, the dealers in a number of instances being sold out entirely by noon, Saturday, April 3, and many more could have been sold if the stock had been at hand. Azaleas were a disappointment, but rhododendrons were extra fine, and lilac stock was high grade, plants selling at $4 to $5 each. Hydrangeas, selling at $1.50 to $3, tulips, 8 to 10 in a pot, at $1, and hyacinths, in arrangements of four or five, at $1 to $1.25 were in strong demand in the plant class. Baskets, made up to sell from $3.50 to $8 sold fast, but above $10, they were dead stock. Lots of lilies of poor quality were seen, but excellent cuts of Formosum were also noted that sold up to 25 cents, and sold out at that figure. Daffodils Von Sion and Queen Victoria, miniature hyacinths, ericas, Chorizema cordata and genistas, all of excellent quality, found ready buyers at good prices.

NOTES.

Hess & Swoboda report that business for March was excellent, showing an increase of $600, an indication that normal conditions are returning. Easter sales at this establishment are reported as resulting in a sell out. The lilac plants received from Jackson & Perkins, Newark, N. Y., were better than imported stock,—the best stock of its class they have ever had. Fine stock of Lilium Formosum was also a feature here.

It is reported that Howard Morgan, for the past year or so a member of the firm of Morgan-Shawler Co., has withdrawn from the firm. No announcement has been made of the firm's plans.

J. J. H.

SALINA, KAN.—A full page advertisement in the local papers was used by Edward Tatro to stimulate his Easter trade. He reports the biggest volume of Easter sales in the history of his business.

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—"Brownhurst, where Flowers Grow", had an exceptionally large stock of cut flowers and plants for the Easter trade, but not enough to meet the heavy demand. Everything sold out clean, and more stock could have easily been disposed of, had it been available.

OBITUARY.

Edward Eisenberg.

Edward Eisenberg, son of I. H. Eisenberg, a well known florist of New York, died at his home in Astoria, Greater New York, April 10, after an illness of but three days, of pneumonia. He was 24 years old and reared by his father in the florist business. He was a young man of promise and finely educated. He had of late been in business for himself. A. F. F.

John Niquet.

John Niquet, son of Frank Niquet, a well-known carnation grower of Patchogue, L. I., N. Y., died early in the past week of pneumonia. His funeral took place Friday, April 9, and was attended by a number of the leading florists of New York. He was a young man of great promise. He learned the florist business with his father, and for the past year had been employed by C. C. Trepel in the store of Mr. Trepel, at Gimbel Bros., New York. He was 19 years old and a young man of fine physique and good habits. His father, Frank Niquet, is one of the best known growers that ship to New York. A. F. F.

Mrs. John B. Nugent.

It is with sincere sorrow that the writer records the death of Mrs. John B. Nugent, which occurred at 11:30 p. m., April 10, after an illness of pneumonia of one week and one day. Mrs. Nugent's many lovable qualities had endeared her to thousands of people who have known her, and the heartfelt sympathy of the men and women of the florist trade, and many others, goes out to her bereaved husband and other relatives. Her maiden name was Sabery Dorsell. She was born in St. Louis, Mo., 33 years ago. She was a very beautiful woman and the last time the writer saw her in health she would have been taken as not over 25 years old. She was married to Mr. Nugent in Baltimore, Md., on July 6. 1911. Previously she had been a singer of great popularity, having been prima donna of the Aborn opera company, and had appeared before large audiences in all the leading cities of the United States. Just previous to being stricken, she had signed with that company to appear in Washington, D. C., in May. Although a professional singer, Mrs. Nugent frequently gave her talents to aid some good cause for charity. John B. Nugent has for many years been a well known florist of New York and is an ex-president of the New York Florists' Club. Mrs. Nugent has frequently entertained the club on their "Ladies' Nights." She died at the family home, 42 West 28th street. The funeral was from the Broadway Tabernacle on the morning of April 13. A. F. F.

Thomas Emerson.

Thomas Emerson, for 45 years head gardener to the Dinsmore family of Staatsburg, N. Y., died April 3, aged 75 years. At the time of his death Mr. Emerson had been serving the third generation of the Dinsmore family. He was a native of Scotland, coming to this country when quite young. He was a man, who in his leisure time employed himself in reading and study. He left a library estimated to be worth $6,000. He was a member of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society, and in younger years was a member of the New York Florists' Club. He is survived by a widow, two daughters and a nephew, W. E. Marshall, of the well known New York seed firm of W. E. Marshall & Co. Mr. Marshall was on a business trip in the middle west, but returned in time to be at his uncle's death-bed. Interment was on April 6.

Mr. Emerson was a man universally esteemed, not only for his knowledge of horticulture, but likewise for his many other intelligent and amiable qualities. He was a landmark in private gardening. A. F. F.

Simon Rodh.

Simon Rodh, a dealer in florists' ribbons, with an office and salesroom at 40 West 28th street, New York, died at his home, 244 Lenox avenue, April 9, after a very brief illness of pneumonia. He was 66 years old. Mr. Rodh had for a number of years been well known and appreciated by the florists of New York for his genial and kindly ways. While at all times a business man he had human sympathy and never went back on a friend. Of Jewish descent, he was born in this country and though it has been stated that the tide of business at times went against him, we believe he left a competence. He is survived by a widow and other relatives, but no children. A. F. F.

The Late Mrs. John B. Nugent.

FAR AND NEAR.

GREELEY, COLO.—All Easter stock cleaned up nicely and an increase in sales over the corresponding period last year of about 20 per cent was noted, according to Gardner Floral Co.

POMONA, CALIF.—O. Roessner reports 1915 Easter trade about on a par with last year, both in volume of business and prices. Flowering plants sold well, and carnations led in popularity in the cut flower class.

BERKELEY, CALIF.—The lily was the favorite Easter flower this year, both in plants and cut blooms. The supply in both classes was heavy, and there was little difference in volume of sales or prices over a year ago, according to J. A. Carbone.

TAMPA, FLA.—Small plants at low prices had the call in the Easter trade this year, reports Tampa Floral Co. Total sales were 20 per cent better than last year, but prices were lower, and buying of flowers by the poorer classes is responsible for the sales increase.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—"Local florists enjoyed a good 1915 Easter business, sales being about 15 per cent better than a year previous, with prices the same and cut flowers and plants in supply equal to all demands," writes Mills, the Florist, Inc.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—With a severe snowstorm interfering with transient business, and streets so slippery that horses and wagons were of very little use, H. P. Potter's automobile delivery service maintained its regular schedule, and he reports Easter business this year was 15 per cent better than that of the 1914 period.

SAVANNAH, GA.—Two days of heavy rain preceding Easter did not prevent sales showing an increase of 15 to 20 per cent for the great flower day. Cash sales were 25 per cent better than a year ago, according to A. C. Oelschig & Sons, and would have been much greater, but for inclement weather, which kept shoppers indoors.

COLUMBUS, O.—Weather, too cold to take stock out without wrapping, caused much stock sold in the markets and curbs to be frozen or unpresentable for the Easter trade. The flower stores did a rushing business, however, reports John R. Hellenthal. Local florists could not expect better business, as all cleaned up well at good prices.

DAYTON, O.—Warren G. Matthews, proprietor of the Dayton Floral Company, says: "Don't advertise on your back door; no one sees it." In calling attention to his Easter display this year he used an attractive full page advertisement printed in two colors, in one of the local papers. He says his sales were 10 per cent better than Easter business in 1914.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—The Joy Floral Co. reports that Easter sales this year were 20 per cent better than a year previous. There was no difference in prices, and while plants were in good supply, the call for cut flowers was in excess of the stock on hand. Plants ranging in price from $1 to $4 had the best sale. In cut flowers there appeared to be little choice and everything cleaned up.

RALEIGH, N. C.—Despite one of the worst blizzards ever experienced, and with telegraph and telephone service out of commission, J. L. O'Quinn & Co. report this year's Easter trade better than that of 1914. Prices for all stock generally were higher and the supply was equal to the demand. Advance orders were numerous and if the weather had been favorable business would have been double that of the previous season.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Three main line telephones were overworked at Gude Bros. in handling a big Easter business this year. Prices were the same as a year ago but trade was 10 per cent better in spite of a heavy snowstorm Saturday, April 3, that interfered with transient trade. In the plant class, enough stock, with the exception of lilies, was left over to duplicate all orders. Orchids, violets and lily of the valley sold best in cut flowers.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Macnair, the Florist, writes of the Easter trade this year as follows: "Prices were below the 1914 standard, and a decrease in business to the extent of about 25 per cent was noted. In both plant and cut flower stock there was an oversupply in most varieties, but fancy stock in flowering plants were most in demand, and good call was the rule for bulbous stock of all kinds, azaleas and ferns. In cut blooms, carnations, lily of the valley, violets and sweet peas led in popularity."

MOTHER'S DAY, the second Sunday of May, falls on May 9 this year.

Personal.

J. J. Karins, well-known traveling representative of H. A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., has mailed us from Portland, April 8, an interesting Oregon romance of a rosebud. Jim will tell about it next time he calls if requested.

Uncle Nick Hallock, now in Los Angeles, writes: "I thought Bermuda fine It is as a tallow candle to an arc light compared with southern California. I met my cousin, O. H. Drew, in Tropico."

Hugo Mock, representing the National Floral Corporation, New York, was in Chicago this week enroute to San Francisco, in the interest of his concern.

American Gladiolus Society.

GLADIOLUS SHOW AT ATLANTIC CITY.

The American Gladiolus Society has decided to hold two exhibitions of gladioli this year, one at Newport, R. I., on August 18-19, as announced, and an additional one at Atlantic City, August 26-29. The latter exhibition is intended for the benefit of the growers and dealers as Atlantic City in August presents the unusual opportunity of drawing up to 100,000 people a day to a show. No schedule will be required for the second show but a series of medals may be offered by the society for the most noteworthy exhibits. The Royal Palace Casino, situated directly on the boardwalk and surrounded by the ocean from three sides, has been secured and it will prove not only a daylight hall, but the atmosphere for an August day will be made delightful both to the flowers and the public.

The American Gladiolus Society is desirous of making this exhibit the foremost national floral event of 1915, and wants every grower (large or small) to be represented with an exhibit. Every possible assistance will be given by the committee in charge to those who live distances away, with information, guidance, accommodations for hotels, etc. Exhibitors will be allowed to book all the business they can; in fact, the sole purpose of the exhibit is to boost the American gladiolus for the American garden and thereby help the American grower to fight foreign competition, which has before this caused much concern to the American grower.

ESSAY COMPETITION.

The essay committee of the National Association of Gardeners has selected the following subjects for the contest for President Everitt's $100.00 award for the best written essay on horticulture:

Class 1. Prize, $35 gold. Subject—"Horticulture as a Profession from the Standpoint of a Gardener."

Class 2. Prize, $25 gold. Subject—"The Proper Grouping and Culture of Trees, Shrubs, Perennials and Annual Bedding Plants in the Ornamentation of Private Grounds."

Class 3. Prize, $20 gold. Subject—"Preparation of Ground for and General Treatment of Hardy Herbaceous Perennials." Naming a list of species (limited to one hundred), providing a succession of flowers throughout the entire season.

Class 4. Prize, $20 gold. Subject—"How to Secure a Year's Vegetable Supply with the Aid of Cold Frames or Hotbeds (but no greenhouses), Including Soil Preparation."

The contest, open to professional gardeners, who are engaged in the capacities of superintendents, head gardeners or assistant gardeners, closes October 1, and the judges, consisting of three gardeners and two representatives of the horticultural press, appointed by the essay committee, will report their decision at the next convention, which will occur the first week of December. Full particulars will be furnished by William H. Waite, chairman essay committee, National Association of Gardeners, P. O. box 290, Madison, N. J., to whom all inquiries should be addressed.

At the meeting of the executive board held in New York recently, it was voted, in response to an invitation from William Kleinheinz, chairman of committee, to secure private growers' exhibits for the fourth national flower show, to be held in Philadelphia, March, 1916, to co-operate with the Society of American Florists to make the show a success.

President Everitt has appointed a committee on protection of native birds, which includes the following members: L. P. Jensen, St. Louis, Mo., chairman; David F. Roy, Marion, Mass.; Lester E. Ortis, Bernardsville, N. J.; Robert Williamson, Greenwich, Conn.; Frank R. Kuehne, Lake Forest, Ill. Chairman Jensen reports that the committee has secured the co-operation of Dr. H. W. Henshaw, chief of the United States bureau of biological survey in its work on bird preservation.

Members of the National Association of Gardeners will join the American Association of Park Superintendents in its trip to San Francisco, to attend the N. A. G. summer meeting, which will be held in that city during the third week of August.

Effect of Commercial Humus on Roses.

Several forms of commercial humus have been widely advertised for use in greenhouses. Some experiments with Alphano humus have been conducted at the New Jersey state experiment station for the past two years, and one very marked result has been verified by the two seasons' work. Some varieties of roses will grow well when this material is added to the soil, while others are decidedly depressed in growth by it.

The Pink Killarney has made a good growth the first season where as high as 15 to 30 per cent of the plain humus as dug from the deposit without any chemical reinforcement has been used. On the other hand, the My Maryland rose has invariably been checked and depressed in growth whenever this material has been used in any soil mixture. This depressive effect has been proportionate to the amount of humus used. When as high as 30 per cent was used the plants made practically no growth. The foliage would often be quite green, but free growth was decidedly checked. Different varieties of plants have marked preferences as to conditions of growth. It is evident that even the so-called "plain commercial humus" is not good "for everything that grows". Florists should be cautious in using any great quantities of such materials, except in an experimental way.

OVERSUPPLY AT BUYER'S PRICE.

The market the past week has been in oversupply with plenty of fine roses selling as low as 5 cents, the other stock in proportion, as to what could be got for it instead of what it would sell for. Carnations were $1.50 to $3 per 100 and roses two cents to six cents each; bulbous stock at your own price. Sweet peas are $1 per 100; violets $1 per 100, with a good supply of everything except American Beauty roses.

The local florists' club held its regular meeting at 218 Fifth street, north, April 6. The committee for the coming fall flower show are W. D. Desmond, R. Latham, Theo. Wirth, Hugh Will, Cal Rice and two others to be appointed by a committee. Cal Rice reported seeing Miss Helen Wood of the West hotel, who said that the club could have any space they desired there, and they were accordingly instructed to go ahead and make the arrangements for the fall show and report same back next meeting. A committee consisting of Messrs. Desmond, Taylor, Amundson and Latham was appointed to call on the newspapers and find out why lilies were quoted in the general news as being in oversupply, and 20 cents given as the price, while most of the dealers were getting 25 cents, and had hard work finding good stock at that. A motion was made that instead of advertising in the daily papers Mothers' day, that the club get out sticker seals with "Mothers' day, May 9" in big letters and Minneapolis Florists' Club in very small letters, and have same placed on all boxes and packages, as then it would remind the people of same. The committee was instructed to order what they thought they could use.

Wessling's Lakewood greenhouses had a large decoration of five floors at the Vogue department store, which took a large amount of stock.

L. S. Donaldson Co. had several large church decorations, together with several of the large department stores.

Mrs. R. A. Wilson, formerly of J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, Ohio, has taken a position at Dayton's.

Every florist you meet has that smile that won't come off since Easter. Why is it?

O. H. Carlson and C. F. Rice left on a trout fishing trip April 14.

Visitors: W. G. Nordeen, of Jewel Nursery Co., Lake City, Minn.; Harry Philpott, of Winnipeg, Man. T. R.

Promote Mothers' Day May 9th, 1915

Mothers' Day has greater possibilities for creating NEW flower business than any other holiday in the year, not excepting St. Valentine's Day.

Make the Second Sunday in May, May 9th, 1915, not only a big flower day, but a profitable one by using our Mothers' Day Folder. If you have not received our Mothers' Day Folder sample, it will be sent to you with full particulars upon request.

When you appeal to a man's love for his mother you touch a most responsive heart cord. In the rush of business he may forget Mothers' Day, but a reminder from you will call it to his attention.

Promote the giving of flowers or a plant to Mothers—not just the wearing of a red or white carnation. Our Mothers' Day Folder is a masterpiece—everything about it suggests flowers as a gift to Mother.

A man may do many things to please his mother, but in no other way can his love and reverence be so truly expressed as by a gift of flowers.

Our Mothers' Day Folder, which will be used by florists in a great many cities in the United States and Canada, will do its share to build up this day in those cities.

Write us or mail order promptly if you want our service for Mothers' Day.

TRADE UNUSUALLY QUIET.

Trade has been unusually quiet since Easter, and there has been practically nothing doing either as far as the local or shipping demand is concerned. Stock of all kinds has been very plentiful, with the exception of orchids and gardenias, and has sold in large lots at unusually low prices. The large department stores had special sales on roses as low as 10 cents per dozen last week, which will give one a little idea of how plentiful stock really was. The warm weather brought the stock along in great shape, and with the supply steadily increasing and no buyers around, the wholesale stores had to find some outlet for stock and did the best they possibly could under the circumstances. It is doubtful if the trade has ever experienced such a quiet period as it did last week when the total sales dropped considerably and prices were remarkably low. Carnations are in large supply, but are meeting with very little sale and the same holds good for roses. Miscellaneous stock is selling better than anything else, and taken all in all, business is very quiet and stock is selling very cheaply, but a sudden change in the market conditions may be expected at any moment. American Beauty roses are in larger supply and some fine stock in the longer grades is now obtainable at very reasonable prices. My Maryland roses are to be had in quantity and the same holds good for Ophelia, which are again making their appearance in larger supply. Some very fancy Prince de Bulgarie and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are now to be had. Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Milady, Rhea Reid, Killarney Brilliant, Killarney Queen, Double White Killarney, Mrs. George Shawyer and Mrs. Aaron Ward are included in the offerings, and like the other roses are arriving in large supply. Lilies are very plentiful and so are callas. Sweet peas are still featured in large supply everywhere, and the first indoor grown gladioli made their appearance on the market this week. Snapdragons are seen in unusually large numbers and some very fancy stock is being offered. Spanish iris is more plentiful and the shipments of southern jonquils is extra large. A good supply of Ten Weeks' stock is still seen and violets are in oversupply. Larkspur, candytuft, daisies, mignonette, swainsona, forget-me-nots, and other miscellaneous seasonable stock is to be had in quantity. The demand the opening of the present week has shown some improvement and the outlook is more encouraging.

THE ADVANTAGES OF BUYING YOUR CUT FLOWERS FROM US ARE MANY.

This is especially true if you are an out-of-town buyer, for it is almost impossible for you to keep in regular touch with the local market conditions and know just what price to pay. We believe in treating all our customers right, and always give them the benefit of the market changes and treat them just the same as if they were on the ground themselves. You cannot do any better elsewhere, so why not deal here? Roses, Carnations and Sweet Peas are our leaders, but we have everything that the Great Central Market affords. Be sure that your next order goes to some are inclined to think that the sum amounted to much more. Judge Wade refused to release the boys in bonds and Assistant State's Attorney J. A. Smejkal opposed a bond of $25,000 for Weed. Edward Weed, a brother of one of the murderers, was in the employ of the late Mr. Weil and is well known in the market where he looked after the buying. The funeral of the late Mr. Weil was held Friday, April 16, and interment was in Mt. Hope cemetery. The floral offerings from the trade were many and beautiful.

The civil service board of the West Chicago park commissioners will hold an examination for gardener at the Garfield park pavilion, April 30, at 9 a. m. Applications must be filed in the office of the board in Union park before 5 p. m. of April 29. Application blanks may be obtained at the office of the board in Union park or at the West park playgrounds.

C. E. Schafer and W. R. Ellers of the La Crosse Floral Co., La Crosse, Wis., visited the Bassett & Washburn range at Greggs station, where they report the stock in fine condition, especially carnations.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is having a big demand for palms in the $3.50 and $5 sizes in made-up plants of Kentia Forsteriana. H. M. Oeser, who has charge of the palm department, has some fine looking stock, and this branch of the business is growing every day. In the plant department C. G. Anderson is busy getting things in shape for the bedding season, which is a busy period at this establishment. This firm reports a big demand for rose, chrysanthemum and carnation stock and new orders are being filled every day.

The south park commissioners last week accepted the 1915 budget for expenditures, amounting to nearly $3,000,000, including contract for $111,200 for concrete work in Grant park. The officers re-elected were: John Barton Payne, president; Joseph Donnersberger, auditor; Frank O. Wetmore, treasurer; John F. Neil, secretary; Robert Redfield, attorney; J. Frank Foster, general superintendent.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. do not believe in supplying the department stores with stock unless they have a permanent floral department. Mr. Vaughan says that he would rather give his customers the benefit of the market conditions than to encourage outsiders to quote ridiculously low prices, as was the case in this city last week. Jack Byers is now in the employ of this firm.

W. H. Amling and wife celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary with a party at their home in Maywood, on Friday, April 9, when a large circle of relatives and friends were present. Everyone had a most enjoyable time and Mr. and Mrs. Amling are grateful to their friends for the many beautiful presents that they received.

Hoerber Bros. are cutting a nice supply of magnificent indoor grown gladioli which to the writer's knowledge are the first of the season. Both Mrs. Francis King and America are grown on a large scale at their Des Plaines greenhouses, but so far the receipts consist only of the first named variety.

George Manos, the Union Depot Florist, does quite a large business and is ably assisted at the store by his wife, who looks after affairs while he does the buying on the market. He sold several hundred pot lilies at Easter and could have disposed of many more for they cleared up at any early hour.

Fred. H. Dinger, proprietor of the store at 211 East Garfield boulevard, bought the William Weil store at 421 West Sixty-third street and will conduct both places in the future. He paid in the neighborhood of $500 for the store which was sold in court on Friday, April 16.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are cutting some very choice Killarney Brilliant roses, which are selling nicely, considering the present market conditions. Mr. Pyfer expects to see a change for the better soon, for the demand was considerably better since the opening of the week.

T. F. Brown, Greenfield, Mich., spent several days here last week during which time he visited a number of the new establishments for the purpose of inspecting the different types of greenhouses. He expects to enlarge his range in the near future.

George Sykes, of the Lord & Burnham Co., and wife have returned from a delightful visit at Atlanta City, N. J. Mr. Sykes is feeling fine since his trip east, where he enjoyed a well-earned rest and is again devoting all of his time to business.

At Percy Jones' establishment the force is getting things in shape for a brisk Mothers' day trade, which is always quite an item at this house, for carnations are a leader here and are always handled in large supply.

Joseph Ziska, Jr., with Joseph Ziska & Sons, is having a delightful time with his Auburn car during his spare moments. He reports receiving a large shipment of gold letters from Germany this week.

The Raedlein Basket Co. is featuring a complete line of window, porch and lawn baskets and is booking a large number of orders for same at their salesrooms at 713 Milwaukee avenue.

The Superior Machine & Boiler Works is handling concrete post molds for making greenhouse benches as a side line and is doing quite a business with the florists in this vicinity.

Bernard J. Schmirer, proprietor of the North Shore Floral Co., says that his Easter business shows a 25 per cent increase over that of last year.

Wietor Bros. will continue to grow American Beauty roses on a large scale, as in the past, at least for another season, for N. J. Wietor is not yet ready to discard this old favorite variety. It is rumored that the "Piker's Club," of which Mr. Wietor is president, will hold a grand reunion in the near future to decide whether or not they will go fishing this season.

The Bohannon Floral Co. is still conducting its temporary store at Monroe and State streets, which is one of the best locations in the city.

Zech & Mann are working under difficulties this week while a new sidewalk is being laid on North Wabash avenue, directly over the shipping department, but are getting out all orders on time, as though nothing had happened. Michael Freres, formerly with the Chicago Carnation Co., joined the Zech & Mann store force this week.

The George Wittbold Co. had the decorations for the Whitney wedding on Thursday, April 8, which called for a large supply of stock. They also had several large orders for the opening baseball game at the Federal league park on Saturday, April 10.

Mothers' day falls on Sunday, May 9, and not on Tuesday, May 11, as some of the calendars give it. Mothers' day was originated by Anna Jarvis in honor of her mother a few years ago and always falls on the second Sunday of May. It was Anna Jarvis that gave Mothers' day to the world, but it was THE AMERICAN FLORIST that gave it to the florist trade of the United States. It was in these columns, issue of May 16, 1908, page 830, that the benefit to be derived from the holiday from a flower-selling standpoint was first pointed out and which should be remembered by the advertisers when they make a bid for the business on this occasion. A florist remarked the other day that if one does not blow his horn no one else will blow it for him. This may be true, but if we had to toot every time we had a toot to toot we would have nothing else to do but to toot toots.

C. L. Washburn, of the firm of Bassett & Washburn, has Roger C. Sullivan, the well-known democrat, for a neighbor since the political boss has taken over the $100,000 Hinsdale mansion of L. R. Freer. The Freer home is one of the most beautiful in the state and is on the county line road and in Cook county, though Hinsdale is in Du Page. Mr. Sullivan is in pretty good company, and while his home is opposite that of Mr. Washburn's, they live in different counties, as stated above. Mr. Washburn says that Hinsdale is now mourning the loss of Bill Skeels, the 94-year-old newsboy, who has delivered the family papers for a score of years.

Martin Goerger, of Goerger Bros., Arlington Heights, received a letter this week from his brother Albert, who is in partnership with him, from San-Benfeld, Alsace Lorraine, Germany, where he is employed in a bakery. It will be remembered by many that he left for Germany to be married shortly before the European war broke out, and not being an American citizen, was drafted for military service. So far he has not been called upon and is taking charge of his brother-in-law's bakery while he is at the front serving as an officer in the German army.

Wm. F. Schofield, the North State street florist, had a large number of floral pieces for the opening game of baseball at the Federal league park, among which was one representing a baseball diamond and another a large whale, by which name Tinker's boys will be known in the future. Henry Dunn had charge of the designing and did a rattling good job of all the pieces.

Peter Reinberg is cutting heavily in Ophelia and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses which are being grown in large quantities at the Reinberg greenhouses. Felix Reichling reports a good demand for rose and carnation stock and states that new orders are arriving each day. Inquiries for carnations for Mothers' day are being received and remind one that the big day will soon be here.

Frederick C. Bargholz, 3918 North Clark street, left his store, which adjoins his residence, on Monday, April 12, to deposit money in Foreman Brothers' bank and has not been heard from since. He is said to have had $120 in cash and several checks. His brother-in-law, J. Sorenson, has asked the police to look for him.

A. Lange opened a branch store in the Stevens building, 17 North State street, on Saturday, April 10, with A. Hall in charge. The new place is well equipped to handle a large trade and there is no question but what the new venture will be a success.

O. A. Tonner is offering a lavender yellow snapdragon that is about as pretty a variety as one would care to see. In addition to a large supply of snapdragons and other cut flowers she is now receiving regular shipments of yellow and blue irises.

Art. Schutz, of Hammond, Ind., took advantage of the market conditions this week and bought a large quantity of carnations which he sold for 15 cents per dozen. He reports a fine Easter trade with a brisk demand for plants.

Myer & Dramm of Elmhurst are well pleased with the rose Killarney Brilliant and have every reason to be, for the stock that they are cutting now is fine. They now have 40,000 feet of glass all told.

C. V. Swan, a gardener of Glen Ellyn, was killed on Monday evening, April 12, at the Bellwood station of the Aurora, Elgin and Chicago railroad when he was struck by a train.

John Michelsen of the E. C. Amling Co. says that last week was the quietest that he has ever experienced at this period of the year since he has been employed in the local market.

N. P. Miller of the new wholesale firm of Miller & Musser, is well pleased with business since they opened and with the large supply of stock that they are receiving.

Kennicott Bros. Co. installed a new telephone switchboard this week and now have three incoming lines, which permits them to handle the calls to better advantage.

A. M. Pekarek, of the California Floral Co., 3042 West Twenty-sixth street, reports a good Easter trade with plants and cut flowers both in brisk demand.

Harry Conn, of the Englewood Flower Shop, 703 West Sixty-third street, sent a beautiful casket spray to the Weil funeral which was held last week.

Zalinger & Hirsch had a brisk demand for neatly arranged cut flower baskets at Easter at their stand in the rotunda of the Insurance Exchange building.

Sol Garland's home in Des Plaines was completely destroyed by fire on the evening of Saturday, April 10, while the family was away visiting friends.

It is rumored that a new retail store will open in the loop district about May 1. Further particulars later.

Chicago Florists' Club.

At the monthly meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, held at the Hotel Bismarck, April 8, there was a large attendance, President Keimel in the chair. Harmony was the slogan of the evening, the occasion being the union of the two trade organizations, the Cook County Florists' Association and the Chicago Florists' Club. The two bodies were well represented, the officers of both being seated together at the head of the table. The proceedings were strictly formal and provision has been made to celebrate the event with a banquet at some date to be announced later. Chairman Fink of the good-of-the-club committee had provided a fine stereopticon and moving picture show, showing Pacific coast scenes, with a view to stimulating interest in the convention trip to San Francisco next August. The pictures were very good and everyone present seemed to enjoy them.

The routine business included the election of Louis Hoeckner, Crystal Lake, Ill.; Fred Ronsley, 106 South Dearborn street, and John Swenson, 737 Buckingham place, to membership, and the following were nominated for membership: P. M. Palez, Little Rock, Ark.; F. S. Webb, 30 East Randolph

Newport, R. I.

SPRING WEATHER ARRIVES.

We are here enjoying balmy, spring weather, with all signs of winter gone. Some Easter trade echoes are heard that the supply of Easter lilies, violets and single pot hyacinths were not equal to the demand. Good violets sold for $1 per hundred. The general report of the local florists is that the Easter business was very good.

The death of Winfield Scott Sisson, April 10, takes from us a man of sterling qualities, and is a loss to this community. His long association as treasurer of the Weaver Seed Co., his activities in the affairs of the Newport Horticultural Society, and as a dahlia grower, is a loss that will be felt. J. J. B.

HARTFORD, CONN.—The blizzard which played havoc along the Atlantic coast line Easter Sunday and the day preceding interfered greatly with business and deliveries in this city, according to John Coombs. Sales under the circumstances were satisfactory, however, in both plants and cut flowers.
